Variety Sets 25th Anniversary Meet; Recruits Trade Editors for 'PR' Aid

Toronto, June 30.—November 21-23 have been set for the holding in Pittsburgh, Pa., of a Variety Clubs International meeting in celebration of the founding a quarter of a century ago of the organization which, on behalf of the amusement industry, spends $3,000,000 a year on charitable enterprises. Tent No. 1 of Pittsburgh, the birthplace of Variety, is making preparations for the three-day celebration.

Jack Beresin, Variety's chief barker, announced also that a Variety Clubs International publicity and public relations committee made up of editors and publishers of amusement industry trade papers is being formed to help in getting the organization more publicity, especially for the 25th anniversary celebration. A meeting of this committee will be held in New York in September to prepare recommendations for a publicity campaign for the balance of the year.

Kicks on Wall St. Journal Piece May Bring Redress

Spontaneous protests by individual industry members to the Wall Street Journal over what was generally regarded in the trade as unwarranted and injurious emphasis on theatre closings in a national report published by that paper Friday may lead to publication of a second article by the Journal more closely examining the types of theatres being closed and their relative importance to the industry as a whole, it was learned yesterday.

Editorial officials of the Journal told some industry members who protested the article that they were impressed by industry contentions that many of the closings were overdue and that undue emphasis had been given to the closing of others, such as the 3,400-seat Oriental in Chicago which, even in good times, was recognized as a "problem" operation by a succession of Chicago exhibitors who endeavored unsuccessfully to make it pay. Despite the theatre's record, new

A veteran of 30 years in the industry, Boucher helped build K-B to a circuit of eight theatres, and brought many innovations to Washington exhibition. He said his resignation would be effective "sometime next week," and that he and Mrs. Boucher would then take a vacation. His future plans will be announced after his return from the vacation, Boucher said.

Arbitration's '10' to Meet Most of Week

'Touch On' Controversial Topics at First Session

At their first meeting, held yesterday in the Fabian Theatres home office here, the 10 members of the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee "touched on" a number of topics which have been in dispute in connection with efforts to set up an industry system of arbitration.

It was conceded that the group would have to meet at least two or three more days, including today, to complete the analysis of arbitration proposals which the conference itself discontinued June 18 in an atmosphere of friction.

No one at the meeting could predict whether the group actually would be in a position tomorrow or Thursday to set a date for resumption of the exhibition - distribution conference which ended abruptly on June 18.

New Law Gives SSB Statutory Position

WASHINGTON, June 30. — The new controls law gives specific statutory recognition to the Salary Stabilization Board, which controls salaries of executives and also of talent workers in the film industry.

HOLLYWOOD, June 30. — Federal Judge Ernest A. Tolin issued a temporary injunction restraining Wage Earners Committee from picketing Loew's State Theatre, downtown house which WEC has been picketing to discourage management from playing M-G-M pictures.

United Artists Theatres Circuit, operating the house, had petitioned for the injunction on the ground that the WEC action was "secondary picketing."

The special showings, which began last week, will be concluded with four half-hour presentations on Thursday.

'Charley,' 'Robin' Open Big to Pace New York 1st-Runs

Two newcomers, "Where's Charley?" at Radio City Music Hall, and Walt Disney's "Robin Hood" at the Criterion are setting the pace for grosses at New York's first-runs during a week marked by weather that ranged from hot and humid to mild and pleasant.

The Music Hall, which also features a stage presentation, is looking for a big first week's gross of $150,000 after having chalked up $92,000 Thursday through Sunday, described as the best opening four days of any Warner picture to play the theatre.

The initial week of "Story of Robin Hood" at the Criterion, ending to-$48,500 after a recording of $15,250 for a 10-day run of the previous tenant, "Red Planet Mars."

Opening more or less satisfactorily at the Astor was "3 for Bedroom C," with a first week's gross of $17,000 indicated.

Considerably less than spectacular is the $65,000 quoted for the first stanza of "Wait 'Till the Sun Shines, Nellie" and a new ice revue on stage at the Roxy. "We're Not Married" is slated to open at that theatre on July 11.

A moderate $60,000 is seen for the second week, ending today, of "Clash by Night" at the Paramount where singers Les Paul and Mary Ford top a stage bill. The program will hold for one more week.

The Globe, where "Scarlet Angel" is in its second week, and where attendance picked up sharply when the Maxim-Robinson fight pictures supplemented the program, expects a huge $15,200 for the second seven days. "The Lady in the Iron Mask" will take over on Friday.

"Has Anybody Seen My Gal" will open Friday at the Mayfair where the second and final week of "The Winning Team" is mild, with $8,500 looked for. The second inning of "Pat and Mike" is giving the Capital a fair $32,000.

The one-week stand of "I Dream of Jeanie" resulted in a poor $9,000 for the State where "The Washington Story" bows today.

"Walk East on Beacon" is proving to be a sturdier grosser than most hold-overs. The Victoria is looking for $18,000 for the fifth week.

Among the off-broadway houses where hold-overs by and large fare well is the Sutton where the 13th week of "The Man in the White Suit" is expected to bring in $9,800, and the new Normandie, where the 13th week of "Encore" is due to ring up $7,500. The 52nd Street Trans-Lux will open "High Treason" today.

Paschall to Roach

HOLLYWOOD, June 30.—Benton Paschall, former vice-president and West Coast manager of Liberty Broadcasting System, has been named general sales manager for the Roach Studios, it was announced here by Hal E. Roach, president.

Texas Interested in 'Hollywood Fair'

Columbus, June 30.—Texas, the nation's biggest state, bowed to Ohio, the Buckeye State, in a letter from James H. Stewart, executive vice-president and general manager of the Texas State Fair at Dallas, to officials of the Ohio State Fair. Stewart read of the "Hollywood at the Fair" exhibit in Motion Picture Daily and asked for further details.

"This sounds like a very interesting operation," wrote Stewart. "As you perhaps know, we have a very big and active theatre group in Texas and such an activity as you are going to stage at your fair might fit very well into our operations."

Blumberg, Rackmil Returning from Coast

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, and Milton R. Rackmil, president of Decca Records, are expected back here from the Coast at the weekend. Both will attend the annual meeting of Universal stockholders at Wilmington, Del., next Tuesday.

Rackmil, representing Decca's controlling stock interest in Universal, will be elected to the latter's board at the meeting and is scheduled to be elected president, with Blumberg becoming chairman of the board, at the organization meeting of the "U" board this month. The same board meeting, it is reported, will consider dividend action on "U's" common stock. Some financial sources believe that in view of "U's" recent strong earnings statements the stock may be placed on a $2 annual dividend basis again.

HARPER'S BAZAAR for July has a four-page section on Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen," featuring Renee Jeanmarie and Danny Kaye, and from the sublime to the ridiculous, the current Collier's has a full-color piece on "The Voice of the Mule" in which Chill Wills is introduced with Universal's "Francis." . . . The new Look, dated July 15, out today, has a front cover portrait of Arlene Dahl in natural color and a striking color-page from M-G-M on "Lovely to Look At," but the resemblance is purely coincidental. . . . Hedda Hopper tells all about herself in "From Under My Hat" in the current Woman's Home Companion. . . . Redbook's cover for July stars June Allyson and her nice family with another color portrait inside to illustrate her feature story, which remarks that "June Allyson is as simple as a hydrogen bomb."

"High Noon," the title ballad of the United Artists film starring Gary Cooper, is guaranteed one of the strongest record-promotion campaigns of the year, with M-G-M Records and London Records joining Columbia Records in all-out drives to publicize their recordings, according to Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, who arranged the tieups for United Artists. The ballad, which tells the story of the picture, was sung by Tex Ritter in the film. The M-G-M record is sung by Bill Hayes, with all the facilities at its command. London Records features Lita Rosa singing the haunting melody. One of the strongest record tieups of the year has been undertaken by Columbia Records for Frankie Lane's recording of "High Noon," with more than 1,600 disc jockeys getting complimentary copies of the record for their platter-spinning shows. Also shipped to music shops are large cardboard standees of Frankie Lane, "in action."

The intensive Paramount campaign for Leo McCarey's "My Son John," playing in more than 350 key situations, received added impetus with the circulation of reprints of a syndicated column by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of Christian Herald, underscoring the important and dramatic qualities of the film. A special bulletin from Jerry Pickman, Paramount vice-president and director of advertising, called attention of the company's sales staff to the value of the endorsement. . . . Members of two state newspaper publishers associations, in Oregon and California, have added their approval as a result of special previews of United Artists' "Park Row," making a total of more than 20 such groups to add their support of a motion picture in this publicity man's idea of heaven. . . . About the longest press party of record was the 2,200-mile trek of the Highway 66 Association drum-beating for Warner Brothers' "Story of Will Rogers." The highway was temporarily rededicated as the "Will Rogers Highway," and folks were told it was along this route that Rogers found the heart of America.

Florida Woos Film, TV Studios Again

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June 30.—Florida is again actively engaged in wooing the motion picture and television industries.

In a directive to the Florida Improvement Commission, Governor Warren said that priority must be given in presenting Florida's advantages to the big and little producers of motion pictures and television shows.

The governor recalled that Florida's first organized bid for recognition as a film-making center was in 1933 when a constitutional amendment exempting such investors from all property tax was approved. This exemption has since expired but Governor Warren now indicates that if additional tax concessions are necessary to woo substantial segments of the industry to Florida, they could be legislated.

U.S. Producers Plan Nine More Features In U.K. This Season

LONDON, June 30.—A spurt in preparations for American production projects here will bring nine pictures before the cameras in the near future.

Involved in the planning are: Warner's "The Master of Ballantrae," starring Erroll Flynn, in color by Technicolor; Walt Disney's "The Sword and the Rose," also in Technicolor and starring Richard Todd; Sol Lesser's "Black Chiffon," starring Bette Davis, which Columbia may distribute, a 90-minute Coronation Year documentary to be titled "Queen to Queen," and possibly a modernized version of the novel, "Civilian Clothes"; Edward Small's "Khyber Pass" and "The Charge of the Six Hundred," and two features to be made jointly by Monogram and ABPC.

Jack Warner discussed his companys British production plans while here recently. Now in London on the same mission are Lesser, Small and Walter Mirisch of Monogram. Disney is scheduled to arrive here this week from New York.

Discussing recent pronouncements on the trend to cut down on quantitative production and to concentrate on fewer pictures of higher quality, Lesser carried the thesis further. He claims that the day of all mass production of pictures is coming to an end and that in the future, as he sees it, individual producers will make individual pictures.

Lesser estimated that "Kon-Tiki" will gross about $3,000,000 worldwide, having grossed $1,000,000 in the U. S. already.

ates five theatres in West Virginia.

Dipson, who is president of the new 153 company, is understood to be negotiating for other Warner theatres in the Utica-Troy-Albany zone. Dipson declares his company will install big screen TV in practically all its key houses.

More than $175,000 will be spent by the "153 Corporation" on rehabilitating and redecorating the Keeney and the house will be closed for 90 days for this operation. The Diana in Medina also will be completely redecorated and a new air-conditioning system installed.

Smakwitz and WB home office attorney Myles Alben represented the circuit at the closing of both deals in Elmira. Warner had operated in Elmira and Medina since 1930.

Remaining Warner houses in Olean, Hornell and Jamestown will be transferred July 15 to Pittsburgh zone manager Moe Silver, one time Warner head in Albany.

Warner sold the leases on the Babcock and Temple in Wellsville to Max Friedman, long-time upstate buyer and booker for the circuit, last March.

Ten houses in Albany, Troy and Utica will be supervised by Smakwitz from offices here. The Utica, Utica and the American in Troy are dark for the summer.

The status of Ralph Crabil, WB district manager in Elmira was not clarified. A spot for him may be found elsewhere.

Two local employes, Helen Wisper and Betty Herrick, have resigned. Miss Wisper for years with 20th Century-Fox and later with the Perlmutter Booking Service, joined Warner in March as a booker. Miss Herrick is a veteran. A staff of four, Smakwitz, a secretary, booker Larry Lapidus and exploiteer Gerry Atkin will remain.

operators only last week were reported to be negotiating to take it over and reopen it.

Some industry members who protested to the Journal pointed out that the closing of small dry goods stores in many parts of the country could not rightfully be assumed to be a reflection on large and prosperous department stores in the same cities and elsewhere. They contended that the Journal's roundup on small, borderline theatre closings, however, pointedly gave the impression that the same fate awaited other theatres and that actually there were few or no prosperous large circuit operations remaining. The facts, they pointed out, are just the opposite—historically successful circuit and individual theatre operations are not closing up and going out of business.

"Many of the closed houses," one disturbed industry member remarked, "never should have been in business in the first place. Remember all the ex-service men that Bill (W. A.) Scully of Universal put into business in Quonset huts after the last War when he was battling Paramount-Richards and other circuits for higher rentals? Many of the current crop of closings are of that type.

"The traditionally good operators," he continued, "still are going strong—remodeling and re-furnishing their properties, some building new theatres to keep up with population shifts, expanding into the drive-in field and equipping their houses with large screen television. And when they get the product, they never fail to demonstrate there is still an amazing volume of business to be done. The Journal's article is very much in error in failing to report on them. They are the backbone of the industry. Not one of them gets a quote."

Associated Truck Lines, which started a film delivery service outside of Detroit, has announced that any rate approved by the MPSC will be adopted by it.

Associated started a delivery service in March when hearings were being heard by the MPSC regarding the Allied and Butterfield suit against Film Truck.

Arbitration

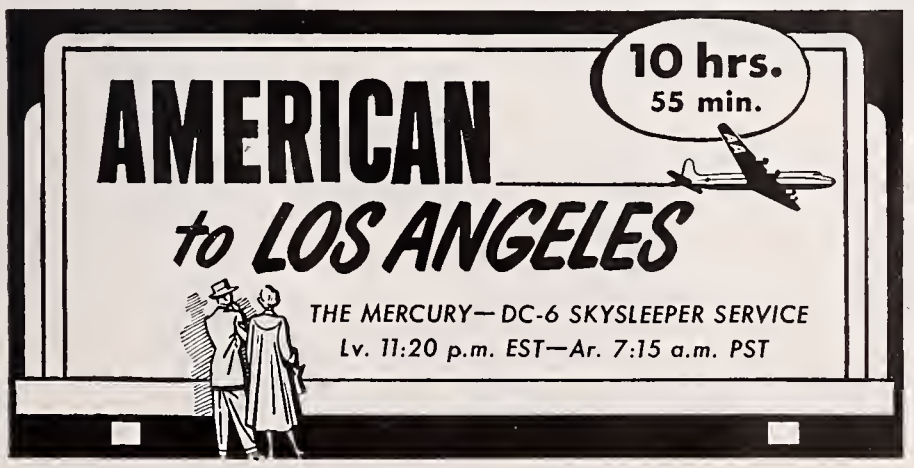
Committeemen queried following yesterday's session acknowledged that it was only of a "preliminary character." One of the committee's duties is to set a date for reconvening the conference.



A representative of distribution said as he left the meeting room yesterday that "we are working in harmony."

The group is continuing the paragraph-by-paragraph analysis of the report which the arbitration drafting committee had submitted to the conference. There was said to be no indication yesterday that the new committee would undertake to draft a report of its own on the proposals the drafting committee was instructed to put on paper.

Present yesterday were the following: from exhibition—Abram F. Myers, Wilbur Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution—Austin Keough, Adolph Schimel, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers. Brind Warns of Tougher Censorship

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Charles A. Brind, Jr., counsel for the New York State film censors, warned in a speech made here that the industry might be in for far tougher state regulation if New York's present censorship statute is declared unconstitutional.

One thing that might be considered, he said, is a state law requiring the licensing of all theatres, with the threat of license revocation for showing objectionable films. Another approach that the state might undertake, he added, would be an attempt to include films which "teach Communism" among the objectionable films.

Delivered at Luncheon

Brind made these statements in an address entitled "Censorship at the Crossroads," delivered to the annual luncheon-meeting of the Motion Picture Council of the District of Columbia.

Other highlights of Brind's speech include:

"It is doubtful whether motion picture code would continue in its present form if the statutes mandating decency were declared unconstitutional. There is great pressure now upon industry to lighten up on its provisions."

More than the usual number of "indecent" films have been submitted for state censorship since the recent Supreme Court decisions in the "Pinky" and "Miracle" cases.

Instead of "contracting censorship, the time has come to extend it" to pictures containing Communist propaganda.

Brind's speech was promptly challenged from the audience by Ken Clark, Motion Picture Association of America information director, who said he thought the "Miracle" decision had laid to rest for all time the Mutual Film case decision upholding pre-censorship, but that he saw now that it hadn't. Clark said the MPAA's stand was that it was "just as wicked, wrong and violative of constitutional rights for a censor to stand at the shoulder of a film producer as at the shoulder of a newspaper editor."

Censor Challenge Ready in 2 Weeks

Washington, June 30.—The Motion Picture Association of America hopes to have ready "within two weeks" a suit challenging the constitutionality of Ohio's newsreel censorship, MPAA information director Kenneth Clark disclosed.

New Mass. Wage Law Easy on Theatres

BOSTON, June 30.—A bill setting up a mandatory 75-cent an hour minimum wage for Massachusetts workers generally, but permitting wage boards to recommend rates as low as 65 cents for some occupations was passed last week.

Theatre ushers and other casual help that now are covered by an existing amusement and recreation occupation order are not covered by the bill. Under the present law there is a 65-cent per hour minimum, but wage boards are permitted to set lower rates in certain industries. State Senator George J. Evans, who offered the amendment exempting theatre ushers, stated that motion picture theatres were getting competition from television and should receive some consideration.

Two months ago the House of Representatives passed a labor-sponsored bill for a flat 75 cents per hour minimum wage but exempting persons receiving tips as part of their pay, apprentices and handicapped workers. It is said that he House has indicated that it will go along with the bill as amended by the Senate in order to avert the stalemate that has blocked it for two years.

Spontaneous protests by individual industry members to the Wall Street Journal over what was generally regarded in the trade as unwarranted and injurious emphasis on theatre closings in a national report published by that paper Friday may lead to publication of a second article by the Journal more closely examining the types of theatres being closed and their relative importance to the industry as a whole, it was learned yesterday.

Editorial officials of the Journal told some industry members who protested the article that they were impressed by industry contentions that many of the closings were overdue and that undue emphasis had been given to the closing of others, such as the 3,400-seat Oriental in Chicago which, even in good times, was recognized as a "problem" operation by a succession of Chicago exhibitors who endeavored unsuccessfully to make it pay. Despite the theatre's record, new

'Touch On' Controversial Topics at First Session

At their first meeting, held yesterday in the Fabian Theatres home office here, the 10 members of the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee "touched on" a number of topics which have been in dispute in connection with efforts to set up an industry system of arbitration.

It was conceded that the group would have to meet at least two or three more days, including today, to complete the analysis of arbitration proposals which the conference itself discontinued June 18 in an atmosphere of friction.

No one at the meeting could predict whether the group actually would be in a position tomorrow or Thursday to set a date for resumption of the exhibition - distribution conference which ended abruptly on June 18.

HOLLYWOOD, June 30. — Federal Judge Ernest A. Tolin issued a temporary injunction restraining Wage Earners Committee from picketing Loew's State Theatre, downtown house which WEC has been picketing to discourage management from playing M-G-M pictures.

'Charley,' 'Robin' Open Big to Pace New York 1st-Runs

Two newcomers, "Where's Charley?" at Radio City Music Hall, and Walt Disney's "Robin Hood" at the Criterion are setting the pace for grosses at New York's first-runs during a week marked by weather that ranged from hot and humid to mild and pleasant.

The Music Hall, which also features a stage presentation, is looking for a big first week's gross of $150,000 after having chalked up $92,000 Thursday through Sunday, described as the best opening four days of any Warner picture to play the theatre.

The initial week of "Story of Robin Hood" at the Criterion, ending to-$48,500 after a recording of $15,250 for a 10-day run of the previous tenant, "Red Planet Mars."

Opening more or less satisfactorily at the Astor was "3 for Bedroom C," with a first week's gross of $17,000 indicated.

Considerably less than spectacular is the $65,000 quoted for the first stanza of "Wait 'Till the Sun Shines, Nellie" and a new ice revue on stage at the Roxy. "We're Not Married" is slated to open at that theatre on July 11.

A moderate $60,000 is seen for the second week, ending today, of "Clash by Night" at the Paramount where singers Les Paul and Mary Ford top a stage bill. The program will hold for one more week.

The Globe, where "Scarlet Angel" is in its second week, and where attendance picked up sharply when the Maxim-Robinson fight pictures supplemented the program, expects a huge $15,200 for the second seven days. "The Lady in the Iron Mask" will take over on Friday.

"Has Anybody Seen My Gal" will open Friday at the Mayfair where the second and final week of "The Winning Team" is mild, with $8,500 looked for. The second inning of "Pat and Mike" is giving the Capital a fair $32,000.

The one-week stand of "I Dream of Jeanie" resulted in a poor $9,000 for the State where "The Washington Story" bows today.

"Walk East on Beacon" is proving to be a sturdier grosser than most hold-overs. The Victoria is looking for $18,000 for the fifth week.

Among the off-broadway houses where hold-overs by and large fare well is the Sutton where the 13th week of "The Man in the White Suit" is expected to bring in $9,800, and the new Normandie, where the 13th week of "Encore" is due to ring up $7,500. The 52nd Street Trans-Lux will open "High Treason" today.

Stewart read of the "Hollywood at the Fair" exhibit in Motion Picture Daily and asked for further details.

"This sounds like a very interesting operation," wrote Stewart. "As you perhaps know, we have a very big and active theatre group in Texas and such an activity as you are going to stage at your fair might fit very well into our operations."

Blumberg, Rackmil Returning from Coast

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, and Milton R. Rackmil, president of Decca Records, are expected back here from the Coast at the weekend. Both will attend the annual meeting of Universal stockholders at Wilmington, Del., next Tuesday.

Rackmil, representing Decca's controlling stock interest in Universal, will be elected to the latter's board at the meeting and is scheduled to be elected president, with Blumberg becoming chairman of the board, at the organization meeting of the "U" board this month. The same board meeting, it is reported, will consider dividend action on "U's" common stock. Some financial sources believe that in view of "U's" recent strong earnings statements the stock may be placed on a $2 annual dividend basis again.

"High Noon," the title ballad of the United Artists film starring Gary Cooper, is guaranteed one of the strongest record-promotion campaigns of the year, with M-G-M Records and London Records joining Columbia Records in all-out drives to publicize their recordings, according to Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, who arranged the tieups for United Artists. The ballad, which tells the story of the picture, was sung by Tex Ritter in the film. The M-G-M record is sung by Bill Hayes, with all the facilities at its command. London Records features Lita Rosa singing the haunting melody. One of the strongest record tieups of the year has been undertaken by Columbia Records for Frankie Lane's recording of "High Noon," with more than 1,600 disc jockeys getting complimentary copies of the record for their platter-spinning shows. Also shipped to music shops are large cardboard standees of Frankie Lane, "in action."

A special bulletin from Jerry Pickman, Paramount vice-president and director of advertising, called attention of the company's sales staff to the value of the endorsement. . . . About the longest press party of record was the 2,200-mile trek of the Highway 66 Association drum-beating for Warner Brothers' "Story of Will Rogers." Florida Woos Film, TV Studios Again

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June 30.—Florida is again actively engaged in wooing the motion picture and television industries.

In a directive to the Florida Improvement Commission, Governor Warren said that priority must be given in presenting Florida's advantages to the big and little producers of motion pictures and television shows.

The governor recalled that Florida's first organized bid for recognition as a film-making center was in 1933 when a constitutional amendment exempting such investors from all property tax was approved. This exemption has since expired but Governor Warren now indicates that if additional tax concessions are necessary to woo substantial segments of the industry to Florida, they could be legislated.

U.S. Producers Plan Nine More Features In U.K. This Season

LONDON, June 30.—A spurt in preparations for American production projects here will bring nine pictures before the cameras in the near future.

Involved in the planning are: Warner's "The Master of Ballantrae," starring Erroll Flynn, in color by Technicolor; Walt Disney's "The Sword and the Rose," also in Technicolor and starring Richard Todd; Sol Lesser's "Black Chiffon," starring Bette Davis, which Columbia may distribute, a 90-minute Coronation Year documentary to be titled "Queen to Queen," and possibly a modernized version of the novel, "Civilian Clothes"; Edward Small's "Khyber Pass" and "The Charge of the Six Hundred," and two features to be made jointly by Monogram and ABPC.

Jack Warner discussed his companys British production plans while here recently. Now in London on the same mission are Lesser, Small and Walter Mirisch of Monogram. Disney is scheduled to arrive here this week from New York.

Discussing recent pronouncements on the trend to cut down on quantitative production and to concentrate on fewer pictures of higher quality, Lesser carried the thesis further. He claims that the day of all mass production of pictures is coming to an end and that in the future, as he sees it, individual producers will make individual pictures.

Lesser estimated that "Kon-Tiki" will gross about $3,000,000 worldwide, having grossed $1,000,000 in the U. S. already.

WB Sells 5

ates five theatres in West Virginia.

Dipson, who is president of the new 153 company, is understood to be negotiating for other Warner theatres in the Utica-Troy-Albany zone. Dipson declares his company will install big screen TV in practically all its key houses.

More than $175,000 will be spent by the "153 Corporation" on rehabilitating and redecorating the Keeney and the house will be closed for 90 days for this operation. The Diana in Medina also will be completely redecorated and a new air-conditioning system installed.

Smakwitz and WB home office attorney Myles Alben represented the circuit at the closing of both deals in Elmira. Warner had operated in Elmira and Medina since 1930.

Remaining Warner houses in Olean, Hornell and Jamestown will be transferred July 15 to Pittsburgh zone manager Moe Silver, one time Warner head in Albany.

Warner sold the leases on the Babcock and Temple in Wellsville to Max Friedman, long-time upstate buyer and booker for the circuit, last March.

Ten houses in Albany, Troy and Utica will be supervised by Smakwitz from offices here. The Utica, Utica and the American in Troy are dark for the summer.

The status of Ralph Crabil, WB district manager in Elmira was not clarified. A spot for him may be found elsewhere.

Two local employes, Helen Wisper and Betty Herrick, have resigned. Miss Wisper for years with 20th Century-Fox and later with the Perlmutter Booking Service, joined Warner in March as a booker. operators only last week were reported to be negotiating to take it over and reopen it.

Some industry members who protested to the Journal pointed out that the closing of small dry goods stores in many parts of the country could not rightfully be assumed to be a reflection on large and prosperous department stores in the same cities and elsewhere. They contended that the Journal's roundup on small, borderline theatre closings, however, pointedly gave the impression that the same fate awaited other theatres and that actually there were few or no prosperous large circuit operations remaining. The facts, they pointed out, are just the opposite—historically successful circuit and individual theatre operations are not closing up and going out of business.

"Many of the closed houses," one disturbed industry member remarked, "never should have been in business in the first place. Remember all the ex-service men that Bill (W. A.) Scully of Universal put into business in Quonset huts after the last War when he was battling Paramount-Richards and other circuits for higher rentals? Many of the current crop of closings are of that type.

"The traditionally good operators," he continued, "still are going strong—remodeling and re-furnishing their properties, some building new theatres to keep up with population shifts, expanding into the drive-in field and equipping their houses with large screen television. And when they get the product, they never fail to demonstrate there is still an amazing volume of business to be done. The Journal's article is very much in error in failing to report on them. They are the backbone of the industry. Not one of them gets a quote."

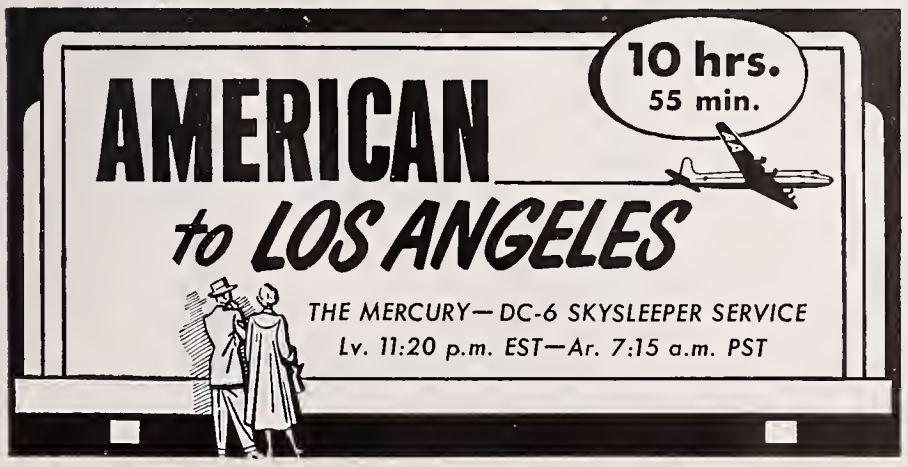
Committeemen queried following yesterday's session acknowledged that it was only of a "preliminary character." One of the committee's duties is to set a date for reconvening the conference.



A representative of distribution said as he left the meeting room yesterday that "we are working in harmony."

The group is continuing the paragraph-by-paragraph analysis of the report which the arbitration drafting committee had submitted to the conference. There was said to be no indication yesterday that the new committee would undertake to draft a report of its own on the proposals the drafting committee was instructed to put on paper.

Present yesterday were the following: from exhibition—Abram F. Myers, Wilbur Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution—Austin Keough, Adolph Schimel, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers. On hand in addition to these regular members of the committee were Ralph Hetzel, Jr., vice-president of the Motion Picture Association of America, and Henderson M. Brind Warns of Tougher Censorship

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Charles A. Brind, Jr., counsel for the New York State film censors, warned in a speech made here that the industry might be in for far tougher state regulation if New York's present censorship statuate is declared unconstitutional.

One thing that might be considered, he said, is a state law requiring the licensing of all theatres, with the threat of license revocation for showing objectionable films. Another approach that the state might undertake, he added, would be an attempt to include films which "teach Communism" among the objectionable films.

Delivered at Luncheon

Brind made these statements in an address entitled "Censorship at the Crossroads," delivered to the annual luncheon-meeting of the Motion Picture Council of the District of Columbia.

Other highlights of Brind's speech include:

"It is doubtful whether motion picture code would continue in its present form if the statutes mandating decency were declared unconstitutional. There is great pressure now upon industry to lighten up on its provisions."

More than the usual number of "indecent" films have been submitted for state censorship since the recent Supreme Court decisions in the "Pinky" and "Miracle" cases.

Instead of "contracting censorship, the time has come to extend it" to pictures containing Communist propaganda.

Brind's speech was promptly challenged from the audience by Ken Clark, Motion Picture Association of America information director, who said he thought the "Miracle" decision had laid to rest for all time the Mutual Film case decision upholding pre-censorship, but that he saw now that it hadn't. Clark said the MPAA's stand was that it was "just as wicked, wrong and violative of constitutional rights for a censor to stand at the shoulder of a film producer as at the shoulder of a newspaper editor."

Censor Challenge Ready in 2 Weeks

Washington, June 30.—The Motion Picture Association of America hopes to have ready "within two weeks" a suit challenging the constitutionality of Ohio's newsreel censorship, MPAA information director Kenneth Clark disclosed.

New Mass. Wage Law Easy on Theatres

BOSTON, June 30.—A bill setting up a mandatory 75-cent an hour minimum wage for Massachusetts workers generally, but permitting wage boards to recommend rates as low as 65 cents for some occupations was passed last week.

Theatre ushers and other casual help that now are covered by an existing amusement and recreation occupation order are not covered by the bill. Under the present law there is a 65-cent per hour minimum, but wage boards are permitted to set lower rates in certain industries. State Senator George J. Evans, who offered the amendment exempting theatre ushers, stated that motion picture theatres were getting competition from television and should receive some consideration.

Two months ago the House of Representatives passed a labor-sponsored bill for a flat 75 cents per hour minimum wage but exempting persons receiving tips as part of their pay, apprentices and handicapped workers. It is said that he House has indicated that it will go along with the bill as amended by the Senate in order to avert the stalemate that has blocked it for two years.

Progress Slow In New Talks On Arbitration

Continuations Unit May Adjourn Meetings Today

While the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee at its meetings here so far this week is proving to be less unwieldly than the full conference was in analyzing and amending the Drafting Committee's blueprint for a system of arbitration, indications following the Continuations session yesterday were that little genuine headway had been made toward producing a universally acceptable document.

Another meeting of the Continuations group of 10, the third in as many days, will be held today at the Fabian Theatres home office. Prior to the opening of the session at 10 A.M., exhibition members of the committee will gather at breakfast in the Hotel Astor to consult on a number of points which will be taken up today.

A strong possibility existed when the meeting ended yesterday that the committee would adjourn this evening

Des Moines, July 1.—When business improves nowadays, the signs are to be found in smaller-sized tears on exhibitors' cheeks, says Charles Jones, secretary of Allied of Iowa-Nebraska and Mid-Central, in his current bulletin to members.

Here is his report on an improvement in the state of the theatre business in this territory: "Things have picked up quite some considerable over the April lows. Have talked to a few up this way and their tears seem to be a little more the size of peas than the walnut-sized April lachrymations.

"Actually, the weather has turned out good, the corn looks good and the attitude of the patron is much better than it was in the spring. We have a sneaking suspicion that economic trends have much more to do with this business than we credit them with."

Spencer Tracy Named 1st Honorary President of Boys' Town Alumni

Spencer Tracy was elected the first honorary president of the Boys Town National Alumni Association at its first meeting held at Boys Town, Omaha, this week, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced here yesterday.

At the same meeting, Tony Villone was elected its active president.

Back in 1938, Tony was a member of Boys Town and met Tracy who was starring as Father Flanagan in M-G-M's "Boys Town." The two became friends and together with Dore Schary, the writer of the picture, were a close knit trio—so close that following his graduation Tony went to Hollywood to work in the studio art department, of which he has since become an important part, M-G-M reported.

The star, the boy, and Schary, now head of production at M-G-M, are still the pals they were at Boys Town 14 years ago.

cause of his work with the industry arbitration conference.

Also mentioned has been Maurice Bergman of Universal, who also would be prevented from serving by pressure of other duties. Paul Short of National Screen Service, Dallas, an official of Texas COMPO, is another whose name is being mentioned. Additional names are sure to be introduced at next week's meetings of the campaign directors.

Preliminary Work Advances

Preliminary organization work for the industry's campaign is being advanced daily by COMPO personnel here under the direction of Robert Coyne, special counsel, and Charles E. McCarthy, director of information. Policy matters, basic campaign strategy and instructions are expected to be well in hand for transmission to all parts of the country as soon as the campaign directors complete their national organization.

Designation of regional and local campaign drectors, constituting the organizational framework, may be completed at next week's sessions, it is believed.

COMPO Warned

Wall Street Journal had advised COMPO officials that the survey was in progress and that, from the tenor of the questions being asked, it appeared to the exhibitors that the article in preparation would be incomplete, erroneously interpreted or wrongly emphasized.

Acting on information, COMPO officials urged that industry counsel on the article in preparation be sought or that publication be withheld until an accurately interpretative article could be prepared. The Wall Street Journal ignored the requests and published its misleading roundup of theatre closings last Friday, widely regarded in the industry as unfair and injurious.

Compo Survival

ago was its lack of a "sufficiently specific" program. "The vague term public relations," he said, has none of the magic for unifying the industry behind COMPO that is suggested by the material reward inherent in a fight for elimination of the tax.

Gratification was expressed by Mayer over the selection of Al Lichtman, Trueman Rembusch and Samuel Pinanski as the committee which will direct COMPO's affairs until an election of officers can be held, possibly not sooner than next February. Asked if he intended to assist with the anti-tax campaign or other COMPO projects, Mayer replied that he "always will be at COMPO's disposal."

Mayer found theatre business to be "excellent" in England, France and Italy, the countries he visited. He said several deals for the importation of product from these countries are being worked out by his distribution firm, Mayer-Kingsley, Inc., in consequence of the trip.

Mayer had at hand yesterday the final page proofs of his new book about the industry, "Merely Colossal," which Simon & Schuster will publish in the fall.

'Clash' Grosses Are Strong in 6 Cities

Wald-Krasna's "Clash by Night" is tallying top grosses in many cities, according to RKO Radio, distributor.

At the Orpheum in Denver it was held over after an $11,090 first week. It also holds over for a second week at the Brandeis, Omaha, after $5,287 in the first. At the St. Louis in Missouri it did better than $8,700 in the first three days. Other first weeks include $6,644 at Towne, Baltimore; $9,700 at Orpheum, Seattle, and $6,482 at Centre, Salt Lake City. It goes into the third week at the Paramount New York tomorrow after drawing $74,650 the first week.

for a week or more before completing its work or setting a date for resumption of the industry conference which went into recess on June 18 when a stalemate arose over the acceptability of several points in the Drafting Committee's report.

This possibility hinged on two factors: the committee's progress on the report has not been fast, and one of its members, Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, was scheduled to depart this evening for Chicago to join in the Republican National Convention activities.

On the other hand, committee members declined to concede that they might not finish their task by today or tomorrow. Although the group presumably could continue without Myers' being present, it was regarded as unlikely that it would want to.

When asked if the committee, which consists of five representatives each from exhibition and distribution, appeared to be on the way toward compromising the differences over bidding and other points that brought about the conference impasse, a spokesman for the group said the word "compromise" is not appropriate for reference to the committee's activity. He said the 10 were tackling the job with "tenacity," a word he employed several times in describing the effort being made.

Einfeld conducted the discussions aided by Fritz Micucci, 20th's manager for Italy, during which distribution personnel of the company's Italian organization and leading exhibitors took part.

The importance of the local Joint Defense Appeal drive was stressed at an industry luncheon at the Hotel Astor here yesterday. Speakers included Leon Goldberg, Ed Fabian, Harry Brandt and Irving Engel.

Trailer Traces the History of Universal

"From Then Till Now," a special one-reel film recounting the 40-year history of Universal Pictures, is being made available to exhibitors this week as part of the company's campaign on its 40th anniversary film, "The World In His Arms," Technicolor production starring Gregory Peck and Ann Blyth.

The short opens with newsreel clips from the turn of the Century, contains scenes from early Universal pictures, a picture in the making on the studio lot in 1918 and builds to a climax with scenes from "World in His Arms." The subject is being made available to exhibitors as an advance trailer for "The World in His Arms." It was written and supervised by Bob Faber.

Tele-Pictures signed an agreement on April 1, 1951 with the AFM, and at the same time contracted with the trustee of the music Performance Trust Fund to pay a five per cent royalty on films carrying music sound tracks and shown for television broadcast. "In addition, Tele-Pictures agreed that in making available to television music-scored movies, originally produced for theatre showing, it would make a new music track, using the same number of musicians employed in the making of the original track for theatre use," it was stated.

At the Federation's office it was pointed out that the Lippert company had been the first motion picture producer to accept the union's royalty contract for filmed television sound track use. Under the agreement the trust fund will provide "live" music for worthy causes and events at no cost to the listeners, the AFM added.

Television--Radio

Comment and Opinion

INFORMALITY was the keynote and Edward R. Murrow again proved his ingenuity as a television reporter Sunday when he presented a filmed interview with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower on CBS-TV's "See It Now" show. It was the kind of program that makes politics on TV both dramatic and enlightening.

Murrow's expert handling of the questioning, his relaxed approach and the excellence of the photography combined to give viewers an intimate closeup of the Eisenhower personality. The interview produced many good and useful quotes, but more important still, it caught candidate Eisenhower in a variety of moods and situations with a minimum of staging.

"See It Now," the Alcoa-sponsored TV document, has maintained consistently high standards from the very start. The second half of last Sunday's show was a filmed account of a mock air attack on New York and its factual and skillful coverage packed a dramatic punch.

Self-regulation and not government controls must guide radio and TV in setting and maintaining moral standards for broadcasts and telecasts, Harold E. Fellows, president of the NARTB, told a Congressional sub-committee investigating offensive programming last week. Speaking of the radio and TV code, Fellows declared, "we have produced no miracles overnight, but the evidence of tangible progress . . . is very gratifying."

Whether Americans in a hundred years from now will still be listening to radio is questionable, but ABC apparently banks on the longevity of the medium in its radio presentation of "Time Capsule." Arthur van Horn is the narrator of the series which is designed to enlighten citizens of 2052 on the "spirit and flavor" of our day. "Time Capsule" leans heavily on the arts and their practitioners. It's a lively show with a nice twist.

If WNBC and WNBT, NBC's flagship stations in New York City, today command a vast and appreciative audience, the credit must go largely to restless, imaginative Ted Cott, NBC vice-president and general manager of these key outlets. With a fine sense for the "different" in radio and TV entertainment, Cott has been responsible for a string of outstanding public service and educational programs which have brought credit to himself and to the industry. This year, on WNBT, he originated the provocative "Inside Our Schools" series, the charming "Through the Enchanted Gate" children's art education programs, "It's a Problem," etc. On radio, he set the industry pace again when he instituted WNBC's all-night classical music program. Cott joined NBC in 1950, having started his radio career at the age of 16 on the staff of New York City's WNYC. In 1939 he joined CBS and in 1944 moved over to WNEW as director of programming. Versatile and ever on the prowl for new ideas, Cott has written books and taught radio writing and directing.

Ted Cott

As a replacement for the "I Love Lucy" show on CBS-TV Monday nights, "My Little Margie" has the difficult task of following in the footsteps of TV's most popular program. Unfortunately, producer Hal Roach, Jr., hasn't outdone himself with this filmed series which stars Charles Farrell and Gale Storm. The situation comedy is hackneyed and performances are not up to par. Director Hal Yates seems unable to overcome the show's static quality and Miss Storm's characterization is void of charm or warmth, which doesn't help any.

"Information Please" made its TV debut Sunday over CBS-TV and while the show retains its appeal, it was not an unqualified success. There were some nice touches of humor, but the program still has one foot in radio. Clifton Fadiman was on hand again as the genial master-of-ceremonies, and so were Franklin P. Adams and John Kieran. James Michener was a somewhat unrelaxed guest. A little more visual appeal could improve the show a great deal. It certainly has the stuff to make it top TV entertainment.

'Ned Depinet Sales Drive' Completed

RKO Radio's "Ned E. Depinet 1952 Sales Drive" concluded this week, and members of the drive committee have begun checking to determine winners.

The drive was for 27-weeks. Leaders at the end of the 26th week were Sioux Falls, New Orleans, Portland and Dallas. In Canada, top exchanges were Montreal, Winnipeg and Toronto. Among the districts, leaders were Canadian, Southeastern and Southwestern.

Skiatron Deal Points To Pay TV Test

Skiatron Electronics and Television Corp. has further cleared the way for the formal test of its Subscriber-Vision pay-as-you-see television system here later this year by entering into a joint working agreement with Hanovia Chemical and Manufacturing Co. of Newark, a unit of the Engelhard Industries, Skiatron president Arthur Levey reports.

Gives Company Facilities

Pointing out that Skiatron has concentrated its technical activities this past year on its pay-as-you-see system, Levey said that the agreement gives the company facilities to produce the components for the subscription system, as well as to carry on extensive research and development of products under Skiatron patents not yet ready for commercial markets.

CBS Anticipates Mass. Transmitter

BOSTON, July 1.—The Columbia Broadcasting System has taken an option on eight acres of land in Natick, Mass., on which would be built a television transmission station. Taking the option is in anticipation of new channels to be assigned to the Boston area. The project is also contingent on the Natick Board of Appeals giving the owner of the land a permit to build.

Pincuses to Make Films

Norman and Irving Pincus, producers of "Ellery Queen," "Mr. I. Magination" and "Authors League Theatre," have formed a television film production unit. Norman Pincus will leave for the Coast shortly to complete arrangements for the new setup, including acquisition of a studio and key personnel.

Sen. Nixon Praises 'Walk East,' Murphy

WASHINGTON, July 1. — Senator Richard Nixon (R., Calif.), has included in the Congressional Record a long statement in praise of Louis de Rochemont's "Walk East on Beacon" and of the picture's star, George Murphy.

Nixon lauded the film for "dramatically portraying the FBI's never-ending battle against the intrigue of Soviet espionage." He said it was particularly appropriate that Murphy star in the film because Murphy "has carried on a long, unrelenting and effective fight against Communism in the film capital." While Murphy was president of the Screen Actors Guild, "he was aware of the attempts of anti-American forces to subvert the motion picture industry and turn it into a mill for the dissemination of Red propaganda," Nixon declared. "His group took effective countermeasures. They studied Communist publications in order to become acquainted with party terminology. They learned to recognize the party line, and got to know the tricks which the Communists employed in their attempts to control meetings. Knowing those tricks was the key to combating them."

Nixon included various newspaper articles and editorials endorsing the picture.

Same Show in Every House, Fan Gripes

CHICAGO, July 1. — Mae Tinee, Chicago Tribune film critic, quotes a letter from a movie fan in her column of Sunday, June 29. "Dear Mae Tinee," the letter reads, "Can you do something about all the theatres showing the same feature at the same time? I had one of my few urges to go to the movies, but could find nothing at the better second run houses but a film I had already seen. I think the theatre owners are making a mistake."

Mae Tinee answers the letter, saying "Judging from the number of letters containing the same complaint, I'm inclined to agree that such booking is not profitable, but I have been unable to obtain any satisfactory explanation for the practice. When a new film is booked in such fashion, it is generally for the purpose of quick return for the money expended. The process was once airily described to me by a bright young press agent as 'saturation penetration.' I agree with the 'saturation' part of it."

Crescent Gets Tax Cut

NASHVILLE, July 1.—The City Board of Equalization has granted the Crescent Amusement Co. reduction in the tax valuation of the new Tennessee Theatre from $1,225,000 to $1,000,000 and on the Princess Theatre from $600,000 to $425,000. Headquarters of Crescent are in the Princess Theatre Building.

N. O. In Blood Drive

NEW ORLEANS, July 1.—The American Red Cross Blood Bank program is richer by over 100 pints given by the film industry in New Orleans. Co-chairmaned by Henry Plitt and Billy Briant, the Red Cross set up a fully equipped unit in the 20th Century-Fox exchange, with all the firms participating by giving employes time off.

'Hall' Gets Ready For New Prosperity

To accommodate holiday audiences, New York's Radio City Music Hall has scheduled extra performances of "Where's Charley?", starring Ray Bolger, and its stage spectacle on the Fourth of July, with the doors opening at 8:30 a.m. during the weekend holidays.

Selling Away from Cincinnati 1st-Runs

CINCINNATI, July 1.—With the temporary closing of the Capitol and Keith's theatres here, product is being sold away from first-runs, the initial booking being 20th Century-Fox's, "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie," currently playing the suburban Twin Drive-in, a unit of the Reuben Shor circuit.

At Jackson, O., Paramount has sold 14 first-runs to the Town and Country Drive-in, with the proviso that the product has not been and will not be shown at any regular theatres there until after the drive-in runs.

Two Theatres Sold, Being Converted

ALBANY, July 1.—Neil Hellman has sold the Palace, Troy neighborhood house, to the Papermakers Union for use as a combined bowling center and union office building. The Palace ha been dark since April, when it was damaged by fire.

The Colonial, Manchester, Vt., served out of Albany exchanges, has been sold to Mrs. Helen Hadley and her father, Charles Orr, who will convert it to commercial purposes. The house had been operating weekends only. Mrs. Hadley also operates the Playhouse in Manchester.

Philippine Grosses Off, Commerce Says

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Gross receipts in theatres in the Philippines are expected to be off sharply this year, the Commerce Department said. Film chief Nathan D. Golden cited high living costs and heavy unemployment as reasons. Gross receipts in 1951, he said, were about 10 per cent above those for 1950, with U. S. films grossing about $15,000,000. Golden said the popularity of Philippine-produced Tagalog films continues to increase.

Plan Production of Mexican Color Films

MEXICO CITY, July 1.—Regular production in Mexico of color pictures is being arranged by the trade's own bank, the semi-official Banco Nacional Cinematografico, announced its director general, Eduardo Vidal Cruz. The bank, he added, is accumulating a fund, in dollars, to establish color laboratories there. Plans are being worked out with producers.

Harris Drops Ken Hoel

PITTSBUGH, Pa., July 1.—After 25 years of service, publicity director Ken Hoel and the Harris Amusement Co. have severed connections. Also dropped from the Harris payroll in the shakeup was artist George Marlier.

Canadian Product Income Up Sharply

OTTAWA, July 1.—Income from Canadian motion pictures exclusive of the output of the National Film Board of Canada, increased nearly two and a half times from 1941 to 1951, according to a survey of Canada's motion picture industry by the government.

An index of gross revenues of film producing companies reporting to the government increased in the 10 years from the base of 100 in 1941 to 245.7 in 1951. The index rose in each successive year of the war years to a peak of 158.1 for 1945, dropped to 140.6 for 1946, then rose to 159.6 for 1947 and 168.9 for 1948, climbing sharply to 207.6 for 1949 and more gradually to 213.5 for 1950, rising sharply again to the figure of 245.7 for 1951.

The government reports exports of films dropped to $467,000 in May against $609,000 last year in the same month and declined to $1,972,000 in the first five months, against $2,373,000 a year ago.

Progress Slow In New Talks On Arbitration

Continuations Unit May Adjourn Meetings Today

While the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee at its meetings here so far this week is proving to be less unwieldly than the full conference was in analyzing and amending the Drafting Committee's blueprint for a system of arbitration, indications following the Continuations session yesterday were that little genuine headway had been made toward producing a universally acceptable document.

Another meeting of the Continuations group of 10, the third in as many days, will be held today at the Fabian Theatres home office. Prior to the opening of the session at 10 A.M., exhibition members of the committee will gather at breakfast in the Hotel Astor to consult on a number of points which will be taken up today.

A strong possibility existed when the meeting ended yesterday that the committee would adjourn this evening

The rooms which will be unloaded were used primarily for storage purposes and no longer are needed.

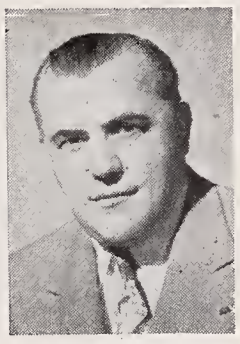
WASHINGTON, July 1.—The Federal Communications Commission today began processing close to 400 applications for new television stations.

There's a chance that some of the applications might be approved by the end of the month.



When the Commission lifted the television "freeze" back in March, it said it would begin processing applications on July 1. As of three o'clock today, there were 379 new or amended applications on file, and more were coming in.

First priority is being given to areas which have never had TV stations or which are going to pioneer in the use of the new UHF band. Within those

Tax Campaign Puts Compo on Survival Road, Mayer Says

The new industry drive for repeal of the 20 per cent Federal admission tax is a project into which the Council of Motion Picture Organizations can "sink its teeth," to the extent that COMPO now has reason for surviving and thriving, Arthur L. Mayer, former COMPO executive vice-president, declared here yesterday following his return from a tour of Europe.

The display on the Technicolor production, part of a month-long out-of-doors pre-selling effort, is designed to capture maximum public attention during the peak summer driving season. Going into effect to give exhibitors a minimum of 26 advance and 5 post-opening days of billboard play in all situations, the "What Price Glory" sheets will provide space for incorporating local playdate credits. Openings of the picture, wherever possible, will be made to synchronize with the 31-day posting plan.

Business Better in Corn Belt; Exhibitor Tears, Once Walnut-Sized, Now Pea Size

Des Moines, July 1.—When business improves nowadays, the signs are to be found in smaller-sized tears on exhibitors' cheeks, says Charles Jones, secretary of Allied of Iowa-Nebraska and Mid-Central, in his current bulletin to members.

Here is his report on an improvement in the state of the theatre business in this territory: "Things have picked up quite some considerable over the April lows. Have talked to a few up this way and their tears seem to be a little more the size of peas than the walnut-sized April lachrymations.

"Actually, the weather has turned out good, the corn looks good and the attitude of the patron is much better than it was in the spring. We have a sneaking suspicion that economic trends have much more to do with this business than we credit them with."

Spencer Tracy Named 1st Honorary President of Boys' Town Alumni

Spencer Tracy was elected the first honorary president of the Boys Town National Alumni Association at its first meeting held at Boys Town, Omaha, this week, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced here yesterday.

At the same meeting, Tony Villone was elected its active president.

Back in 1938, Tony was a member of Boys Town and met Tracy who was starring as Father Flanagan in M-G-M's "Boys Town." The two became friends and together with Dore Schary, the writer of the picture, were a close knit trio—so close that following his graduation Tony went to Hollywood to work in the studio art department, of which he has since become an important part, M-G-M reported.

The star, the boy, and Schary, now head of production at M-G-M, are still the pals they were at Boys Town 14 years ago.

cause of his work with the industry arbitration conference.

Also mentioned has been Maurice Bergman of Universal, who also would be prevented from serving by pressure of other duties. Paul Short of National Screen Service, Dallas, an official of Texas COMPO, is another whose name is being mentioned. Additional names are sure to be introduced at next week's meetings of the campaign directors.

Preliminary Work Advances

Preliminary organization work for the industry's campaign is being advanced daily by COMPO personnel here under the direction of Robert Coyne, special counsel, and Charles E. McCarthy, director of information. Policy matters, basic campaign strategy and instructions are expected to be well in hand for transmission to all parts of the country as soon as the campaign directors complete their national organization.

Designation of regional and local campaign drectors, constituting the organizational framework, may be completed at next week's sessions, it is believed.

Wall Street Journal had advised COMPO officials that the survey was in progress and that, from the tenor of the questions being asked, it appeared to the exhibitors that the article in preparation would be incomplete, erroneously interpreted or wrongly emphasized.

Acting on information, COMPO officials urged that industry counsel on the article in preparation be sought or that publication be withheld until an accurately interpretative article could be prepared. The Wall Street Journal ignored the requests and published its misleading roundup of theatre closings last Friday, widely regarded in the industry as unfair and injurious.

TOA's executive director, Gael Sullivan, is on leave of absence to manage the campaign for Presidential aspirant Estes Kefauver. Dick Pitts is serving as acting executive director.

ago was its lack of a "sufficiently specific" program. "The vague term public relations," he said, has none of the magic for unifying the industry behind COMPO that is suggested by the material reward inherent in a fight for elimination of the tax.

Gratification was expressed by Mayer over the selection of Al Lichtman, Trueman Rembusch and Samuel Pinanski as the committee which will direct COMPO's affairs until an election of officers can be held, possibly not sooner than next February. Asked if he intended to assist with the anti-tax campaign or other COMPO projects, Mayer replied that he "always will be at COMPO's disposal."

Mayer found theatre business to be "excellent" in England, France and Italy, the countries he visited. He said several deals for the importation of product from these countries are being worked out by his distribution firm, Mayer-Kingsley, Inc., in consequence of the trip.

Mayer had at hand yesterday the final page proofs of his new book about the industry, "Merely Colossal," which Simon & Schuster will publish in the fall.

'Clash' Grosses Are Strong in 6 Cities

Wald-Krasna's "Clash by Night" is tallying top grosses in many cities, according to RKO Radio, distributor.

At the Orpheum in Denver it was held over after an $11,090 first week. It also holds over for a second week at the Brandeis, Omaha, after $5,287 in the first. At the St. Louis in Missouri it did better than $8,700 in the first three days. Other first weeks include $6,644 at Towne, Baltimore; $9,700 at Orpheum, Seattle, and $6,482 at Centre, Salt Lake City. It goes into the third week at the Paramount New York tomorrow after drawing $74,650 the first week.

20-Cent Price Cut

CINCINNATI, July 1.—The Palace Theatre, independent downtown run in Hamilton, playing double features, has made a 20-cent price reduction good two days each week.

for a week or more before completing its work or setting a date for resumption of the industry conference which went into recess on June 18 when a stalemate arose over the acceptability of several points in the Drafting Committee's report.

This possibility hinged on two factors: the committee's progress on the report has not been fast, and one of its members, Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, was scheduled to depart this evening for Chicago to join in the Republican National Convention activities.

On the other hand, committee members declined to concede that they might not finish their task by today or tomorrow. Although the group presumably could continue without Myers' being present, it was regarded as unlikely that it would want to.

When asked if the committee, which consists of five representatives each from exhibition and distribution, appeared to be on the way toward compromising the differences over bidding and other points that brought about the conference impasse, a spokesman for the group said the word "compromise" is not appropriate for reference to the committee's activity. He said the 10 were tackling the job with "tenacity," a word he employed several times in describing the effort being made.

Einfeld Concludes

in November, the company reported here yesterday.

Einfeld conducted the discussions aided by Fritz Micucci, 20th's manager for Italy, during which distribution personnel of the company's Italian organization and leading exhibitors took part.

Einfeld will leave tomorrow for Central Europe where he is scheduled to hold similar sessions in Munich over the weekend before continuing on to Switzerland, Holland and France.

Defense Appeal Luncheon

The importance of the local Joint Defense Appeal drive was stressed at an industry luncheon at the Hotel Astor here yesterday. Speakers included Leon Goldberg, Ed Fabian, Harry Brandt and Irving Engel.

Trailer Traces the History of Universal

"From Then Till Now," a special one-reel film recounting the 40-year history of Universal Pictures, is being made available to exhibitors this week as part of the company's campaign on its 40th anniversary film, "The World In His Arms," Technicolor production starring Gregory Peck and Ann Blyth.

The short opens with newsreel clips from the turn of the Century, contains scenes from early Universal pictures, a picture in the making on the studio lot in 1918 and builds to a climax with scenes from "World in His Arms." The subject is being made available to exhibitors as an advance trailer for "The World in His Arms." It was written and supervised by Bob Faber.

Tele-Pictures signed an agreement on April 1, 1951 with the AFM, and at the same time contracted with the trustee of the music Performance Trust Fund to pay a five per cent royalty on films carrying music sound tracks and shown for television broadcast. "In addition, Tele-Pictures agreed that in making available to television music-scored movies, originally produced for theatre showing, it would make a new music track, using the same number of musicians employed in the making of the original track for theatre use," it was stated.

At the Federation's office it was pointed out that the Lippert company had been the first motion picture producer to accept the union's royalty contract for filmed television sound track use. Under the agreement the trust fund will provide "live" music for worthy causes and events at no cost to the listeners, the AFM added.

Even after an applicant gets his request approved, considerable time would have to elapse before the station was actually built and on the air.

Comment and Opinion

INFORMALITY was the keynote and Edward R. Murrow again proved his ingenuity as a television reporter Sunday when he presented a filmed interview with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower on CBS-TV's "See It Now" show. It was the kind of program that makes politics on TV both dramatic and enlightening.

Murrow's expert handling of the questioning, his relaxed approach and the excellence of the photography combined to give viewers an intimate closeup of the Eisenhower personality. The interview produced many good and useful quotes, but more important still, it caught candidate Eisenhower in a variety of moods and situations with a minimum of staging.

"See It Now," the Alcoa-sponsored TV document, has maintained consistently high standards from the very start. The second half of last Sunday's show was a filmed account of a mock air attack on New York and its factual and skillful coverage packed a dramatic punch.

Self-regulation and not government controls must guide radio and TV in setting and maintaining moral standards for broadcasts and telecasts, Harold E. Fellows, president of the NARTB, told a Congressional sub-committee investigating offensive programming last week. Speaking of the radio and TV code, Fellows declared, "we have produced no miracles overnight, but the evidence of tangible progress . . . is very gratifying."

Whether Americans in a hundred years from now will still be listening to radio is questionable, but ABC apparently banks on the longevity of the medium in its radio presentation of "Time Capsule." Arthur van Horn is the narrator of the series which is designed to enlighten citizens of 2052 on the "spirit and flavor" of our day. "Time Capsule" leans heavily on the arts and their practitioners. It's a lively show with a nice twist.

If WNBC and WNBT, NBC's flagship stations in New York City, today command a vast and appreciative audience, the credit must go largely to restless, imaginative Ted Cott, NBC vice-president and general manager of these key outlets. With a fine sense for the "different" in radio and TV entertainment, Cott has been responsible for a string of outstanding public service and educational programs which have brought credit to himself and to the industry. This year, on WNBT, he originated the provocative "Inside Our Schools" series, the charming "Through the Enchanted Gate" children's art education programs, "It's a Problem," etc. On radio, he set the industry pace again when he instituted WNBC's all-night classical music program. Cott joined NBC in 1950, having started his radio career at the age of 16 on the staff of New York City's WNYC. In 1939 he joined CBS and in 1944 moved over to WNEW as director of programming. Versatile and ever on the prowl for new ideas, Cott has written books and taught radio writing and directing.

As a replacement for the "I Love Lucy" show on CBS-TV Monday nights, "My Little Margie" has the difficult task of following in the footsteps of TV's most popular program. Unfortunately, producer Hal Roach, Jr., hasn't outdone himself with this filmed series which stars Charles Farrell and Gale Storm. The situation comedy is hackneyed and performances are not up to par. Director Hal Yates seems unable to overcome the show's static quality and Miss Storm's characterization is void of charm or warmth, which doesn't help any.

"Information Please" made its TV debut Sunday over CBS-TV and while the show retains its appeal, it was not an unqualified success. There were some nice touches of humor, but the program still has one foot in radio. Clifton Fadiman was on hand again as the genial master-of-ceremonies, and so were Franklin P. Adams and John Kieran. James Michener was a somewhat unrelaxed guest. A little more visual appeal could improve the show a great deal. It certainly has the stuff to make it top TV entertainment.

Skiatron Deal Points To Pay TV Test

Skiatron Electronics and Television Corp. has further cleared the way for the formal test of its Subscriber-Vision pay-as-you-see television system here later this year by entering into a joint working agreement with Hanovia Chemical and Manufacturing Co. of Newark, a unit of the Engelhard Industries, Skiatron president Arthur Levey reports.

Gives Company Facilities

Pointing out that Skiatron has concentrated its technical activities this past year on its pay-as-you-see system, Levey said that the agreement gives the company facilities to produce the components for the subscription system, as well as to carry on extensive research and development of products under Skiatron patents not yet ready for commercial markets.

CBS Anticipates Mass. Transmitter

BOSTON, July 1.—The Columbia Broadcasting System has taken an option on eight acres of land in Natick, Mass., on which would be built a television transmission station. Taking the option is in anticipation of new channels to be assigned to the Boston area. The project is also contingent on the Natick Board of Appeals giving the owner of the land a permit to build.

Pincuses to Make Films

Norman and Irving Pincus, producers of "Ellery Queen," "Mr. I. Magination" and "Authors League Theatre," have formed a television film production unit. Norman Pincus will leave for the Coast shortly to complete arrangements for the new setup, including acquisition of a studio and key personnel.

Sen. Nixon Praises 'Walk East,' Murphy

WASHINGTON, July 1. — Senator Richard Nixon (R., Calif.), has included in the Congressional Record a long statement in praise of Louis de Rochemont's "Walk East on Beacon" and of the picture's star, George Murphy.

Nixon lauded the film for "dramatically portraying the FBI's never-ending battle against the intrigue of Soviet espionage." He said it was particularly appropriate that Murphy star in the film because Murphy "has carried on a long, unrelenting and effective fight against Communism in the film capital." While Murphy was president of the Screen Actors Guild, "he was aware of the attempts of anti-American forces to subvert the motion picture industry and turn it into a mill for the dissemination of Red propaganda," Nixon declared. "His group took effective countermeasures. They studied Communist publications in order to become acquainted with party terminology. They learned to recognize the party line, and got to know the tricks which the Communists employed in their attempts to control meetings. Knowing those tricks was the key to combating them."

Nixon included various newspaper articles and editorials endorsing the picture.

Same Show in Every House, Fan Gripes

CHICAGO, July 1. — Mae Tinee, Chicago Tribune film critic, quotes a letter from a movie fan in her column of Sunday, June 29. "Dear Mae Tinee," the letter reads, "Can you do something about all the theatres showing the same feature at the same time? I had one of my few urges to go to the movies, but could find nothing at the better second run houses but a film I had already seen. I think the theatre owners are making a mistake."

Mae Tinee answers the letter, saying "Judging from the number of letters containing the same complaint, I'm inclined to agree that such booking is not profitable, but I have been unable to obtain any satisfactory explanation for the practice. When a new film is booked in such fashion, it is generally for the purpose of quick return for the money expended. The process was once airily described to me by a bright young press agent as 'saturation penetration.' I agree with the 'saturation' part of it."

Crescent Gets Tax Cut

NASHVILLE, July 1.—The City Board of Equalization has granted the Crescent Amusement Co. reduction in the tax valuation of the new Tennessee Theatre from $1,225,000 to $1,000,000 and on the Princess Theatre from $600,000 to $425,000. Headquarters of Crescent are in the Princess Theatre Building.

N. O. In Blood Drive

NEW ORLEANS, July 1.—The American Red Cross Blood Bank program is richer by over 100 pints given by the film industry in New Orleans. Co-chairmaned by Henry Plitt and Billy Briant, the Red Cross set up a fully equipped unit in the 20th Century-Fox exchange, with all the firms participating by giving employes time off.

'Hall' Gets Ready For New Prosperity

To accommodate holiday audiences, New York's Radio City Music Hall has scheduled extra performances of "Where's Charley?", starring Ray Bolger, and its stage spectacle on the Fourth of July, with the doors opening at 8:30 a.m. during the weekend holidays.

Selling Away from Cincinnati 1st-Runs

CINCINNATI, July 1.—With the temporary closing of the Capitol and Keith's theatres here, product is being sold away from first-runs, the initial booking being 20th Century-Fox's, "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie," currently playing the suburban Twin Drive-in, a unit of the Reuben Shor circuit.

At Jackson, O., Paramount has sold 14 first-runs to the Town and Country Drive-in, with the proviso that the product has not been and will not be shown at any regular theatres there until after the drive-in runs.

Two Theatres Sold, Being Converted

ALBANY, July 1.—Neil Hellman has sold the Palace, Troy neighborhood house, to the Papermakers Union for use as a combined bowling center and union office building. The Palace has been dark since April, when it was damaged by fire.

The Colonial, Manchester, Vt., served out of Albany exchanges, has been sold to Mrs. Helen Hadley and her father, Charles Orr, who will convert it to commercial purposes. The house had been operating weekends only. Mrs. Hadley also operates the Playhouse in Manchester.

Philippine Grosses Off, Commerce Says

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Gross receipts in theatres in the Philippines are expected to be off sharply this year, the Commerce Department said. Film chief Nathan D. Golden cited high living costs and heavy unemployment as reasons. Gross receipts in 1951, he said, were about 10 per cent above those for 1950, with U. S. films grossing about $15,000,000. Golden said the popularity of Philippine-produced Tagalog films continues to increase.

Plan Production of Mexican Color Films

MEXICO CITY, July 1.—Regular production in Mexico of color pictures is being arranged by the trade's own bank, the semi-official Banco Nacional Cinematografico, announced its director general, Eduardo Vidal Cruz. The bank, he added, is accumulating a fund, in dollars, to establish color laboratories there. Plans are being worked out with producers.

PITTSBUGH, Pa., July 1.—After 25 years of service, publicity director Ken Hoel and the Harris Amusement Co. have severed connections. Also dropped from the Harris payroll in the shakeup was artist George Marlier.

Canadian Product Income Up Sharply

OTTAWA, July 1.—Income from Canadian motion pictures exclusive of the output of the National Film Board of Canada, increased nearly two and a half times from 1941 to 1951, according to a survey of Canada's motion picture industry by the government.

An index of gross revenues of film producing companies reporting to the government increased in the 10 years from the base of 100 in 1941 to 245.7 in 1951. The index rose in each successive year of the war years to a peak of 158.1 for 1945, dropped to 140.6 for 1946, then rose to 159.6 for 1947 and 168.9 for 1948, climbing sharply to 207.6 for 1949 and more gradually to 213.5 for 1950, rising sharply again to the figure of 245.7 for 1951.

The government reports exports of films dropped to $467,000 in May against $609,000 last year in the same month and declined to $1,972,000 in the first five months, against $2,373,000 a year ago.

Report French Negotiations In Stalemate

Talks End with France Still Seeking Subsidy

PARIS, July 2.—Franco-American negotiations for a new film import agreement apparently reached a stalemate here today following day and night meetings.

Both sides exchanged proposals at the lengthy sessions but it was apparent, when they adjourned, that no agreement and very little progress had been made. Moreover, no date was set for the next session, presumably in order to permit the American industry representatives to confer with their principals.

It is understood that F. W. Allport, representing the Motion Picture Association of America, will return to his London headquarters and that Alfred W. Crown, representing the Society of Independent Motion Picture

Newsreels Set for Record Coverage of Conventions

The newsreels are gearing for the greatest coverage and fastest job in their histories. For the most part they will rush footage shot at the Chicago political conventions to theatres within a few hours after filming.

Edmund Reek, production chief of 20th Century-Fox's Movietonews, yesterday reported that his reel has assigned to the convention scene head cameraman Jack Painter and a crew of nine lensmen; make-up editor Louis Tetunic; Arthur Lincer, of the Washington Bureau, and chief cutter Fred Ahrens from New York.

A crew of 26 Movietonews men will handle the on-the-spot film processing within hours, while an expediting platoon of eight will forward prints to theatres.

The Movietone contingent will work in conjunction with a staff of United Press correspondents and editors to lens official floor proceedings and interviews with key delegates and candidates.

Tom Mead, head of Universal-International's Newsreel, reports that his reel will have a record number of cameramen and technicians on hand for full photographic coverage of both conventions. Jimmy Lyons, who heads U-I's newsreel operations in Washington, will be in charge of the

TV License Refusal For Violation of Trust Law Removed

WASHINGTON, July 2.—House-Senate conferees on a bill to make major changes in the set-up and powers of the Federal Communications Commission have agreed to remove a provision now in the Communications Act authorizing the FCC to refuse radio or television licenses to persons convicted of anti-trust violations in the radio communications field.

The conference added, however, that it felt this did not "impair or modify" the Commission's basic authority to examine into all factors relevant to the character of a licensee.

SEMINAR OF SOUTHERN OWNERS AND PUBLISHERS IS PROPOSED

MEMPHIS, July 2.—A joint seminar of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of the Mid-South and the Tennessee Press Association has been proposed by John Mohrstadt of Hayti, Mo., president of the exhibitors' group. Mohrstadt, in a letter to James W. R. White of Martin, Tenn., president of the publishers' group, suggested that the meet be held here December 9-11.

In urging the joint gathering, Mohrstadt wrote: "Publishers of dailies and weeklies and theatre owners have been getting together all over the country in meetings which have developed a good deal of mutual interest and profit."

Copies of Mohrstadt's letter were sent to the other officers of the press Association.

Exhibitor - publisher seminars, first launched in Hartford, where a second session was held weeks ago, have also been held in Binghamton, N. Y., Houston, Rochester, N. Y. and Minneapolis.

Arbitration Sessions End Until August

10 Conferees Will Report Back to Own Groups

After meeting here two and a half days, during which only limited progress was made in analyzing and amending the blueprint for an industry arbitration system, the Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee of 10 yesterday adjourned its sessions until "early next month."

In the interim the committee members will report to the various distributors and exhibitor organizations participating in the Conference on the topics discussed at the sessions held at the Fabian Theatres home office. The success or failure of the whole conference may hinge on the instructions the participating organizations give their representatives after hearing their reports.

that the Conference itself, which adjourned June 18 when debate over the blueprint became too complex, would reconvene before the fall. Vacations and other commitments of members of the Continuations Committee during August may compel the group to meet only sporadically, if at all.

The committee, consisting of five representatives each from distribution and exhibition, has been instructed to set a date for reconvening of the Conference when the blueprint, or Drafting Committee report, has been amended to the satisfaction of the 10.

Strict secrecy on the nature of the discussions which commenced Monday has been observed by the Continuations Committee so far as the press is concerned. Members did indicate privately, however, that "all was not sweet agreement" behind the closed door of the meeting room. In fact, they said, there was more disagreement than agreement, although at no point in the sessions did any member voice the pessimism that cut off the last full Conference.

It was pointed out that when a particular subject, such as runs, was settled to the satisfaction of all present, the next subject that arose suggested additional qualifying and changing of the settled subject. This was said to have been true of all meetings on the three days.

Adjournment came at around two o'clock yesterday afternoon when members pointed out that they had other appointments. Distribution representatives Abe Montague and Al Lichtman had a date to attend a board meeting of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital in the afternoon; Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, was late for the outing yesterday of New Jersey Allied which he also heads; Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, was scheduled to leave later in the day for Chicago to attend the Republican Convention, and other members had business appointments.

Present at the meetings were the following: from exhibition—Myers, Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution—Austin Keough, Adolph Schimel, Lichtman, Montague, William F. Rodgers. Sitting in also were Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., vice-president of the Motion Picture Association of America, and Henderson M. Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference.

WB Gets Month's Decree Extension

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Justice Department officials said they were giving Warner Brothers a one-month extension, until August 4, to get rid of one theatre which was supposed to have been disposed of under the consent decree by this weekend.

They said Warners had done very well in complying with the divestiture schedule, under which they were to get rid of 27 theatres by July 5. Warners has actually sold and transferred 26, they said, and would have sold the 27th if the prospective purchaser had not been in an auto accident. The spokesman said they thought the one-month extension would cover the sale of the 27th house.

set-up in Chicago. Floyd Traynham, head of U-I's Chicago operation, has already set all preliminary arrangements. U-I is also sending several men from New York and will have an augmented crew of soundmen and electricians.

While it is understood that the newsreels have indicated they will not attempt special editions, a decision on this matter will probably be determined by the way things go at the conventions.

Charles Mack, Washington contact man for News-of-the-Day, will be in complete charge of that newsreels' coverage of the convention. His regular crew will be on hand as well as the regular Chicago crew and a special group from New York. Paramount News said it also is organizing its most comprehensive coverage in history for the conventions. A. J. IT HAPPENED IN WASHINGTON!

M-G-M's very proud of last week's festive World Premiere of "WASHINGTON STORY" right in the Capital itself! And proud of the results!

This ballyhoo was heard across the nation and will help launch the picture throughout America.

Everybody was there and everybody loved M-G-M's grand entertainment.

We wish you could have seen the turn-out of Washington's top names, Congressmen, officials, celebrities, with Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn as Guest of Honor.

There was a reception at the Willard Hotel, from which the guests marched to the Palace Theatre. They were attended by an honor guard, each of whom held a flag of one of the 48 states. M-G-M sent stars from the studio, there were lights, music, newsreels and showmanship!

"WASHINGTON STORY" has lots to offer of action, youthful romance, and fun. We put a big show behind its Premiere and at press time, the opening day's business beats top hits like "Father's Little Dividend" and proves it's the kind of entertainment the fans go for.

French Pact

Producers, will leave for New York by an early plane.

The negotiations were conducted on the government level with Gerald Mayer of the American Embassy sitting in for the American motion picture industry, and the American film representatives present primarily as observers.

Insist on Subsidy

Indications are that the stalemate developed over the French insistence upon a subsidy in some form, if only to finance the sale and exploitation of their films in the U. S., as is being done for the Italian industry. Both the U. S. State Department and SIMPP are opposed to recognition of a subsidy in any form in the new agreement.

Despite the present apparent stalemate, it seemed certain the negotiations could be resumed at any time in the immediate future that either side was ready to present a new proposal, or compromise, which it felt might warrant discussion after the just concluded exchange of views. Thus, a new meeting might be set next week or the week after.

There appeared to be no danger of the American industry discontinuing shipments of films here, despite the fact that the old agreement expired June 30. The American companies have been unable to withdraw any monies from France for the past year, so they have, essentially, been selling without an agreement for that length of time, anyhow.

A continuation on that basis involves no change of status and does not require a new agreement. The companies have about $4,500,000 in blocked francs here.

It was considered possible that John McCarthy, head of MPAA's international division, or Eric Johnston, president, might be on the scene if and when the negotiations are resumed.

Smith's position at the New York office.

Smith, who returned recently from a seven-month assignment in Indonesia and the Philippines, will depart for Paris later this month to assume his new duties. The Continental post has been temporarily filled by Marc Spiegel and Eugene Van Dee, MPAA representatives in Germany and Italy, respectively, since the resignation last August of Gerald Mayer.

Prior to serving with the DP Commission, Corkery, from 1945 to 1947, was director of UNRRA activities in the U. S. zone of Austria, and later served as director of Field Services of the International Refugee Organization with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

would be to decrease the weight that can be given by the FCC to previous anti-trust violations in the radio communications field, and this, of course, would indirectly decrease the weight that can be given by the FCC to anti-trust violations in other fields such as has been the subject of hearings on the United Paramount Theatres-American Broadcasting Co. merger and has been broached in connection with film industry applications for TV channels.

Both House and Senate had previously passed differing versions of the bill. The Senate measure included the change in the anti-trust provision; the House measure would have left the present law unchanged. The conferees agreed to the Senate version.

Both House and Senate are expected to approve promptly the new compromise conference bill.

The final bill would drop a House-approved provision to forbid the FCC from discriminating against an applicant because he owned a newspaper or other medium for gathering and disseminating information. The conferees said they felt the Commission is not now authorized to discriminate against any persons on this ground, and that therefore the provision was unnecessary.

Plans for stimulating business during the summer were examined. It was agreed that steps should be taken to encourage greater attendance at theatres by children.

UPT Heads Meet on Product,Promotions

DETROIT, July 2.—United Paramount Theatre executives met here this week to discuss new product for the summer and fall, and the methods of promotion which will be accorded them.

A topic of interest, also, was developments in big screen theatre television, and the experiences of theatres here and elsewhere with the closed-channel telecast last Thursday to thousands of Civil Defense workers in the first public service program of its kind.

In Detroit more than 3,000 policemen and civil defense workers were briefed on procedures in protecting the public in case of atomic attack.

Review

"Junction City"

(Columbia)

CHARLES STARRETT once again dons the robes of the Durango Kid. In "Junction City" he has a good deal more plot to work with than ordinarily. The tale concerns the efforts of some scheming guardians to murder their pretty ward. Much of the story, written by Barry Shipman, is told in flashbacks which are easy to follow and make the film a bit different from standard Durango fare. Comic Smiley Burnette and stalwart Jack Mahoney, Durango's long-time pals, also are on hand in major supporting roles.

Pretty Kathleen Case is the ward in question. When she runs away from her guardians, however, it's Jack Mahoney, an innocent stage driver, who is accused of kidnapping her. While Kathleen hides, the Junction City sheriff jails Mahoney and a hanging is threatened unless Kathleen appears. Starrett saves the day when he reveals that the supposedly grieving guardians actually are out to murder the ward and Kathleen is found before any harm can be done to her or Mahoney. The flashback sub-plot, tells of Kathleen's childhood when Durango was instrumental in bringing her feuding grandfathers together and securing her rights to a fabulously rich gold mine.

The story is told briskly and features a song from the Sunshine Boys as well as one from Burnette. Colbert Clark produced the picture and Ray Nazarro directed.

Running time, 54 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

Final Dedication of Will Rogers Highway

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 2.—Culminating nine days of cross-country ceremonies, the final dedication of the Will Rogers Highway was conducted at Palisades Park here, with state, civic and screen celebrities participating.

Hart and other officials in dedicating the marker for the Pacific Coast terminus of the memorial. Dedication ceremonies were conducted at state borders all along the 2,200-mile highway.

Shor Renews Suit Vs. RKO Pictures

CINCINNATI, July 2.—The S. & S. Amusement Corp., headed by Reuben Shor, operating the Twin Drive-in, only outdoor theatre within the city limits, has filed suit in U. S. District Court here against RKO Pictures, RKO Midwest Corp. and Cino Theatres of Ohio, seeking an injunction to restrain them from continuing practices which were said to deprive the plaintiff from booking first-run product. The suit also asks for $150,000 in damages.

Similar Action Before

In November, 1951, the papers state, the plaintiff had released the defendants in a similar action when the defendants agreed to cease "monopolistic and discriminatory practices," but the agreement was not lived up to, it is alleged.

Additionally, it is charged that RKO Midwest has failed to comply with the decree of the U. S. District Court of New York, whereby it was required to dispose of two of its seven theatres here. All seven have continued to operate as "a monopolistic group," the suit alleges.

Extra 'Hall' Shows Sat.

Radio City Music Hall, which had previously announced extra performances of its holiday stage show and the film, "Where's Charley?," for Friday, has also scheduled extra performances and an early opening for Saturday. Doors will open on Friday at 8:30 A.M. and on Saturday at 8:45 A.M.

Report French Negotiations In Stalemate

Talks End with France Still Seeking Subsidy

PARIS, July 2.—Franco-American negotiations for a new film import agreement apparently reached a stalemate here today following day and night meetings.

Both sides exchanged proposals at the lengthy sessions but it was apparent, when they adjourned, that no agreement and very little progress had been made. Moreover, no date was set for the next session, presumably in order to permit the American industry representatives to confer with their principals.

It is understood that F. W. Allport. representing the Motion Picture Association of America, will return to his London headquarters and that Alfred W. Crown, representing the Society of Independent Motion Picture

Newsreels Set for Record Coverage of Conventions

The newsreels are gearing for the greatest coverage and fastest job in their histories. For the most part they will rush footage shot at the Chicago political conventions to theatres within a few hours after filming.

Edmund Reek, production chief of 20th Century-Fox's Movietonews, yesterday reported that his reel has assigned to the convention scene head cameraman Jack Painter and a crew of nine lensmen; make-up editor Louis Tetunic; Arthur Lincer, of the Washington Bureau, and chief cutter Fred Ahrens from New York.

A crew of 26 Movietonews men will handle the on-the-spot film processing within hours, while an expediting platoon of eight will forward prints to theatres.

The Movietone contingent will work in conjunction with a staff of United Press correspondents and editors to lens official floor proceedings and interviews with key delegates and candidates.

Tom Mead, head of Universal-International's Newsreel, reports that his reel will have a record number of cameramen and technicians on hand for full photographic coverage of both conventions. Jimmy Lyons, who heads U-I's newsreel operations in Washington, will be in charge of the

TV License Refusal For Violation of Trust Law Removed

WASHINGTON, July 2.—House-Senate conferees on a bill to make major changes in the set-up and powers of the Federal Communications Commission have agreed to remove a provision now in the Communications Act authorizing the FCC to refuse radio or television licenses to persons convicted of anti-trust violations in the radio communications field.

The conference added, however, that it felt this did not "impair or modify" the Commission's basic authority to examine into all factors relevant to the character of a licensee.

SEMINAR OF SOUTHERN OWNERS AND PUBLISHERS IS PROPOSED

MEMPHIS, July 2.—A joint seminar of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of the Mid-South and the Tennessee Press Association has been proposed by John Mohrstadt of Hayti, Mo., president of the exhibitors' group. Mohrstadt, in a letter to James W. R. White of Martin, Tenn., president of the publishers' group, suggested that the meet be held here December 9-11.

In urging the joint gathering, Mohrstadt wrote: "Publishers of dailies and weeklies and theatre owners have been getting together all over the country in meetings which have developed a good deal of mutual interest and profit."

Copies of Mohrstadt's letter were sent to the other officers of the press Association.

Exhibitor - publisher seminars, first launched in Hartford, where a second session was held weeks ago, have also been held in Binghamton, N. Y., Houston, Rochester, N. Y. and Minneapolis.

Arbitration Sessions End Until August

10 Conferees Will Report Back to Own Groups

After meeting here two and a half days, during which only limited progress was made in analyzing and amending the blueprint for an industry arbitration system, the Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee of 10 yesterday adjourned its sessions until "early next month."

In the interim the committee members will report to the various distributors and exhibitor organizations participating in the Conference on the topics discussed at the sessions held at the Fabian Theatres home office. The success or failure of the whole conference may hinge on the instructions the participating organizations give their representatives after hearing their reports.

that the Conference itself, which adjourned June 18 when debate over the blueprint became too complex, would reconvene before the fall. Vacations and other commitments of members of the Continuations Committee during August may compel the group to meet only sporadically, if at all.

The committee, consisting of five representatives each from distribution and exhibition, has been instructed to set a date for reconvening of the Conference when the blueprint, or Drafting Committee report, has been amended to the satisfaction of the 10.

Strict secrecy on the nature of the discussions which commenced Monday has been observed by the Continuations Committee so far as the press is concerned. Members did indicate privately, however, that "all was not sweet agreement" behind the closed door of the meeting room. In fact, they said, there was more disagreement than agreement, although at no point in the sessions did any member voice the pessimism that cut off the last full Conference.

It was pointed out that when a particular subject, such as runs, was settled to the satisfaction of all present, the next subject that arose suggested additional qualifying and changing of the settled subject. This was said to have been true of all meetings on the three days.

Adjournment came at around two o'clock yesterday afternoon when members pointed out that they had other appointments. Distribution representatives Abe Montague and Al Lichtman had a date to attend a board meeting of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital in the afternoon; Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, was late for the outing yesterday of New Jersey Allied which he also heads; Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, was scheduled to leave later in the day for Chicago to attend the Republican Convention, and other members had business appointments.

Present at the meetings were the following: from exhibition—Myers, Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution—Austin Keough, Adolph Schimel, Lichtman, Montague, William F. Rodgers. Sitting in also were Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., vice-president of the Motion Picture Association of America, and Henderson M. Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference.

WB Gets Month's Decree Extension

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Justice Department officials said they were giving Warner Brothers a one-month extension, until August 4, to get rid of one theatre which was supposed to have been disposed of under the consent decree by this weekend.

They said Warners had done very well in complying with the divestiture schedule, under which they were to get rid of 27 theatres by July 5. Warners has actually sold and transferred 26, they said, and would have sold the 27th if the prospective purchaser had not been in an auto accident. The spokesman said they thought the one-month extension would cover the sale of the 27th house.

set-up in Chicago. Floyd Traynham, head of U-I's Chicago operation, has already set all preliminary arrangements. U-I is also sending several men from New York and will have an augmented crew of soundmen and electricians.

While it is understood that the newsreels have indicated they will not attempt special editions, a decision on this matter will probably be determined by the way things go at the conventions.

Charles Mack, Washington contact man for News-of-the-Day, will be in complete charge of that newsreels' coverage of the convention. His regular crew will be on hand as well as the regular Chicago crew and a special group from New York. Martin Barnett heads the Chicago unit and Walter Bredin, assignment editor, will head the New York contingent.

Paramount News said it also is organizing its most comprehensive coverage in history for the conventions. A. J. Everybody was there and everybody loved M-G-M's grand entertainment.

We wish you could have seen the turn-out of Washington's top names, Congressmen, officials, celebrities, with Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn as Guest of Honor.

There was a reception at the Willard Hotel, from which the guests marched to the Palace Theatre. They were attended by an honor guard, each of whom held a flag of one of the 48 states. M-G-M sent stars from the studio, there were lights, music, newsreels and showmanship!

"WASHINGTON STORY" has lots to offer of action, youthful romance, and fun. We put a big show behind its Premiere and at press time, the opening day's business beats top hits like "Father's Little Dividend" and proves it's the kind of entertainment the fans go for.

Producers, will leave for New York by an early plane.

The negotiations were conducted on the government level with Gerald Mayer of the American Embassy sitting in for the American motion picture industry, and the American film representatives present primarily as observers.

Insist on Subsidy

Indications are that the stalemate developed over the French insistence upon a subsidy in some form, if only to finance the sale and exploitation of their films in the U. S., as is being done for the Italian industry. Both the U. S. State Department and SIMPP are opposed to recognition of a subsidy in any form in the new agreement.

Despite the present apparent stalemate, it seemed certain the negotiations could be resumed at any time in the immediate future that either side was ready to present a new proposal, or compromise, which it felt might warrant discussion after the just concluded exchange of views. Thus, a new meeting might be set next week or the week after.

There appeared to be no danger of the American industry discontinuing shipments of films here, despite the fact that the old agreement expired June 30. The American companies have been unable to withdraw any monies from France for the past year, so they have, essentially, been selling without an agreement for that length of time, anyhow.

A continuation on that basis involves no change of status and does not require a new agreement. The companies have about $4,500,000 in blocked francs here.

It was considered possible that John McCarthy, head of MPAA's international division, or Eric Johnston, president, might be on the scene if and when the negotiations are resumed.

Smith, who returned recently from a seven-month assignment in Indonesia and the Philippines, will depart for Paris later this month to assume his new duties. Prior to serving with the DP Commission, Corkery, from 1945 to 1947 was director of UNRRA activities in the U. S. zone of Austria, and later served as director of Field Services of the International Refugee Organization with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

Both House and Senate had previously passed differing versions of the bill. The Senate measure included the change in the anti-trust provision; the House measure would have left the present law unchanged. The conferees agreed to the Senate version.

Both House and Senate are expected to approve promptly the new compromise conference bill.

The final bill would drop a House-approved provision to forbid the FCC from discriminating against an applicant because he owned a newspaper or other medium for gathering and disseminating information. The conferees said they felt the Commission is not now authorized to discriminate against any persons on this ground, and that therefore the provision was unnecessary.

UPT Heads Meet on Product, Promotions

DETROIT, July 2.—United Paramount Theatre executives met here this week to discuss new product for the summer and fall, and the methods of promotion which will be accorded them.

A topic of interest, also, was developments in big screen theatre television, and the experiences of theatres here and elsewhere with the closed-channel telecast last Thursday to thousands of Civil Defense workers in the first public service program of its kind.

In Detroit more than 3,000 policemen and civil defense workers were briefed on procedures in protecting the public in case of atomic attack.

"Junction City"

CHARLES STARRETT once again dons the robes of the Durango Kid. In "Junction City" he has a good deal more plot to work with than ordinarily. The tale concerns the efforts of some scheming guardians to murder their pretty ward. Much of the story, written by Barry Shipman, is told in flashbacks which are easy to follow and make the film a bit different from standard Durango fare. Comic Smiley Burnette and stalwart Jack Mahoney, Durango's long-time pals, also are on hand in major supporting roles.

Pretty Kathleen Case is the ward in question. When she runs away from her guardians, however, it's Jack Mahoney, an innocent stage driver, who is accused of kidnapping her. While Kathleen hides, the Junction City sheriff jails Mahoney and a hanging is threatened unless Kathleen appears. Starrett saves the day when he reveals that the supposedly grieving guardians actually are out to murder the ward and Kathleen is found before any harm can be done to her or Mahoney. The flashback sub-plot, tells of Kathleen's childhood when Durango was instrumental in bringing her feuding grandfathers together and securing her rights to a fabulously rich gold mine.

The story is told briskly and features a song from the Sunshine Boys as well as one from Burnette. Colbert Clark produced the picture and Ray Nazarro directed.

Running time, 54 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

Shor Renews Suit Vs. RKO Pictures

CINCINNATI, July 2.—The S. & S. Amusement Corp., headed by Reuben Shor, operating the Twin Drive-in, only outdoor theatre within the city limits, has filed suit in U. S. District Court here against RKO Pictures, RKO Midwest Corp. and Cino Theatres of Ohio, seeking an injunction to restrain them from continuing practices which were said to deprive the plaintiff from booking first-run product. The suit also asks for $150,000 in damages.

Similar Action Before

In November, 1951, the papers state, the plaintiff had released the defendants in a similar action when the defendants agreed to cease "monopolistic and discriminatory practices," but the agreement was not lived up to, it is alleged.

Additionally, it is charged that RKO Midwest has failed to comply with the decree of the U. S. District Court of New York, whereby it was required to dispose of two of its seven theatres here. All seven have continued to operate as "a monopolistic group," the suit alleges.

Accurate Concise and Impartial

VOL. 72. NO. 4 NEW YORK, U.S.A., MONDAY, JULY 7, 1952 TEN CENTS

Tradewise...

By SHERWIN KANE

THE characteristically inflated prognostications of television "authorities" are currently in for another radical revising — downwards, of course.

When the Federal Communications Commission issued its April 14 order lifting the ban on new TV stations there were predictions from all corners of the television arena that "hundreds" of new stations would be on the air by the end of 1952 and "thousands" later.

In the initial period for filing applications for new stations, ended on July 1, there were fewer than 400 new or amended applications on file as FCC prepared to start processing them. The most optimistic estimates from TV sources now are that about 25 new stations may be on the air this year.

Certainly, there has been no great rush for new station permits and, as this department pointed out back in April, the market will not stand any huge number of additional stations and still yield a profit to broadcasters. No doubt several hundred more can make a living. But add "thousands" of new TV stations and you have financial chaos in that industry.

FROM the cryptic and uninformative statement of the industry arbitration conferees at the conclusion of their two and one-half days of meetings here last week it was impossible to tell whether or not it was being demonstrated that a few individuals are capable of reaching agreement more rapidly than could a large number.

It was the first time the new committee of 10 had convened and relieved the large and unwieldy Arbitration Conference which preceded it of the burden of drafting an industry arbitration plan. It had been hoped that greater harmony and more rapid progress might be achieved by reducing the number of architects around the board.

Granted that too much in the way of results cannot be expected from two and one-half days of meetings, the many in the industry who were looking for a progress report from the new streamlined drafting committee with special interest, because of the hope it might offer for the future, were doomed to disappointment by the committee's uncommunicative statement.

Hit US Quota Defaults Again In Commons

By PETER BURNUP

LONDON, July 6. — Labourite M.P.'s returned to their attack on Film Quota Act defaulters in Commons late last week, goading Peter Thorneycroft, president of the Board of Trade, into revealing that he has ordered "a substantial number of quota prosecutions to be instituted as soon as possible."

Labourite M.P. Stephen Swingler charged that the procedure of the Board of Trade in taking recommendations for prosecution or non-prosecution of quota defaulters from the Films Council, whose members include persons connected with defaulting theatres, "is an open conspiracy to defy the law."

Swingler was especially critical of Loew's Empire Theatre here, which

The television pool for the convention coverage wants 50 cents per seat from any theatre that takes the free-for-home-TV telecasts off the air waves or cables.

NPA Ups Allotments of Copper and Aluminum

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Most manufacturers of film and theatre equipment have had their copper and aluminum allotments for the third quarter increased, and will get fourth quarter allotments at the same high third quarter rate, the National Production Authority revealed.

Steel supplies, however, remain an unknown quantity.

NPA announced that firms would be able in the third quarter to use about 50 per cent of their pre-Korean copper consumption and about 55 per cent of their pre-Korean aluminum usage. This compares with earlier limits of 35 per cent to 40 per cent on copper in the third quarter and 45 per cent on aluminum. Fourth quarter consumption will be at about the same level, NPA said.

May Revise Upward Again

The agency said it had increased the amount of copper alloted to the film division for parcelling out to industry firms in the current three months from 1,162,000 pounds to 1,284,000 pounds. Initial fourth quarter allotment will be 1,276,000 pounds, with a possibility of a later upward revision.

The film division's final third quarter allotment of aluminum has been boosted to 3,268,000 pounds from an initial allotment of 2,900,000 pounds. The initial allotment for the fourth quarter is 3,101,000 pounds.

Companies will be allowed to place advance fourth quarter orders for 80 per cent of their third quarter steel allotments, NPA said. This limit is due to the steel strike, and could be increased later.

Franco-US Impasse Seen Not Serious

Motion Picture Association of America and Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers officials here expressed no undue concern over the disruption of talks, due to a stalemate reached late last week in the negotiations for a new film import and remittance agreement with France.

The talks, it was pointed out, are being conducted on the government level and can be resumed at any time by French and American government officials in Washington. The situation does not call for the presence of American industry representatives except as observers, it was stated. Thus, should the government principals succeed in advancing the negotiations later on, the American industry representatives could return to the scene.

Alfred W. Crown of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, who represented SIMPP at the conferences, returned to New York from Paris by plane last Thursday.

Harvey Outlines A 3-Point Program

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—A three-point program is presented in the latest issue of Exhibitors Digest by Rotus Harvey, president of Western Theatre Owners, "if thousands of theatres are to be saved to give livelihood to many thousands of theatre owners and employes, and saved to keep revenues flowing to the producers."

The first step, he said, is to work toward the repeal of the 20 per cent admission tax. The tax is the difference between profit and loss for thousands of theatres, he added.

"Secondly, ways and means must be found to stop 'multiple runs'." He said running the same picture in a number of theatres in the same area at the same time "has done more to ruin the business than any other single factor."

Cited by Harvey as the third point was the need for incentive selling and freedom to book.

Hit Quota

he termed the "most notorious defaulter" that has not been prosecuted.

The Parliamentary quota critics are friends and mouthpieces of the Left-Wing studio unions here which are busily engaged in a campaign to create an anti-American atmosphere in advance of the coming governmental monetary agreement talks governing remittances for American films.

Their campaign in Commons is expected to be intensified with the next likely step being a demand that the government deal with the U. S. State Department, rather than with American film industry representatives, following the current example of the French government, when the talks on the new pact open here next month.

Another anticipated political demand of the Left-Wing unions is expected to be one for full employment of studio technicians whether justified by the production potential or not.

Swingler asked how many cases of quota defaults Thorneycroft had decided to prosecute where prosecution was not recommended by the Films Council. Asserting that six members of the Council are associated with companies some of whose theatres did not meet their quota in 1950 and 1951, Thorneycroft said he always considers the Council's advice very carefully and finds it very valuable, but that the responsibility for prosecution of defaulters is entirely his.

Swingler then suggested that Thorneycroft either disregard the Council's recommendations or ask its members connected with defaulting circuits to resign. Another Labourite, Woodrow Wyatt, demanded that the people concerned with management of defaulting theatres be removed from the Council.

Thorneycroft retorted he didn't accept the Opposition's description of the Council, which consists of 22 members, seven of whom are independents. He said he doesn't think changes in the Council are necessary, adding that it is part of the Council's procedure that members of its defaults committee withdraw during the consideration of cases in which they have a personal interest, and that such members take no part in the subsequent discussion of the cases by the full Council.

Thorneycroft said that excluding British films made by American subsidiaries here, 10 British films have been given bookings on American theatre circuits in the last three years, namely, two in 1949; two in 1950 and six in 1951.

"Fearless Fagan"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A SPRIGHTLY COMEDY has been worked out of a real-life incident in "Fearless Fagan." The title derives from a pet circus lion of the same name. When its master is inducted into the Armed Forces a knotty problem arises of how to dispose of the domesticated king of the beasts. The story is quite funny and has a strong novel appeal, although, in time the idea begins to thin. Shapely Janet Leigh, playing an entertainer visiting Army camps, is the name for the marquee, with Carleton Carpenter playing the lead opposite her as the unsophisticated master of the pet.

When Carpenter receives his call to service he weighs the alternative of giving his pet to a zoo or selling it. Neither seems satisfactory so Carpenter secretes the lion in a caged automobile and takes it off with him to an army post. All the imaginable confusion and fear does happen when the presence of the animal is detected, and the screenplay by Charles Lederer milks it for many laughs.

As usual, Keenan Wynn, top sergeant, turns in a strong and affecting characterization that provide some of the film's best laughs. Presently it becomes the problem of the Army to find a home for the lion and this involves considerable doings. The whirligig churns round and round and the situation grows darker and darker for Fagan. When all seems lost, in steps Miss Leigh, now in love with Carpenter, and she offers the pet a luxurious berth in her Hollywood mansion for the duration. Stanley Donen directed and Edwin H. Knopf produced.

Running time, 79 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Can't Afford Convention

some part of the Republican goings-on, such as General MacArthur's keynote address tonight, that of Herbert Hoover, the last Republican President and the only living U. S. ex-President, tomorrow night, and any dramatic developments of the balloting later in the week.

Exhibitors familiar with large screen TV know that they can't sell what's being given away, so they can't boost their admission prices to cover the TV pool's charge for the free home TV telecasts from Chicago. If they absorb the charge, the net result would be as bad, or worse, on their books than the probable loss of patronage of the stay-at-homes.

Most exhibitors, small and large, appear resigned to facing tough competition this week, and again the week of July 21 when the Democratic National Convention gets under way. Many who anticipated it have arranged the strongest possible bookings for both weeks and are going all-out on exploitation activities in an effort to capture all but the dyed-in-the-wool TV addict.

They take comfort in the fact that the political proceedings will be of only passing interest to the teen-age and early 20's age groups which form so large a segment of their patronage. Bookings and special campaigns were designed by many with an eye to that patronage in the hope of offsetting the indicated loss of customers in the older age brackets during the weeks in question.

If the convention, which opens today, can pick a Presidential candidate on an early ballot this week, theatre business is not going to suffer to any appreciable degree from the home television coverage of the event, in the opinion of many circuit executives here.

Therefore, as one executive put it, "a lot of exhibitors' fingers are going to be crossed" as the convention gets underway. Memories of what the telecasts of the Kefauver Crime Committee investigations did to theatre business in many localities will occupy exhibitors' minds, he said.

If it runs a "normal course," the Republican convention won't offer the kind of "entertainment" that kept so many thousands glued to their TV sets during testimony of witnesses before the Kefauver group, was the general opinion. Only the balloting for President and Vice-President will captivate radio and TV audiences, for little else at political conventions has the galvanic effect of such voting, theatremen contend.

Thus if the race between General Eisenhower and Senator Taft is resolved early—by, say, Wednesday afternoon—normal summertime theatre business should prevail. If, on the other hand, a long, drawn-out balloting battle develops, "people aren't going to be thinking about going to the movies," showmen said.

'TV City' Planned by St. Louis Amusement

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—The St. Louis Amusement Co. has announced its intention of converting the St. Louis Theatre into the "nucleus of a television city." Hence, the company has refiled its application for TV channel No. 11 pursuant to the ruling of the Federal Communications Commission requiring all applicants to refile by July 1.

Edward B. Arthur, president of the company, said: "We will use a 50 kilowatt transmitter, and will utilize RCA equipment in our operation. A 500-foot tower will be erected behind the Theatre building, with a 12-bay antenna which will enable us to take advantage of full allowable effective radiated power."

Committee, and will not actually go to the Coast or to any of the other cities on the Committee list. However, he has worked over the program with Amis and will keep in constant touch with him.

Long said present plans were for Amis to conduct on-the-spot investigations in six or seven cities during the next few months, and to have things all lined up for hearings in each of the cities early next year, possibly starting in January. He said he doubted any hearings will be held before then, "because of the political situation."

Chicago Next

The Committee's plan for investigations and hearings lists these cities in the following order: Los Angeles, for the lead-off probe and hearings; Chicago next; then Atlanta or New Orleans; New York; Washington, D. C., and Minneapolis or Omaha.

The Small Business Committee functions on a more or less bi-partisan basis, and plans for the probe are not likely to be affected by any change in the make-up of the Senate.

Long said he did not know how long Amis would be on the West Coast or in any of the other cities, since this would depend on how the investigation goes in each place.

After the exhibitor hearings around the country are finished, there will probably be hearings in Washington for testimony from the Justice Department and other Government officials, Long said. Then there will be hearings here or in New York to get "the distributors' side of the case."

Long and Amis had a lengthy three-hour session last week with Maurice Silverman, anti-trust division attorney working on the Paramount consent decrees, and got an exhaustive briefing on the Paramount case and the current industry situation.

Papas, chairman, and Arthur Schoenstadt, vice-chairman yearbook; Richard Salkin, chairman, entertainment; Bruce Trinz, chairman, publicity; Arthur Sass, chairman, reception and registration; Jack Rose, chairman, special events and Sam Krimstein, chairman, decorations.

VOL. 72. NO. 4 NEW YORK, U.S.A., MONDAY, JULY 7, 1952 TEN CENTS

Tradewise...

By SHERWIN KANE

THE characteristically inflated prognostications of television "authorities" are currently in for another radical revising — downwards, of course.

When the Federal Communications Commission issued its April 14 order lifting the ban on new TV stations there were predictions from all corners of the television arena that "hundreds" of new stations would be on the air by the end of 1952 and "thousands" later.

In the initial period for filing applications for new stations, ended on July 1, there were fewer than 400 new or amended applications on file as FCC prepared to start processing them. The most optimistic estimates from TV sources now are that about 25 new stations may be on the air this year.

Certainly, there has been no great rush for new station permits and, as this department pointed out back in April, the market will not stand any huge number of additional stations and still yield a profit to broadcasters. No doubt several hundred more can make a living. But add "thousands" of new TV stations and you have financial chaos in that industry.

FROM the cryptic and uninformative statement of the industry arbitration conferees at the conclusion of their two and one-half days of meetings here last week it was impossible to tell whether or not it was being demonstrated that a few individuals are capable of reaching agreement more rapidly than could a large number.

It was the first time the new committee of 10 had convened and relieved the large and unwieldy Arbitration Conference which preceded it of the burden of drafting an industry arbitration plan. It had been hoped that greater harmony and more rapid progress might be achieved by reducing the number of architects around the board.

Granted that too much in the way of results cannot be expected from two and one-half days of meetings, the many in the industry who were looking for a progress report from the new streamlined drafting committee with special interest, because of the hope it might offer for the future, were doomed to disappointment by the committee's uncommunicative statement.

Hit US Quota Defaults Again In Commons

By PETER BURNUP

LONDON, July 6. — Labourite M.P.'s returned to their attack on Film Quota Act defaulters in Commons late last week, goading Peter Thorneycroft, president of the Board of Trade, into revealing that he has ordered "a substantial number of quota prosecutions to be instituted as soon as possible."

Labourite M.P. Stephen Swingler charged that the procedure of the Board of Trade in taking recommendations for prosecution or non-prosecution of quota defaulters from the Films Council, whose members include persons connected with defaulting theatres, "is an open conspiracy to defy the law."

Swingler was especially critical of Loew's Empire Theatre here, which Television - equipped theatres throughout the country, facing, along with thousands of other theatres the competition of the free home telecasts of proceedings this week at the Republican National Convention in Chicago, will be unable to pick up the telecasts without paying for them.

The television pool for the convention coverage wants 50 cents per seat from any theatre that takes the free-for-home-TV telecasts off the air waves or cables.

The charge effectively thwarts those exhibitors with large screen TV equipment who had any idea of using it for a tune-in on the Chicago proceedings, along with their regular film programs. Many had hoped that might be possible and had toyed tentatively with putting on their screens

NPA Ups Allotments of Copper and Aluminum

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Most manufacturers of film and theatre equipment have had their copper and aluminum allotments for the third quarter increased, and will get fourth quarter allotments at the same high third quarter rate, the National Production Authority revealed.

Steel supplies, however, remain an unknown quantity.

NPA announced that firms would be able in the third quarter to use about 50 per cent of their pre-Korean copper consumption and about 55 per cent of their pre-Korean aluminum usage. This compares with earlier limits of 35 per cent to 40 per cent on copper in the third quarter and 45 per cent on aluminum. Fourth quarter consumption will be at about the same level, NPA said.

May Revise Upward Again

The agency said it had increased the amount of copper alloted to the film division for parcelling out to industry firms in the current three months from 1,162,000 pounds to 1,284,000 pounds. Initial fourth quarter allotment will be 1,276,000 pounds, with a possibility of a later upward revision.

The film division's final third quarter allotment of aluminum has been boosted to 3,268,000 pounds from an initial allotment of 2,900,000 pounds. The initial allotment for the fourth quarter is 3,101,000 pounds.

Companies will be allowed to place advance fourth quarter orders for 80 per cent of their third quarter steel allotments, NPA said. This limit is due to the steel strike, and could be increased later.

Franco-US Impasse Seen Not Serious

Motion Picture Association of America and Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers officials here expressed no undue concern over the disruption of talks, due to a stalemate reached late last week in the negotiations for a new film import and remittance agreement with France.

The talks, it was pointed out, are being conducted on the government level and can be resumed at any time by French and American government officials in Washington. The situation does not call for the presence of American industry representatives except as observers, it was stated. Thus, should the government principals succeed in advancing the negotiations later on, the American industry representatives could return to the scene.

Alfred W. Crown of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, who represented SIMPP at the conferences, returned to New York from Paris by plane last Thursday.

Harvey Outlines A 3-Point Program

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—A three-point program is presented in the latest issue of Exhibitors Digest by Rotus Harvey, president of Western Theatre Owners, "if thousands of theatres are to be saved to give livelihood to many thousands of theatre owners and employes, and saved to keep revenues flowing to the producers."

The first step, he said, is to work toward the repeal of the 20 per cent admission tax. The tax is the difference between profit and loss for thousands of theatres, he added.

"Secondly, ways and means must be found to stop 'multiple runs'." He said running the same picture in a number of theatres in the same area at the same time "has done more to ruin the business than any other single factor."

Cited by Harvey as the third point was the need for incentive selling and freedom to book.

Hit Quota

he termed the "most notorious defaulter" that has not been prosecuted.

The Parliamentary quota critics are friends and mouthpieces of the Left-Wing studio unions here which are busily engaged in a campaign to create an anti-American atmosphere in advance of the coming governmental monetary agreement talks governing remittances for American films.

Their campaign in Commons is expected to be intensified with the next likely step being a demand that the government deal with the U. S. State Department, rather than with American film industry representatives, following the current example of the French government, when the talks on the new pact open here next month.

Another anticipated political demand of the Left-Wing unions is expected to be one for full employment of studio technicians whether justified by the production potential or not.

Swingler asked how many cases of quota defaults Thorneycroft had decided to prosecute where prosecution was not recommended by the Films Council. Asserting that six members of the Council are associated with companies some of whose theatres did not meet their quota in 1950 and 1951, Thorneycroft said he always considers the Council's advice very carefully and finds it very valuable, but that the responsibility for prosecution of defaulters is entirely his.

Swingler then suggested that Thorneycroft either disregard the Council's recommendations or ask its members connected with defaulting circuits to resign. Another Labourite, Woodrow Wyatt, demanded that the people concerned with management of defaulting theatres be removed from the Council.

Thorneycroft retorted he didn't accept the Opposition's description of the Council, which consists of 22 members, seven of whom are independents. He said he doesn't think changes in the Council are necessary, adding that it is part of the Council's procedure that members of its defaults committee withdraw during the consideration of cases in which they have a personal interest, and that such members take no part in the subsequent discussion of the cases by the full Council.

"Fearless Fagan"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A SPRIGHTLY COMEDY has been worked out of a real-life incident in "Fearless Fagan." The title derives from a pet circus lion of the same name. When its master is inducted into the Armed Forces a knotty problem arises of how to dispose of the domesticated king of the beasts. The story is quite funny and has a strong novel appeal, although, in time the idea begins to thin. Shapely Janet Leigh, playing an entertainer visiting Army camps, is the name for the marquee, with Carleton Carpenter playing the lead opposite her as the unsophisticated master of the pet.

When Carpenter receives his call to service he weighs the alternative of giving his pet to a zoo or selling it. Neither seems satisfactory so Carpenter secretes the lion in a caged automobile and takes it off with him to an army post. All the imaginable confusion and fear does happen when the presence of the animal is detected, and the screenplay by Charles Lederer milks it for many laughs.

As usual, Keenan Wynn, top sergeant, turns in a strong and affecting characterization that provide some of the film's best laughs. Presently it becomes the problem of the Army to find a home for the lion and this involves considerable doings. The whirligig churns round and round and the situation grows darker and darker for Fagan. When all seems lost, in steps Miss Leigh, now in love with Carpenter, and she offers the pet a luxurious berth in her Hollywood mansion for the duration. Stanley Donen directed and Edwin H. Knopf produced.

Running time, 79 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

some part of the Republican goings-on, such as General MacArthur's keynote address tonight, that of Herbert Hoover, the last Republican President and the only living U. S. ex-President, tomorrow night, and any dramatic developments of the balloting later in the week.

Exhibitors familiar with large screen TV know that they can't sell what's being given away, so they can't boost their admission prices to cover the TV pool's charge for the free home TV telecasts from Chicago. If they absorb the charge, the net result would be as bad, or worse, on their books than the probable loss of patronage of the stay-at-homes.

Most exhibitors, small and large, appear resigned to facing tough competition this week, and again the week of July 21 when the Democratic National Convention gets under way. Many who anticipated it have arranged the strongest possible bookings for both weeks and are going all-out on exploitation activities in an effort to capture all but the dyed-in-the-wool TV addict.

They take comfort in the fact that the political proceedings will be of only passing interest to the teen-age and early 20's age groups which form so large a segment of their patronage. Bookings and special campaigns were designed by many with an eye to that patronage in the hope of offsetting the indicated loss of customers in the older age brackets during the weeks in question.

If the convention, which opens today, can pick a Presidential candidate on an early ballot this week, theatre business is not going to suffer to any appreciable degree from the home television coverage of the event, in the opinion of many circuit executives here.

Therefore, as one executive put it, "a lot of exhibitors' fingers are going to be crossed" as the convention gets underway. Memories of what the telecasts of the Kefauver Crime Committee investigations did to theatre business in many localities will occupy exhibitors' minds, he said.

If it runs a "normal course," the Republican convention won't offer the kind of "entertainment" that kept so many thousands glued to their TV sets during testimony of witnesses before the Kefauver group, was the general opinion. Only the ballotting for President and Vice-President will captivate radio and TV audiences, for little else at political conventions has the galvanic effect of such voting, theatremen contend.

Thus if the race between General Eisenhower and Senator Taft is resolved early—by, say, Wednesday afternoon—normal summertime theatre business should prevail. If, on the other hand, a long, drawn-out ballotting battle develops, "people aren't going to be thinking about going to the movies," showmen said.

'TV City' Planned by St. Louis Amusement

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—The St. Louis Amusement Co. has announced its intention of converting the St. Louis Theatre into the "nucleus of a television city." Hence, the company has refiled its application for TV channel No. 11 pursuant to the ruling of the Federal Communications Commission requiring all applicants to refile by July 1.

Edward B. Arthur, president of the company, said: "We will use a 50 kilowatt transmitter, and will utilize RCA equipment in our operation. A 500-foot tower will be erected behind the Theatre building, with a 12-bay antenna which will enable us to take advantage of full allowable effective radiated power."

Johnson Amnesia Victim

Committee, and will not actually go to the Coast or to any of the other cities on the Committee list. However, he has worked over the program with Amis and will keep in constant touch with him.

Long said present plans were for Amis to conduct on-the-spot investigations in six or seven cities during the next few months, and to have things all lined up for hearings in each of the cities early next year, possibly starting in January. He said he doubted any hearings will be held before then, "because of the political situation."

Chicago Next

The Committee's plan for investigations and hearings lists these cities in the following order: Los Angeles, for the lead-off probe and hearings; Chicago next; then Atlanta or New Orleans; New York; Washington, D. C., and Minneapolis or Omaha.

The Small Business Committee functions on a more or less bi-partisan basis, and plans for the probe are not likely to be affected by any change in the make-up of the Senate.

Long said he did not know how long Amis would be on the West Coast or in any of the other cities, since this would depend on how the investigation goes in each place.

After the exhibitor hearings around the country are finished, there will probably be hearings in Washington for testimony from the Justice Department and other Government officials, Long said. Then there will be hearings here or in New York to get "the distributors' side of the case."

Long and Amis had a lengthy three-hour session last week with Maurice Silverman, anti-trust division attorney working on the Paramount consent decrees, and got an exhaustive briefing on the Paramount case and the current industry situation.

Allied Convention

members of the committees set up to handle the event. He said it promises to be the largest industry convention ever held as a result of running concurrently with the Theatre Equipment Dealers and Theatre Equipment Supply Manufacturers' Association conventions and trade show.

Local industry members appointed by Kirsch to head the various committes are: S. J. Papas, chairman, and Arthur Schoenstadt, vice-chairman yearbook; Richard Salkin, chairman, entertainment; Bruce Trinz, chairman, publicity; Arthur Sass, chairman, reception and registration; Jack Rose, chairman, special events and Sam Krimstein, chairman, decorations.

Wives of members of Allied of Illinois will serve on a women's committee to arrange a program of activities and events for wives accompanying members to the convention.

First Day's Free Convention TV Does Mild Damage

Early reports from a limited number of key cities last night indicated that the feared competition from free home telecasts of the Republican National Convention in Chicago may not have been as drastic for the first day as had been anticipated.

Hot weather in many sections of the country was offered as one explanation for theatre attendance only slightly below normal for a summer Monday, the convention telecasts notwithstanding. The theory was that the discomfort of the home living room sent many people away from their TV sets and into air conditioned theatres for respite.

Also, in the Far West, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's keynote address was over in time for many who wished to do so, to go out to theatres. It hit the mid-

Eric Johnston Optimistic Over Business Generally

SPOKANE, July 7.—Radiating optimism over the future growth of the Inland Empire and Spokane particularly, Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America is back home for a visit and said he looked for business to be good for the balance of the year, as well as for 1953. He fears no setback to business through any possible political changes this year nor does he expect war with Russia in the "forseeable future."

Eric Johnston

But he prudently limited the "foreseeable future" to the next 12 months. He admitted, however, that war could "happen by mistake" as it did in Korea, which he blamed on the Russian high command.

"We are going to live in a world of revolution for a long time, which means that we must keep ourselves strong physically and economically," he stated.

Johnston predicted that the Republican convention in Chicago "will be close." He will fly to Chicago to see the balloting.

He based his prediction of good times upon continued Federal spending for defense, upon a bumper wheat crop and upon the inflationary effects of borrowing by the Federal Treas-

Life of Christ to Be Filmed by Cathedral

HOLLYWOOD, July 7. — Cathedral Films of Hollywood will produce "Day of Triumph," a feature length film portraying the life of Christ, in color on a half-million dollar budget, for theatre, church and television exhibition, Reverend James K. Friedrich, president, announced.

Following theatre release, beginning with roadshow exhibition, the film will be broken up into 12 or more episodes for church study purposes, and later made available for TV. Reverend Friedrich said, "My primary goal in producing this picture at this time is to help in a concrete way to launch a strong counter-offensive against the living religion of Communism. There is no greater means of evangelization than the motion picture screen. We must graphically portray for people throughout the world the positive nature of God as revealed in Jesus Christ instead of employing primarily negative tools in our desperate struggle with Communism."

Decca Deal

stockholders' meeting will be vice-president John J. O'Connor. Nate J. Blumberg, president, is not expected to attend.

Under the agreement by which Decca Records purchased Rank's 12 per cent interest in Universal, Decca promised to pay the remaining $500,000 over a five-year period, $100,000 per year, with the first payment due June 19, 1953.

Current Value $12

The payment of $2,700,000 in cash and promissory notes for Rank's entire stock holdings in Universal brought the amount paid per share to $20.09 and a fraction. The current market value of Universal common stock is about $12 per share.

Previously, Decca paid $15 per share for approximately 271,800 shares and 37,500 option warrants. Total Universal stock held now by Decca is 406,175 shares, giving Decca an investment of nearly $7,000,000 in Universal.

According to the SEC report, Decca's refunding loan agreement with the First National Bank of Boston was amended to allow Decca to create the indebtedness of $500,000 in connection with its Rank purchase. One clause in the modification calls upon Decca, under certain conditions of indebtedness, to pledge with the bank its Universal stock holdings.

"The Merry Widow"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

TIMES may change, but "The Merry Widow" goes on and on. We have now M-G-M's third version—the first in color by Technicolor—of Franz Lehar's lilting operetta about Count Danilo of the mythical Balkan country of Marshovia and the pretty, rich American widow his king compels him to woo for reasons material. The stars this time are Lana Turner and Fernando Lamas, and they wear ably enough the shoes filled by Mae Murray and John Gilbert in the 1925 film and by Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier in a 1934 release. There is little reason to doubt that this sumptuous production from Joe Pasternak, which Curtis Bernhardt directed, will capture the present generation's fancy to the extent that business will be substantial wherever it plays.

In this film colorful costumes and surroundings continually delight the eye, while pouring forth under the musical direction of Jay Blackton are the familiar "Merry Widow Waltz," "Maxim's," "Girls, Girls, Girls," "Night" and other Lehar numbers. Lamas and Miss Turner contribute the principal vocal interpolations which, while falling short of the MacDonald-Chevalier capacities, are adequate at least. But in whatever light the 1952 edition of "The Merry Widow" is judged, on the plane of production values it emerges as a tour de force. Whether the camera focuses on rococo interiors of palaces, the well-executed dance sequences, costumed frolicing in public squares or the vividly beautiful attire of the stars, the thought that cost was no object dominates the viewer's impressions.

The screenplay, by Sonya Levien and William Ludwig, follows more or less faithfully the incidents set forth in the work by Lehar, Victor Leon and Leo Stein. Miss Turner, widow of a wealthy Marchovian-American industrialist, is invited to the land of her late husband's birth, where all sorts of complications arise as she falls in love with Lamas. There is the matter of Lamas' mistaking Miss Turner's secretary, Una Merkel, for the rich widow as the fat king (Thomas Gomez) compels him, under penalty of death, to woo the lady for her money so Marshovia may free itself of ruinous debt. Meanwhile, of course, Lamas falls for Miss Turner in her pose as Fifi, a chorus girl. There are a number of comic sequences featuring Marshovian government dignitaries Richard Haydn and John Abbott and police sergeant Marcel Dalio that are genuine rib-ticklers. Paris and Maxim's famous night spot share in the milieu as romance, comedy and song are borne on their merry course through a melodic, eye-filling motion picture.

Running time, 105 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

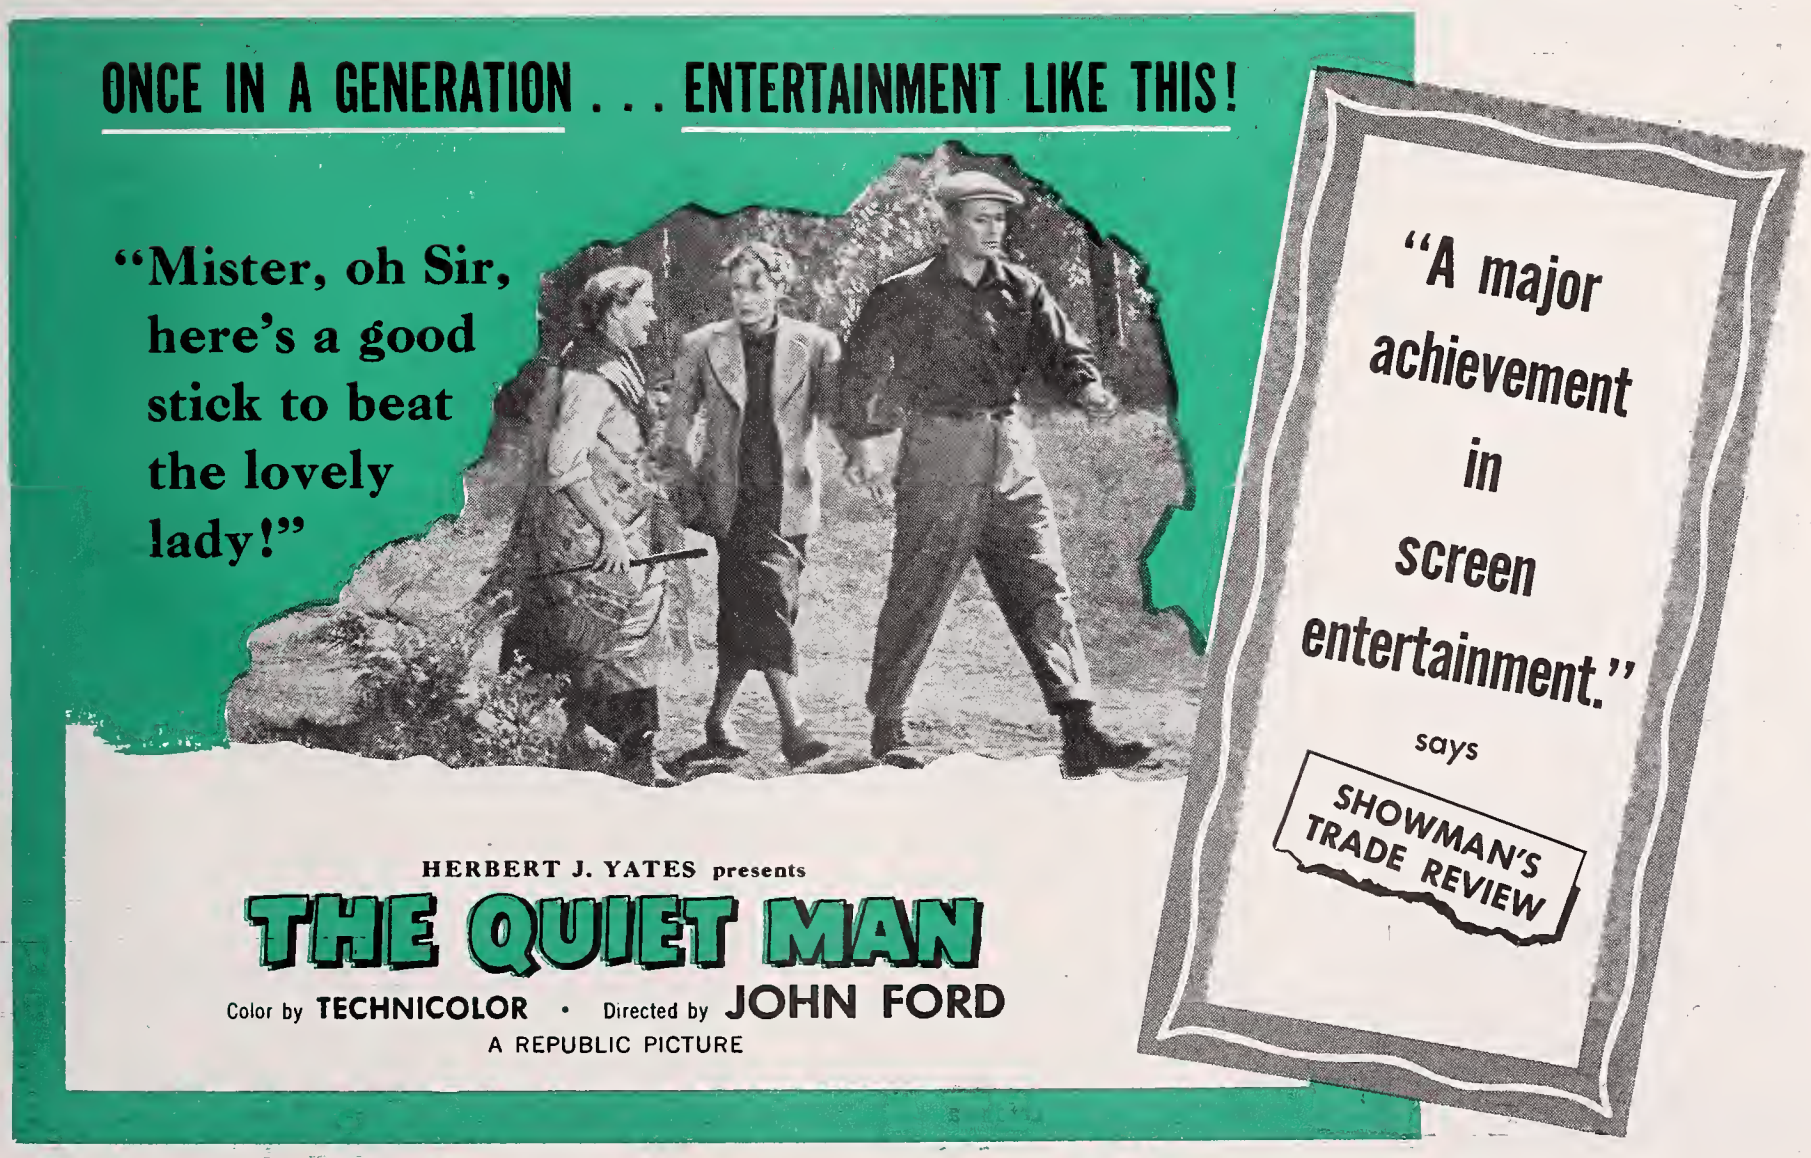
ury. He said that America should encourage more private investments abroad. He believed that private capital needed a more favorable climate and the assurance of some protection, such as guarantees against expropriation and the assurance of convertibility of earnings into dollars.

Films Big Abroad



Johnston further declared the motion picture producers are doing a bigger business abroad than ever before. Brazil is now the fourth largest market for American films, and Venezuela buys as many pictures as France. He said that two-thirds of all motion pictures produced are American and that 42 per cent of the U. S. film dollar revenue now comes from outside the U.S.A.

He expressed no fear from TV declaring that this new form of entertainment only will stimulate the motion picture industry. "You can't have a capitalistic society unless it is constantly expanding," he added.

dle West at 8:30 P. M., the peak theatre hour, and the East, too, at a good theatre hour, 60 minutes later, E.D.T.

Reports of theatre attendance from the field were too limited and too contradictory last night to reveal a definite pattern but it appeared certain that the big Republican show had an audience of many millions for the pooled coverage over all networks to 107 TV stations in 65 cities.

Grosses Only Slightly Dented

Nevertheless, with Monday night one of the weak attendance nights normally for most theatres, some exhibitors regarding their only slightly dented grosses were of the opinion that very little of that TV audience would have been theirs had the convention proceedings not been fed to the nation's living rooms. They anticipate perhaps a slightly larger loss of attendance today as convention activities warm up and the worst of the bad news a day or two later as the balloting begins.

The real damage will be done at that juncture, if at all, they expect.

slated to be held later this week at which industry heads will be briefed on the Paris negotiations. The meeting is scheduled to be attended by Eric Johnston, MPAA president, who is due here from Spokane, on Thursday.

It was also learned that either Johnston, or John G. McCarthy, MPAA vice-president and director of international affairs, or both plan to go to Paris when negotiations resume. Tentative plans call for their leaving about July 19.

Alfred W. Crown, foreign distribution head for Samuel Goldwyn Productions and representative of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers at the Paris sessions, returned here late last week and reported to his principals over the weekend. F. W. Allport, London representative of the MPAA, who was present as an MPAA observer, forwarded his report to the Association

The stalemate resulted from continued French insistence on some form of subsidy for the French industry in a new import and conversion agreement. The subsidy principle is opposed by SIMPP and the U. S. State Department, which is conducting the Paris negotiations with French government officials.

Industry executives here pointed out that the negotiations may be resumed in a week or two on the government level in Paris, with or without industry observers present, in the event some compromise formula is propounded. The old agreement with France expired on June 30. No sessions this week are possible, it was said, because of the absence from Paris of key negotiators.

immediately coupled the introduction of the bill with "the grave danger of the increasing tendency toward censorship," and warned against "these tactics of blackmail against media of communications, whether they be newspapers, magazines, or motion picture companies."

Language Not Limiting

McCarthy explained to the Senate that the bill "has to do with the shipment of educational films in interstate commerce," but the language of the bill does not confine its effect to these fields. The prohibition in the bill is against the exhibition "of motion picture films," without language limiting the effect to educational films.

McCarthy said he had his staff pick the names of some of the script writers listed in a catalog entitled "Educational Film Guide." He asserted that he submitted 17 names to the House Un-American Activities Committee, and that of the 17 the Committee said that eight "had very extensive records of Communist-front activities."

The Wisconsin Republican cited only one case, that of Columbia University Professor Robert S. Lynd, whom he said was connected with 23 different organizations listed as subversive. He said that "Lynd and the others on that list are script writers for Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, owned by Senator Benton."

McCarthy argued, "the Communists know that if they can infiltrate our educational system, they can control our nation without firing a shot."

Hired By A. T. & T.

Benton said that Lynd was hired by Western Electric, and only as a consultant. The films he worked on, "The Growth of Cities" and "The Arteries of Cities," were highly technical and gave no opportunity for any type of propaganda, even if Western Electric and American Telephone and Telegraph so desired. Other seven referred to by McCarthy were also hired by AT&T.

Writ Served on UA By Pathe Industries

Chesapeake Industries, formerly Pathe Industries, served United Artists with a summons and writ of attachment for claims aggregating in excess of $200,000 on the eve of the July 4th holiday last Thursday, it was learned yesterday.

The action is an outgrowth of claims and counter-claims involving proceeds from distribution by United Artists of certain former Eagle-Lion films acquired from Pathe Industries last year and other disputed phases of the purchase contract. Total claims by Pathe Industries are in excess of $400,000.

United Artists is preparing an action for counter-claims against P. I. aggregating more than $500,000, company officials stated yesterday. The attachment obtained by P. I. applies to a separate UA fund, held in escrow, the company stated.

First Day's Free Convention TV Does Mild Damage

Early reports from a limited number of key cities last night indicated that the feared competition from free home telecasts of the Republican National Convention in Chicago may not have been as drastic for the first day as had been anticipated.

Hot weather in many sections of the country was offered as one explanation for theatre attendance only slightly below normal for a summer Monday, the convention telecasts notwithstanding. The theory was that the discomfort of the home living room sent many people away from their TV sets and into air conditioned theatres for respite.

Also, in the Far West, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's keynote address was over in time for many who wished to do so, to go out to theatres. It hit the mid-

Eric Johnston Optimistic Over Business Generally

SPOKANE, July 7.—Radiating optimism over the future growth of the Inland Empire and Spokane particularly, Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America is back home for a visit and said he looked for business to be good for the balance of the year, as well as for 1953. He fears no setback to business through any possible political changes this year nor does he expect war with Russia in the "forseeable future."

Eric Johnston

But he prudently limited the "foreseeable future" to the next 12 months. He admitted, however, that war could "happen by mistake" as it did in Korea, which he blamed on the Russian high command.

"We are going to live in a world of revolution for a long time, which means that we must keep ourselves strong physically and economically," he stated.

Johnston predicted that the Republican convention in Chicago "will be close." He will fly to Chicago to see the balloting.

He based his prediction of good times upon continued Federal spending for defense, upon a bumper wheat crop and upon the inflationary effects of borrowing by the Federal Treas-

Life of Christ to Be Filmed by Cathedral

HOLLYWOOD, July 7. — Cathedral Films of Hollywood will produce "Day of Triumph," a feature length film portraying the life of Christ, in color on a half-million dollar budget, for theatre, church and television exhibition, Reverend James K. Friedrich, president, announced.

Following theatre release, beginning with roadshow exhibition, the film will be broken up into 12 or more episodes for church study purposes, and later made available for TV. Reverend Friedrich said, "My primary goal in producing this picture at this time is to help in a concrete way to launch a strong counter-offensive against the living religion of Communism. There is no greater means of evangelization than the motion picture screen. We must graphically portray for people throughout the world the positive nature of God as revealed in Jesus Christ instead of employing primarily negative tools in our desperate struggle with Communism."

US Admission Tax Collections Off

WASHINGTON, July 7.—General admission tax collections in May, reflecting April business, amounted to $25,221,046, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reports.

This was well below the $28,686,692 reported for May of 1951, but only slightly below the $25,787,461 reported in April of this year. It was the second highest month so far in 1952.

General admission collections include taxes on receipts from sports events, concerts and other entertainment, as well as from motion picture theatres. They do not, however, include collections from roof garden and cabaret receipts, broker sales and several other items. Decca Deal stockholders' meeting will be vice-president John J. O'Connor. Nate J. Blumberg, president, is not expected to attend.

Under the agreement by which Decca Records purchased Rank's 12 per cent interest in Universal, Decca promised to pay the remaining $500,000 over a five-year period, $100,000 per year, with the first payment due June 19, 1953.

Current Value $12

The payment of $2,700,000 in cash and promissory notes for Rank's entire stock holdings in Universal brought the amount paid per share to $20.09 and a fraction. The current market value of Universal common stock is about $12 per share.

Previously, Decca paid $15 per share for approximately 271,800 shares and 37,500 option warrants. Total Universal stock held now by Decca is 406,175 shares, giving Decca an investment of nearly $7,000,000 in Universal.

According to the SEC report, Decca's refunding loan agreement with the First National Bank of Boston was amended to allow Decca to create the indebtedness of $500,000 in connection with its Rank purchase. One clause in the modification calls upon Decca, under certain conditions of indebtedness, to pledge with the bank its Universal stock holdings.

"The Merry Widow"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

TIMES may change, but "The Merry Widow" goes on and on. We have now M-G-M's third version—the first in color by Technicolor—of Franz Lehar's lilting operetta about Count Danilo of the mythical Balkan country of Marshovia and the pretty, rich American widow his king compels him to woo for reasons material. The stars this time are Lana Turner and Fernando Lamas, and they wear ably enough the shoes filled by Mae Murray and John Gilbert in the 1925 film and by Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier in a 1934 release. There is little reason to doubt that this sumptuous production from Joe Pasternak, which Curtis Bernhardt directed, will capture the present generation's fancy to the extent that business will be substantial wherever it plays.

In this film colorful costumes and surroundings continually delight the eye, while pouring forth under the musical direction of Jay Blackton are the familiar "Merry Widow Waltz," "Maxim's," "Girls, Girls, Girls," "Night" and other Lehar numbers. Lamas and Miss Turner contribute the principal vocal interpolations which, while falling short of the MacDonald-Chevalier capacities, are adequate at least. But in whatever light the 1952 edition of "The Merry Widow" is judged, on the plane of production values it emerges as a tour de force. Whether the camera focuses on rococo interiors of palaces, the well-executed dance sequences, costumed frolicing in public squares or the vividly beautiful attire of the stars, the thought that cost was no object dominates the viewer's impressions.

The screenplay, by Sonya Levien and William Ludwig, follows more or less faithfully the incidents set forth in the work by Lehar, Victor Leon and Leo Stein. Miss Turner, widow of a wealthy Marchovian-American industrialist, is invited to the land of her late husband's birth, where all sorts of complications arise as she falls in love with Lamas. There is the matter of Lamas' mistaking Miss Turner's secretary, Una Merkel, for the rich widow as the fat king (Thomas Gomez) compels him, under penalty of death, to woo the lady for her money so Marshovia may free itself of ruinous debt. Meanwhile, of course, Lamas falls for Miss Turner in her pose as Fifi, a chorus girl. There are a number of comic sequences featuring Marshovian government dignitaries Richard Haydn and John Abbott and police sergeant Marcel Dalio that are genuine rib-ticklers. Paris and Maxim's famous night spot share in the milieu as romance, comedy and song are borne on their merry course through a melodic, eye-filling motion picture.

Running time, 105 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

ury. He said that America should encourage more private investments abroad. He believed that private capital needed a more favorable climate and the assurance of some protection, such as guarantees against expropriation and the assurance of convertibility of earnings into dollars.

Films Big Abroad

Johnston further declared the motion picture producers are doing a bigger business abroad than ever before. Brazil is now the fourth largest market for American films, and Venezuela buys as many pictures as France. He said that two-thirds of all motion pictures produced are American and that 42 per cent of the U. S. film dollar revenue now comes from outside the U.S.A.

He expressed no fear from TV declaring that this new form of entertainment only will stimulate the motion picture industry. "You can't have a capitalistic society unless it is constantly expanding," he added.

Set 'White Christmas' For Crosby-Astaire

"White Christmas," a musical comedy in Technicolor, has been set as a Big Crosby-Fred Astaire co-starring vehicle at Paramount. Based on an original idea by Irving Berlin, it will be filmed next spring for a Christmas, 1953 release.

Norman Krasna has been signed by the studio to write the screenplay, to be produced by Robert Emmett Dolan.

dle West at 8:30 P. M., the peak theatre hour, and the East, too, at a good theatre hour, 60 minutes later, E.D.T.

Reports of theatre attendance from the field were too limited and too contradictory last night to reveal a definite pattern but it appeared certain that the big Republican show had an audience of many millions for the pooled coverage over all networks to 107 TV stations in 65 cities.

Grosses Only Slightly Dented

Nevertheless, with Monday night one of the weak attendance nights normally for most theatres, some exhibitors regarding their only slightly dented grosses were of the opinion that very little of that TV audience would have been theirs had the convention proceedings not been fed to the nation's living rooms. They anticipate perhaps a slightly larger loss of attendance today as convention activities warm up and the worst of the bad news a day or two later as the balloting begins.

The real damage will be done at that juncture, if at all, they expect.

slated to be held later this week at which industry heads will be briefed on the Paris negotiations. The meeting is scheduled to be attended by Eric Johnston, MPAA president, who is due here from Spokane, on Thursday.

It was also learned that either Johnston, or John G. McCarthy, MPAA vice-president and director of international affairs, or both plan to go to Paris when negotiations resume. Tentative plans call for their leaving about July 19.

Alfred W. Crown, foreign distribution head for Samuel Goldwyn Productions and representative of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers at the Paris sessions, returned here late last week and reported to his principals over the weekend. F. W. Allport, London representative of the MPAA, who was present as an MPAA observer, forwarded his report to the Association

The stalemate resulted from continued French insistence on some form of subsidy for the French industry in a new import and conversion agreement. The subsidy principle is opposed by SIMPP and the U. S. State Department, which is conducting the Paris negotiations with French government officials.

Industry executives here pointed out that the negotiations may be resumed in a week or two on the government level in Paris, with or without industry observers present, in the event some compromise formula is propounded. The old agreement with France expired on June 30. No sessions this week are possible, it was said, because of the absence from Paris of key negotiators.

Curb Films of 'Red' Writers

immediately coupled the introduction of the bill with "the grave danger of the increasing tendency toward censorship," and warned against "these tactics of blackmail against media of communications, whether they be newspapers, magazines, or motion picture companies."

Language Not Limiting

McCarthy explained to the Senate that the bill "has to do with the shipment of educational films in interstate commerce," but the language of the bill does not confine its effect to these fields. The prohibition in the bill is against the exhibition "of motion picture films," without language limiting the effect to educational films.

McCarthy said he had his staff pick the names of some of the script writers listed in a catalog entitled "Educational Film Guide." He asserted that he submitted 17 names to the House Un-American Activities Committee, and that of the 17 the Committee said that eight "had very extensive records of Communist-front activities."

The Wisconsin Republican cited only one case, that of Columbia University Professor Robert S. Lynd, whom he said was connected with 23 different organizations listed as subversive. He said that "Lynd and the others on that list are script writers for Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, owned by Senator Benton."

McCarthy argued, "the Communists know that if they can infiltrate our educational system, they can control our nation without firing a shot."

Hired By A. T. & T.

Benton said that Lynd was hired by Western Electric, and only as a consultant. The films he worked on, "The Growth of Cities" and "The Arteries of Cities," were highly technical and gave no opportunity for any type of propaganda, even if Western Electric and American Telephone and Telegraph so desired. Other seven referred to by McCarthy were also hired by AT&T.

Writ Served on UA By Pathe Industries

Chesapeake Industries, formerly Pathe Industries, served United Artists with a summons and writ of attachment for claims aggregating in excess of $200,000 on the eve of the July 4th holiday last Thursday, it was learned yesterday.

The action is an outgrowth of claims and counter-claims involving proceeds from distribution by United Artists of certain former Eagle-Lion films acquired from Pathe Industries last year and other disputed phases of the purchase contract. Total claims by Pathe Industries are in excess of $400,000.

United Artists is preparing an action for counter-claims against P. I. aggregating more than $500,000, company officials stated yesterday. The attachment obtained by P. I. applies to a separate UA fund, held in escrow, the company stated.

Want Heads of Companies On Arbitration

Exhibitors Despair of Progress Otherwise

The task of designing a new industry arbitration system is in a state of suspended animation from which it can be rescued only by the agreement of the presidents of participating distribution companies to engage personally in future conferences with exhibitors on the system, it was learned reliably yesterday.

Arbitration conferences on the basis on which they were initiated in May and continued last month are at an end. Exhibitor participants have taken the position that failure to make appreciable progress in drafting a plan of arbitration is due to the fact that they are not dealing with principals, although they themselves are principals insofar as their organizations are concerned.

The exhibitor delegates, therefore,

COMPO Organizing an All-Industry Campaign On 'Grass Roots' Level

A "grass roots" all-industry drive for the complete elimination of the 20 per cent Federal admission tax was outlined here yesterday by Pat McGee, co-chairman of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' tax committee.

The strategy for repeal of the tax in the next session of Congress was ironed out at an all-day meeting at the Hotel Astor, attended by the COMPO governing committee and some 27 other circuit and industry executives.

Within the next few days, McGee disclosed, exhibitor committees will be organized on the state and Congressional District level to press for repeal of the tax, which the COMPO group labelled "confiscatory."

Col. H. A. Cole, the other co-chairman of the COMPO tax committee, said that he expects to have state and local exhibitor anti-tax committees

Exhibitors Now Asking: Where're the Republicans?

Exhibitors throughout the country who started the week off braced for some hard raps on their box-offices from the free home telecasts of the Republican National Convention proceedings in Chicago were still waiting last night for the first painful feeling.

The second day of the convention telecasts on 107 stations in 65 cities passed very much like the first—no noticeable effect on theatre attendance. Receipts were down mildly here and there, were normal for the day elsewhere, and in a few TV regions there were reports of better than average business.

Executives of national circuits agreed with MOTION PICTURE DAILY's reports from the field that the effects on the box-office, where any were discernible, were extremely slight. Many theatres having television lounges tuned in the convention proceedings for the convenience of their patrons and reported that few people remained for more than a minute or two in the lounges.

Some circuit executives here said yesterday they felt that lack of dramatic highlights at the convention thus far explained the mild effects of the telecasts partially. This could be reversed when the balloting gets under way tomorrow or Friday. Others said the actual effects of the telecast were Both films will be completed by the end of the year. Broidy also reemphasized his belief that there is a market for good "B" pictures.

Colvin Brown, Film Veteran, Dies Here

Colvin W. Brown, veteran film industry executive, died at St. Luke's Hospital here yesterday at the age of 64. Although he had suffered from a heart ailment for some time, Brown was admitted to the hospital only late last week.

After newspaper work in his native Illinois, Brown joined Mutual Film Co. in 1917 in the advertising-publicity department. He was subsequently associated with Gaumont News and was general manager of Associated Screen News; was associated with Al Lichtman in distribution and was manager of distribution for Thomas H. Ince Corp. From 1925 to 1927 he was vice-president and manager of foreign distribution for FBO, predecessor of RKO, and from 1927 to 1930 he was executive vice-president of Pathe Exchange. He joined Quigley Publishing Co. as vice-president and treasurer in 1930, resigning in 1945. At the time of his death he was a director of General Aniline & Film Corp. and of other corporations.

Brown is survived by his widow, Mrs. Regina Brown, and two brothers, Walter of Elgin, Ill., and Capt. James P. Brown, USNR, of Palatine, Ill. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday. Burial will be at Elgin, Ill.

Convention TV Not Hurting

difficult to assay in that the excellent weather over the July 4th weekend hurt business somewhat and an upturn reasonably might have been expected Monday and yesterday as a result. Since there was no actual upturn, the free convention TV may or may not have been responsible.

In any event, exhibitors generally were relieved that the effects on their business the first two days of the convention were as painless as they proved to be.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Chicago exhibitors are finding, so far, that their fears of bad business during the Republican convention were grossly exaggerated. Many circuits and independents here were surprised to find grosses higher yesterday, the first day of the convention, than on the past few Mondays. One circuit executive reported that the action houses were above normal, with the sure-seaters and drive-ins experiencing a drop. (The drive-in drop could be attributed to heavy rain in the evening and reaction after the long holiday weekend.) The downtown houses, benefitting from an influx of visitors, with the hotels filled to capacity, did well above average business, but the unexpected factor was good business in the outlying theatres.

COLUMBUS, O., July 8.—Even though Ohio exhibitors resorted to no special efforts to counteract anticipated damaging box-office effects from telecasts of the Republican national convention, receipts thus far this week are not noticeably off. Normal business is reported by both downtown and neighborhood theatres. Some loss in attendance is expected when the convention gets down to balloting.

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—There has been no noticeable drop in first-run grosses this week and neighborhood attendance has been affected only slightly by the Republican convention telecasts. Exhibitors generally are agreed that they noticed the effects of the Bob Hope-Bing Crosby Telethon for the Olympic Team fund-raising last month far more. They feel now that the two political conventions will do their business far less damage than they had anticipated in advance.

BOSTON, July 8.—Box office business here was normal yesterday and today. Some theatres reported grosses a little above average. Exhibitors are revising their appraisal of the effects on attendance of the Republican convention telecasts and now believe that business will continue normal throughout the week, except for the possibility of some dramatic development when balloting begins. The check-up here was made in neighborhoods with the highest TV set saturation.

CLEVELAND, July 8.—Theatre business here yesterday and today was only slightly below average despite the Republican national convention telecasts. The most noticeable drop in attendance was at the class neighborhood houses. No particular effort is being made by Cleveland exhibitors to combat the telecast competition.

NEW ORLEANS, July 8.—New Orleans, getting its first TV this week, showed no apparent loss of theatre attendance to the Republican convention telecasts. Business this week is mild but not abnormal, with exhibitors attributing conditions as much to the post-holiday weekend letdown as to the telecasts.

voiced their intent of dealing only with company presidents in the future. If the company presidents decline to sit and negotiate with them, it appears at this juncture that efforts to draft an arbitration plan will be at an end for the present.

Attitude Unanimous

The exhibitor attitude is unanimous. It is not confined to any single organization. Inability to make further progress last week around the conference table on disputed phases of arbitration of competitive bidding complaints led to the exhibitor stand and the adjournment of last week's sessions after two and one-half days of conferences with little or no progress resulting. The exhibitors attribute the inability to make progress to the lack of complete and final authority of the distribution executives and attorneys with whom they have been negotiating, and the resultant necessity for those executives to consult with and obtain instructions from their principals.

A previous stalemate in the arbitration conferences was overcome when it was decided to reduce the negotiating body from the original large and unwieldy conference group to a negotiating committee of 10. The new stalemate developed when exhibitors felt that the new arrangement was producing, and promised, no better results than the original.

meeting by next week. Chairmen and members of the 48 state committees will be named shortly, it was added.

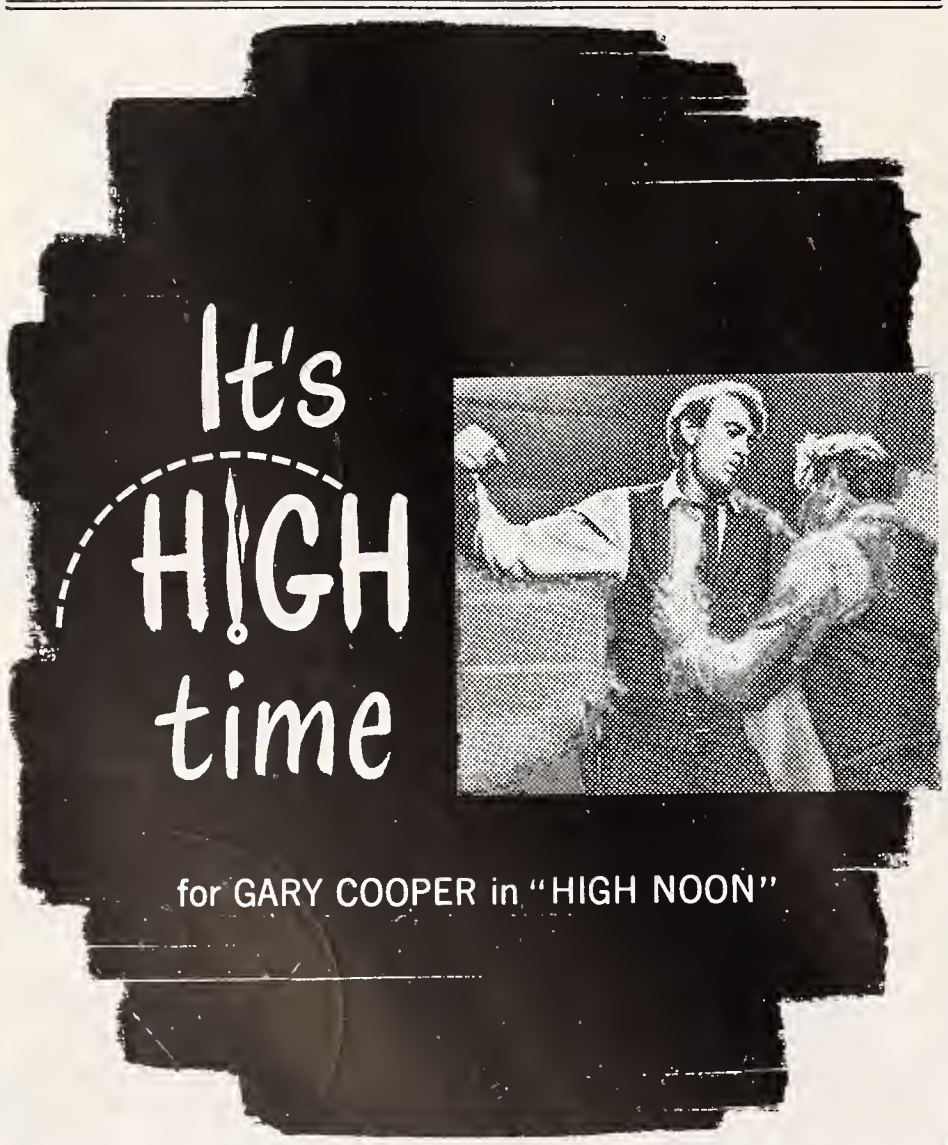
At the same time, it was disclosed that the anti-tax campaign will be financed through the COMPO general fund. In order to build up the fund, Al Lichtman, a member of COMPO's three-man governing board, announced that the week of Aug. 11-18 has been designated for a COMPO dues collection drive, at which time all exhibitors will be canvassed by film salesmen with dues pledge cards.

Current plans call for the naming of a co-ordinator, or perhaps geographical co-ordinators to tie-in the efforts of anti-tax exhibitor committees.

No Appeal to Public

The 30-man tax group, it was stated, agreed that no appeal for aid in the fight would be made to the general public, and that there would be no direction from the general COMPO tax committee to the exhibitor on whether he should or should not pass on the tax saving to the public.

Members of the general COMPO tax committee expressed their conviction that "there is good reason to believe that the drive will be successful." The need and the urgency of every exhibitor to get behnd the drive was underlined by Samuel Pinanski, a member of the COMPO governing triumvirate.



Declared Pinanski: "We're seeking to get relief for an industry that's being crushed by taxation." Pinanski added that he has eight houses closed that would be open today if the Federal admission tax was repealed.

The committee said it had statistics showing that the total taxes collected from exhibitors throughout the nation, both on the national and local level, in 1951 was seven times the net profits earned by all theatres that year.

Col. Cole, while pointing out that the tax could only be repealed at the next session of Congress which convenes in January, said he hoped by that time to have every lawmaker convinced of the injustice of the tax. There will be constant pressure in the intervening time by exhibitors to eliminate the tax, he added. The rest should be a "mopping up" operation, Cole declared.

Remaining in New York for the next few days to "tie up loose ends" will be Cole, McGee, Trueman T. Rembusch, a member of the COMPO governing triumvirate, and Pinanski, it was disclosed.

Others attending the meeting were: Abe Berenson, Lou Johns, Robert Bryant, A. Julian Brylawski, E. D. Martin, Alfred Starr, Martin J. Mullin, Mort Sunshine Howard Bryant, Dick Pitts, D. Review

"The Big Sky"

(Winchester-RKO Pictures)

A BIG SPRAWLING WESTERN crammed with violence, suspense, battles with Indians and evil white men, and touched off with a bit of romance, has been fashioned by Howard Hawks in "The Big Sky." The picture rolls on tirelessly and shows considerable substance in its 140 minutes of running time, but at times it suggests the need for sharper cutting. Kirk Douglas and Dewey Martin play the leads as a pair of steel-fisted Kentucky mountaineers who wander into a keelboat expedition up the uncharted Missouri River in 1830. Elizabeth Threatt provides the feminine allure as an Indian girl who is taken along as a hostage in order that the expedition's safety be insured among hostile Indians in the Northwest, with whom it is desired to establish a trading post.

After some tumultuous beginnings, the expedition gets underway and the first encounter with adventure is provided by a dangerous stretch of rapids. As the voyage goes on there is the constant outbreak of violence from the Indians. These battle scenes are excitingly staged. Then there are assorted encounters with the white marauders of opposition agents who also are bent on establishing trading posts. The screenplay, by Dudley Nichols, gradually develops a love rivalry between Douglas and Martin for the Indian girl. As the story wends its perilous way the latter finally marries Miss Threatt in a spirited Indian ceremony. Arthur Hunnicutt, as a grizzled, Indian-wise scout, provides excellent support along with the giant Buddy Baer, a sort of watchdog of the expedition.

Hawks, who produced and directed this Winchester Pictures presentation, provides the exhibitor with a solid piece of Western merchandise. The devotee of the large-scale Western will find in it enough "meat" to satisfy the heartiest of appetites.

The film was based on the novel of the same name by A. B. Guthrie, Jr. Edward Lasker was associate producer of the ambitious undertaking.

Running time, 140 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Ernest V. The entire issue of American Weekly for August 31 will be devoted to motion pictures, and there are rumors afloat that the newspapers represented across the board will conduct their own poll this fall with balloting direct by the public at the point of sale, to determine what is really the best picture of the year, in terms of box-office appeal.

The current Collier's, now on the stands, has a fine feature story on Barbara Stanwyck, illustrated in color, by Frank Nugent, which theatremen can file and post with appropriate playdates, as a special lobby display. * Pictures featured in M. P. Daily advertising during past 6 weeks.

The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.

Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

Want Heads of Companies On Arbitration

Exhibitors Despair of Progress Otherwise

The task of designing a new industry arbitration system is in a state of suspended animation from which it can be rescued only by the agreement of the presidents of participating distribution companies to engage personally in future conferences with exhibitors on the system, it was learned reliably yesterday.

Arbitration conferences on the basis on which they were initiated in May and continued last month are at an end. Exhibitor participants have taken the position that failure to make appreciable progress in drafting a plan of arbitration is due to the fact that they are not dealing with principals, although they themselves are principals insofar as their organizations are concerned.

The exhibitor delegates, therefore,

"Paramount's Greater Confidence Parade of 1952," designated by A. W. COMPO Organizing an All-Industry Campaign On 'Grass Roots' Level

A "grass roots" all-industry drive for the complete elimination of the 20 per cent Federal admission tax was outlined here yesterday by Pat McGee, co-chairman of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' tax committee.

The strategy for repeal of the tax in the next session of Congress was ironed out at an all-day meeting at the Hotel Astor, attended by the COMPO governing committee and some 27 other circuit and industry executives.

Within the next few days, McGee disclosed, exhibitor committees will be organized on the state and Congressional District level to press for repeal of the tax, which the COMPO group labelled "confiscatory."

Col. H. A. Cole, the other co-chairman of the COMPO tax committee, said that he expects to have state and local exhibitor anti-tax committees

Broidy Sets Plans For Two in England

Arrangements for the production of two pictures in England in association with Associated British Pictures Corp., were made by Steve Broidy, president of Monogram-Allied Artists, who has just returned from two weeks abroad. Walter Mirisch, company production head, is remaining in England to iron out final details, according to Broidy. Both films will be completed by the end of the year.

Broidy re-emphasized his belief that there is a market here for good "B" pictures. "Exhibitors need them and the customers want them," he said.

To support his point, Broidy stressed that "Monogram is now playing to more and better theatres here and in Great Britain," than ever before.

Studio Workers' Pay Jumps to $112 a Week

HOLLYWOOD, July 8.—Weekly earnings of studio craft workers for May averaged $112.61, according to the monthly bulletin of the California Department of Industrial Relations. The average for April was $110.40, and for May a year ago it was $103.72.

Exhibitors Now Asking: Where're the Republicans?

Exhibitors throughout the country who started the week off braced for some hard raps on their box-offices from the free home telecasts of the Republican National Convention proceedings in Chicago were still waiting last night for the first painful feeling.

The second day of the convention telecasts on 107 stations in 65 cities passed very much like the first—no noticeable effect on theatre attendance. Receipts were down mildly here and there, were normal for the day elsewhere, and in a few TV regions there were reports of better than average business.

Executives of national circuits agreed with MOTION PICTURE DAILY'S reports from the field that the effects on the box-office, where any were discernible, were extremely slight. Many theatres having television lounges tuned in the convention proceedings for the convenience of their patrons and reported that few people remained for more than a minute or two in the lounges.

Some circuit executives here said yesterday they felt that lack of dramatic highlights at the convention thus far explained the mild effects of the telecasts partially. This could be reversed when the balloting gets under way tomorrow or Friday. Others said the actual effects of the telecast were

Colvin W. Brown, veteran film industry executive, died at St. Luke's Hospital here yesterday at the age of 64. Although he had suffered from a heart ailment for some time, Brown was admitted to the hospital only late last week.

After newspaper work in his native Illinois, Brown joined Mutual Film Co. in 1917 in the advertising-publicity department. He was subsequently associated with Gaumont News and was general manager of Associated Screen News; was associated with Al Lichtman in distribution and was manager of distribution for Thomas H. Ince Corp. From 1925 to 1927 he was vice-president and manager of foreign distribution for FBO, predecessor of RKO, and from 1927 to 1930 he was executive vice-president of Pathe Exchange. He joined Quigley Publishing Co. as vice-president and treasurer in 1930, resigning in 1945. At the time of his death he was a director of General Aniline & Film Corp. and of other corporations.

Brown is survived by his widow, Mrs. Regina Brown, and two brothers, Walter of Elgin, Ill., and Capt. James P. Brown, USNR, of Palatine, Ill. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday. Burial will be at Elgin, Ill.

difficult to assay in that the excellent weather over the July 4th weekend hurt business somewhat and an upturn reasonably might have been expected Monday and yesterday as a result. Since there was no actual upturn, the free convention TV may or may not have been responsible.

In any event, exhibitors generally were relieved that the effects on their business the first two days of the convention were as painless as they proved to be.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Chicago exhibitors are finding, so far, that their fears of bad business during the Republican convention were grossly exaggerated. Many circuits and independents here were surprised to find grosses higher yesterday, the first day of the convention, than on the past few Mondays. One circuit executive reported that the action houses were above normal, with the sure-seaters and drive-ins experiencing a drop. (The drive-in drop could be attributed to heavy rain in the evening and reaction after the long holiday weekend.) The downtown houses, benefitting from an influx of visitors, with the hotels filled to capacity, did well above average business, but the unexpected factor was good business in the outlying theatres.

COLUMBUS, O., July 8.—Even though Ohio exhibitors resorted to no special efforts to counteract anticipated damaging box-office effects from telecasts of the Republican national convention, receipts thus far this week are not noticeably off. Normal business is reported by both downtown and neighborhood theatres. Some loss in attendance is expected when the convention gets down to balloting.

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—There has been no noticeable drop in first-run grosses this week and neighborhood attendance has been affected only slightly by the Republican convention telecasts. Exhibitors generally are agreed that they noticed the effects of the Bob Hope-Bing Crosby Telethon for the Olympic Team fund-raising last month far more. They feel now that the two political conventions will do their business far less damage than they had anticipated in advance.

BOSTON, July 8.—Box office business here was normal yesterday and today. Some theatres reported grosses a little above average. Exhibitors are revising their appraisal of the effects on attendance of the Republican convention telecasts and now believe that business will continue normal throughout the week, except for the possibility of some dramatic development when balloting begins. The check-up here was made in neighborhoods with the highest TV set saturation.

CLEVELAND, July 8.—Theatre business here yesterday and today was only slightly below average despite the Republican national convention telecasts. The most noticeable drop in attendance was at the class neighborhood houses. No particular effort is being made by Cleveland exhibitors to combat the telecast competition.

NEW ORLEANS, July 8.—New Orleans, getting its first TV this week, showed no apparent loss of theatre attendance to the Republican convention telecasts. Business this week is mild but not abnormal, with exhibitors attributing conditions as much to the post-holiday weekend letdown as to the telecasts.

The drive will cover such productions as "Just For You," "Caribbean," "Somebody Loves Me," "Hurricane Smith," "The Turning Point," and "The Savage."

Beedle Resignation Not Accepted by Unit

PITTSBURGH, July 8.—The executive committee of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Western Pennsylvania today refused to accept the resignation of Fred Beedle of Canonsburg as president. Arbitration voiced their intent of dealing only with company presidents in the future. If the company presidents decline to sit and negotiate with them, it appears at this juncture that efforts to draft an arbitration plan will be at an end for the present.

Attitude Unanimous

The exhibitor attitude is unanimous. It is not confined to any single organization. Inability to make further progress last week around the conference table on disputed phases of arbitration of competitive bidding complaints led to the exhibitor stand and the adjournment of last week's sessions after two and one-half days of conferences with little or no progress resulting. The exhibitors attribute the inability to make progress to the lack of complete and final authority of the distribution executives and attorneys with whom they have been negotiating, and the resultant necessity for those executives to consult with and obtain instructions from their principals.

A previous stalemate in the arbitration conferences was overcome when it was decided to reduce the negotiating body from the original large and unwieldy conference group to a negotiating committee of 10. The new stalemate developed when exhibitors felt that the new arrangement was producing, and promised, no better results than the original.

meeting by next week. Chairmen and members of the 48 state committees will be named shortly, it was added.

At the same time, it was disclosed that the anti-tax campaign will be financed through the COMPO general fund. In order to build up the fund, Al Lichtman, a member of COMPO's three-man governing board, announced that the week of Aug. 11-18 has been designated for a COMPO dues collection drive, at which time all exhibitors will be canvassed by film salesmen with dues pledge cards.

Current plans call for the naming of a co-ordinator, or perhaps geographical co-ordinators to tie-in the efforts of anti-tax exhibitor committees.

No Appeal to Public

The 30-man tax group, it was stated, agreed that no appeal for aid in the fight would be made to the general public, and that there would be no direction from the general COMPO tax committee to the exhibitor on whether he should or should not pass on the tax saving to the public.

Members of the general COMPO tax committee expressed their conviction that "there is good reason to believe that the drive will be successful." The need and the urgency of every exhibitor to get behnd the drive was underlined by Samuel Pinanski, a member of the COMPO governing triumvirate.

Declared Pinanski: "We're seeking to get relief for an industry that's being crushed by taxation." Pinanski added that he has eight houses closed that would be open today if the Federal admission tax was repealed.

The committee said it had statistics showing that the total taxes collected from exhibitors throughout the nation, both on the national and local level, in 1951 was seven times the net profits earned by all theatres that year.

Col. Cole, while pointing out that the tax could only be repealed at the next session of Congress which convenes in January, said he hoped by that time to have every lawmaker convinced of the injustice of the tax. There will be constant pressure in the intervening time by exhibitors to eliminate the tax, he added. The rest should be a "mopping up" operation, Cole declared.

Remaining in New York for the next few days to "tie up loose ends" will be Cole, McGee, Trueman T. Rembusch, a member of the COMPO governing triumvirate, and Pinanski, it was disclosed.

Others attending the meeting were: Abe Berenson, Lou Johns, Robert Bryant, A. Julian Brylawski, E. D. Martin, Alfred Starr, Martin J. Mullin, Mort Sunshine Howard Bryant, Dick Pitts, D. Review

"The Big Sky"

(Winchester-RKO Pictures)

A BIG SPRAWLING WESTERN crammed with violence, suspense, battles with Indians and evil white men, and touched off with a bit of romance, has been fashioned by Howard Hawks in "The Big Sky." The picture rolls on tirelessly and shows considerable substance in its 140 minutes of running time, but at times it suggests the need for sharper cutting. Kirk Douglas and Dewey Martin play the leads as a pair of steel-fisted Kentucky mountaineers who wander into a keelboat expedition up the uncharted Missouri River in 1830. Elizabeth Threatt provides the feminine allure as an Indian girl who is taken along as a hostage in order that the expedition's safety be insured among hostile Indians in the Northwest, with whom it is desired to establish a trading post.

After some tumultuous beginnings, the expedition gets underway and the first encounter with adventure is provided by a dangerous stretch of rapids. As the voyage goes on there is the constant outbreak of violence from the Indians. These battle scenes are excitingly staged. Then there are assorted encounters with the white marauders of opposition agents who also are bent on establishing trading posts. The screenplay, by Dudley Nichols, gradually develops a love rivalry between Douglas and Martin for the Indian girl. As the story wends its perilous way the latter finally marries Miss Threatt in a spirited Indian ceremony. Arthur Hunnicutt, as a grizzled, Indian-wise scout, provides excellent support along with the giant Buddy Baer, a sort of watchdog of the expedition.

Hawks, who produced and directed this Winchester Pictures presentation, provides the exhibitor with a solid piece of Western merchandise. The devotee of the large-scale Western will find in it enough "meat" to satisfy the heartiest of appetites.

The film was based on the novel of the same name by A. B. Guthrie, Jr. Edward Lasker was associate producer of the ambitious undertaking.

Running time, 140 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Seven Majors File Percentage Suits

HOUSTON, July 8.—The Bryan Amusement Co., operating the Queen, Palace and New Dixie theatres in Bryan, Texas, has been named in seven percentage actions filed in Federal Court here. The actions, by Paramount, Loew's, 20th Century-Fox, Warner, RKO Pictures, United Artists and Universal, ask recovery for damages based on alleged under-reporting of receipts on percentage engagements.

Thompson, Knight, Wright and Simmons, of Dallas, represent the distributors with Sargoy and Stein, New York, of counsel.

ARLENE DAHL must be running for Vice-President. Recently she appeared on the front covers of Look, Collier's, Quick and Life, with four pages, including a center double-spread of Arlene in her nightie, in the latter magazine. Then, she appeared again last Sunday on the front cover of the rotogravure color section of the New York Daily News, with all of these appearances adding up to a combined circulation of 16,700,000. Constant readers will feel well acquainted, except they may disagree as to the exact shade of her red hair. What we want to see is a full-page, full-color picture of Arlene's press agent, blushing with modest pride for his superior accomplishment.

Ernest V. Heyn, new editor of Hearst's American Weekly, is a veteran of the fan magazine field, and maybe that's another reason why you will find this widely-read Sunday newspaper magazine with its 20,000,000 readership, hewing closely to the box-office line. The entire issue of American Weekly for August 31 will be devoted to motion pictures, and there are rumors afloat that the newspapers represented across the board will conduct their own poll this fall with balloting direct by the public at the point of sale, to determine what is really the best picture of the year, in terms of box-office appeal.

The July* Seventeen, now current, has a two-page feature story on Dale Robertson, star of "Lydia Bailey," under the title, "Soft Drawl in High Boots."

The current Collier's, now on the stands, has a fine feature story on Barbara Stanwyck, illustrated in color, by Frank Nugent, which theatremen can file and post with appropriate playdates, as a special lobby display. Continuing publicity for 20th Century-Fox's "Lydia Bailey" turned up in last Sunday's issue of This Week with a color picture and story about Anne Francis, written by Louis Berg. Corine Calvet is very decorative in off-stage cheesecake photographs in the July 16 issue of People Today. Add to Paramount's colorful pre-selling of "The Greatest Show on Earth" the new packet of souvenir post cards which are now available to theatres and retail stores, or for free distribution, at the discretion of the exhibitor.

The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.

Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

Exhibitors to Help Test Ohio Censors Law

Will Show Unlicensed Newsreels Next Week

COLUMBUS, O., July 9.—Five independent exhibitors have agreed to join distributors in what is believed to be the first deliberate exhibition of a motion picture without the license of a censor board in a state wherein a license is required, to test the legality of censorship.

Specifically, the move is intended to test the legality of Ohio's censoring of newsreels and is backed by the five major newsreel distributors and the Motion Picture Association of America. Each of the five will furnish an identical reel consisting of regular newsreel footage not submitted in advance to the Division of Education of the Ohio Department of Education for approval. The reel will carry the identifying title of "American News." The newsreels will also service their regular reels which will be submitted in advance to the censors for licenses.

The five theatres will start showing

N. Y. Law Is Attacked

ALBANY, N. Y., July 9.—Another court test of state censorship and constitutional rights advanced a step further here yesterday when notice of appeal was filed with the clerk of the New York Court of Appeals from an Appellate Court decision of June 16 upholding the banning of the French film, "La Ronde", by the State Board of Regents.

Mrs. Florence Shientag, New York attorney, filed for Raymond Hakim and Commercial Pictures, U. S. distributors of the imported production, stating that the ban was arbitrary and capricious and that the state statute under which an exhibition license was refused was unconstitutional, a restraint of constitutional rights, and a denial of the rights to free speech. The complaint denies that the picture is immoral, as charged by the Regents Board in refusing a license.

In a three-to-two split by the Appellate Court, the minority decision by presiding Justice Sydney F. Foster and Justice O. Byron declared that the New York statute providing for censorship is unconstitutional.

The meeting, which will get underway at 11:00 A.M., will take place at MPAA headquarters here. Although there was no official statement as to the agenda, it is believed that an attempt will be made to end the stalemate on negotiations to set up an industry arbitration system.

The call for a meeting of distribution executives and attorneys who took part in recent arbitration talks came after exhibitor delegates expressed the sentiment that the arbi-

UK Exhibitors Hit Critics of Theatre Quota Defaulters

By PETER BURNUP

LLANDUDNO, NORTH WALES, July 9.—The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, in annual convention here, today decided to strike back at Parliamentary critics of theatre quota defaulters.

Plans were made to prepare documentary evidence of the impossibility of meeting the quota in every instance; to vigorously contest and defend all exhibitors who may be prosecuted for quota defaults, and to brief friends of the industry in Parliament on quota problems and implications of strict enforcement of the law in order that they will be able to intelligently reply to critics in Commons in the future.

The program of action resulted from high resentment among convention delegates to the recent attacks on exhibitor quota defaulters by Members of Parliament who are regarded as mouthpieces for Left Wing studio unions furthering an anti-American campaign. M-G-M's Empire Theatre was particularly singled out for criticism as a quota defaulter.

The discussion was touched off at the convention today by Theo Fligelstone, former C.E.A. president, who said that quota defaults are due solely to a lack of suitable product. He charged that a reign of terror is being promoted by a Commons clique in order to blackmail exhibitors into playing worthless second features and documentaries which drive patrons away from the theatres.

The purpose of the Quota Act, it was pointed out by convention speakers, is to improve the standard of production, whereas the present supporting program quota of 25 per cent not only is encouraging the production of "quickies" but is driving away customers.

Meet Tomorrow on France and Japan

The deadlock in the French pact negotiations and the situation in Japan will highlight a meeting of foreign sales managers and company presidents, called for tomorrow at the Motion Picture Association of America headquarters. Eric Johnston, MPAA president, will attend.

A decision is also expected to be reached tomorrow on whether Johnston or John G. McCarthy, MPAA vice-president and director of international affairs, will go to Paris when negotiations resume for a new French film agreement.

A meeting of foreign sales managers was held yesterday at which McCarthy briefed the group on the recent Paris talks.

Hollingshead, 60, Dies on the Coast

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.—Funeral services for Gordon Hollingshead, 60, head of Warner Brothers short subjects production who died at his home in Balboa, Cal. yesterday, will be held Friday at 11 A.M. at Forest Lawn.

Hollingshead won 12 Academy Awards for short subjects and was nominated 36 times for the Academy Award. Many of his Awards were won for patriotic short subjects.

He had been head of short subject production for Warner since 1938 and had been with the company since 1925. He was honored by the studio on April 15, 1950 on his 25th anniversary with Warner.

Hollingshead started his film career in 1914 as a part-time actor at the old Tannhauser Studio in New Rochelle, N. Y. He served in World War I in the Signal Corps as a photographer and was selected by General Pershing to act the lead in a series of educational films designed to prepare troops for their return to civilian life. When he was demobilized, he moved from New York to Hollywood, following the industry, and became an assistant director. In 1938, the company switched all short subject production to the studio here, and put Hollingshead in charge.

He was active here until a couple of weeks ago when he had a heart attack. He is survived by his widow; Axeliane; two daughters, Mrs. Ebba Webb and Mrs. H. R. Ring; a stepson, Otto Hoeg; five grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. Hettie Bryant, and a nephew, Gordon Murray.

Test Law

the test reel on Wednesday, July 16. The exhibitors and distributors will then sit back and await whatever legal action may be taken by the state board —if any. The industry is certain to carry a court test to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Announcement of the test was made jointly here today by the five theatres and the MPAA. The test is designed "to strike down censorship and give the newsreels full equality under the Constitution with other media of communications, information and expression," it was stated.

Follows Court Decisions

The move follows the recent decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court which said in "The Miracle" and the "Pinky" cases that motion pictures are entitled to the free speech and free press guarantees of the Constitution.

Ohio is one of the few states in America that requires newsreels to have a censor's okay and one of seven states censoring all motion pictures before they can be shown to the public.

The five theatres that will show the uncensored newsreels are:

Little Theatre, Columbus; Lower Mall Theatre, Cleveland; Westwood, Toledo Park, Cincinnati; and Palace, Youngstown. The exhibitors conducting the test are members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, of which Robert A. Wile is executive secretary. Wile and Manning Clagett of the MPAA, New York, jointly released the announcement of the test.

E. J. Hofheimer of the Little Theatre, Columbus, said in a joint statement issued by the exhibitors:

"As exhibitors we are pleased to cooperate in this test. The press and other media of communications are not censored, and should not of course be censored. In our judgment, there is no more justification to censor the newsreel than to censor the newspaper.

"The people not only of Columbus but all the people in Ohio and in the United States have a vital stake in the outcome of this test. It is their freedom, in reality, that is at issue.

"We feel sure that public-spirited citizens who believe in freedom want to make their own decisions as to what they read, see or hear. They don't want somebody else to usurp their constitutional rights and make their decisions for them."

Eric Johnston, MPAA president, said:

"In cooperation with the five exhibitors in Ohio, we are deliberately making this move to invite a court test of newsreel censorship.

"In view of the Supreme Court's recent decisions, it is certainly clear that censorship of newsreels violates the provisions of the Constitution that safeguard freedom of expression in the United States.

"We had hoped that the Ohio censors, upon reading the Supreme Court's decisions, would have promptly on their own discontinued censoring the newsreels. As they did not, we have no recourse but to get the issue into the courts.

"We are supremely confident of the outcome. Surely the courts in Ohio, in light of what the Supreme Court has said, will quickly hold that censorship of newsreels cannot longer be permitted."

Johnston said that other legal moves would be made, in Ohio and elsewhere, to kill censorship—prior restraint—of all motion pictures.

Loew's Economy Program

cided that M-G-M will make 38 films in the next fiscal year, beginning September 1. The company had 42 releases in the current fiscal year, counting "Quo Vadis" and "Ivanhoe," both of which were in a "special" sales category.

The Schenck-Schary statement said that an average cost for the 38 films has been determined "which we believe is consistent with present box-office conditions. Our budget will be aimed at eliminating waste factors which have resulted from lush operations in former lush years."

The salary cuts, the statement said, will apply to those in the over $1,000 a week brackets throughout the entire executive staff and officers in Hollywood, New York and overseas, "including ourselves." It is designed to "provide leadership in the drive of economy," the Schenck-Schary statement asserted, and "no part of the salary given up during this period will be returned under any circumstances."

"There will be reductions in the number of producers, directors and writers who will be kept on a permanent contract basis," the statement continued. "Those remaining under contract with the studio will be required to turn out a greater number of films in the effort to reduce studio overhead."

Indicating that personnel will be pruned where possible, the statement said that "We have also consolidated effort in various departments and there will be some reduction in the numbers of people in these departments. We will insist that everyone give as much as he can to the job for which he is paid. For these reasons, and because we intend to make this insistence a sharp one, we do not contemplate any direct 'across-the-board' salary cuts; nor are we contemplating any wholesale discharge of employes.

"We plan to insure the level of salaries by requiring a full-time job in exchange for a full week's salary."

"We will continue to provide opportunity for young directing, acting producing and writing talent," the statement continued, "and such talent will be channeled through a planned program of films. Casting and cost factors will be altered to suit individual projects in this program.

"We have analyzed during these conferences the cost of waste factors, such as tardiness, interference, temperament, lack of preparation and loss of working time, of all talent working at the studio. As a result, each person in every field of activity concerned with the making of films has been asked and has agreed to cooperate more fully in eliminating these factors."

The statement pointed out that the conferences leading to formulation of the program had included top executive personnel, creative talent and labor leaders. All phases of studio operations were examined and the conferences were unhurried.

"We wanted to be certain," the statement said, "that decisions made as a result of these conferences would be practical and reflect care and judgment. Too often adjustments have been temporary because they have been based on panic and, consequently, on injudicious thinking."

C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's vice-president and treasurer, participated in the conferences during a three weeks period and Howard Dietz, vice-president in charge of advertising-publicity, was at the sessions for a week from the home office.

Schenck will conclude his six weeks stay here on Friday when he leaves for New York by train. Howard Strickling, studio publicity head, also will leave for New York this week-end, arriving there Monday.

MGM Has No Plans For Films for TV

Culver City, July 9.—"At the present time we have no plan, nor are we contemplating any plan for television filming," Nicholas M. Schenck and Dore Schary told the studio organization in their statement of policy here today.

"The field of television production," they said, "is one which will be examined and re-examined as time goes on, because the economic factors involved are ever changing." But no plan for M-G-M to enter that field exists now, they emphasized.

Para. Hearings

centrating on the elimination of the anti-trust phase, following the joint action late Tuesday by UPT, ABC and the Columbia Broadcasting System of a similar plea which stressed the urgency of getting the merger question settled by September so that ABC could plan television programming schedules for the winter season.

Should the FCC accept this proposal, it would mean that the license of Paramount station KTLA in Los Angeles would be renewed on a permanent basis, the merger of ABC and UPT consummated, and the sale of UPT television station WBKB, Chicago also approved.

The FCC broadcast bureau, whose attorneys, headed by Frederick Ford, have been arguing the commission's side of the case in the hearings, will, however, oppose this step. He is expected to file his reply within a few days.

And DuMont, whose status also is involved, as to whether or not it is actually controlled by Paramount, also will file a reply petition early next week, according to attorney Morton Galane. Under the proposed action, the DuMont phase also would be decided directly by the commission.

Galane said DuMont's position had not been fully determined, but that it is likely the company will not take a stand one way or the other on the elimination of the anti-trust issue, but will insist on an examiner's report before the matter is taken up by the full commission.

The petitions of the other parties asked that the hearings be canceled and the report of examiner Leo Resnick waived, and that the commission itself issue the final decision after a 20-day period for the filing of proposed findings by all those concerned.

tration talks could only be rescued if distribution company presidents personally participated in future arbitration conferences. The position of many exhibitor delegates is that they are not dealing with principals, although they, themselves are principals representing various exhibitor organizations.

Exhibitors to Help Test Ohio Censors Law

Will Show Unlicensed Newsreels Next Week

COLUMBUS, O., July 9.—Five independent exhibitors have agreed to join distributors in what is believed to be the first deliberate exhibition of a motion picture without the license of a censor board in a state wherein a license is required, to test the legality of censorship.

Specifically, the move is intended to test the legality of Ohio's censoring of newsreels and is backed by the five major newsreel distributors and the Motion Picture Association of America. Each of the five will furnish an identical reel consisting of regular newsreel footage not submitted in advance to the Division of Education of the Ohio Department of Education for approval. The reel will carry the identifying title of "American News." The newsreels will also service their regular reels which will be submitted in advance to the censors for licenses.

The five theatres will start showing

Plan Big TV Center For Manhattan

New York City officials and television industry representatives are scouting around in Manhattan for property to build an all-inclusive television center, Walter T. Shirley, city Commissioner of Commerce, disclosed here yesterday at a luncheon Meeting of the National Television Film Council, held at the Warwick Hotel.

Shirley said that four or five sites are currently being considered for the project.

Hopes for Early Move on Bldg. Ban

WASHINGTON, July 9. — The National Production Authority today promised early reconsideration of the ban on motion picture theatre and other amusement construction, once the steel strike is ended.

The promise is contained in a letter from NPA Administrator Henry H. Fowler to J. Robert Hoff, president of the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association.

N. Y. Law Is Attacked

ALBANY, N. Y., July 9.—Another court test of state censorship and constitutional rights advanced a step further here yesterday when notice of appeal was filed with the clerk of the New York Court of Appeals from an Appellate Court decision of June 16 upholding the banning of the French film, "La Ronde", by the State Board of Regents.

Mrs. Florence Shientag, New York attorney, filed for Raymond Hakim and Commercial Pictures, U. S. distributors of the imported production, stating that the ban was arbitrary and capricious and that the state statute under which an exhibition license was refused was unconstitutional, a restraint of constitutional rights, and a denial of the rights to free speech. The complaint denies that the picture is immoral, as charged by the Regents Board in refusing a license.

In a three-to-two split by the Appelate Court, the minority decision by presiding Justice Sydney F. Foster and Justice O. Byron declared that the New York statute providing for censorship is unconstitutional.

LOEW'S ECONOMY PROGRAM IS SET

Nicholas Schenck Dore Schary

Executive Salary Cuts; 38 Films at Realistic Cost; Full Day's Work

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.—A program calling for a general tightening up of operations in the interests of greater efficiency and including salary cuts of 25 to 50 per cent on amounts over $1,000 per week for a period of one year was announced by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, and Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production and studio operations at the Culver City studio today.

The program, which resulted from five and one-half weeks of conferences here by Schenck with company officials, was disclosed to a mass meeting of nearly 4,000 M-G-M studio employes.

Its primary objective, the company heads stated, is "to adjust our economy to meet potential box office returns, and at the same time maintain traditional quality."

As part of the program it was de-

A meeting of distribution representatives to the Conference on Arbitration has been called for today by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

The meeting, which will get underway at 11:00 A.M., will take place at MPAA headquarters here. Although there was no official statement as to the agenda, it is believed that an attempt will be made to end the stalemate on negotiations to set up an industry arbitration system.

The call for a meeting of distribution executives and attorneys who took part in recent arbitration talks came after exhibitor delegates expressed the sentiment that the arbi-

UK Exhibitors Hit Critics of Theatre Quota Defaulters

By PETER BURNUP

LLANDUDNO, NORTH WALES, July 9.—The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, in annual convention here, today decided to strike back at Parliamentary critics of theatre quota defaulters.

Plans were made to prepare documentary evidence of the impossibility of meeting the quota in every instance; to vigorously contest and defend all exhibitors who may be prosecuted for quota defaults, and to brief friends of the industry in Parliament on quota problems and implications of strict enforcement of the law in order that they will be able to intelligently reply to critics in Commons in the future.

The program of action resulted from high resentment among convention delegates to the recent attacks on exhibitor quota defaulters by Members of Parliament who are regarded as mouthpieces for Left Wing studio unions furthering an anti-American campaign. M-G-M's Empire Theatre was particularly singled out for criticism as a quota defaulter.

The discussion was touched off at the convention today by Theo Fligelstone, former C.E.A. president, who said that quota defaults are due solely to a lack of suitable product. He charged that a reign of terror is being promoted by a Commons clique in order to blackmail exhibitors into playing worthless second features and documentaries which drive patrons away from the theatres.

The purpose of the Quota Act, it was pointed out by convention speakers, is to improve the standard of production, whereas the present supporting program quota of 25 per cent not only is encouraging the production of "quickies" but is driving away customers.

Hollingshead, 60, Dies on the Coast

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.—Funeral services for Gordon Hollingshead, 60, head of Warner Brothers short subjects production who died at his home in Balboa, Cal. yesterday, will be held Friday at 11 A.M. at Forest Lawn.

Hollingshead won 12 Academy Awards for short subjects and was nominated 36 times for the Academy Award. Many of his Awards were won for patriotic short subjects.

He had been head of short subject production for Warner since 1938 and had been with the company since 1925. He was honored by the studio on April 15, 1950 on his 25th anniversary with Warner.

Hollingshead started his film career in 1914 as a part-time actor at the old Tannhauser Studio in New Rochelle, N. Y. He served in World War I in the Signal Corps as a photographer and was selected by General Pershing to act the lead in a series of educational films designed to prepare troops for their return to civilian life. When he was demobilized, he moved from New York to Hollywood, following the industry, and became an assistant director. In 1938, the company switched all short subject production to the studio here, and put Hollingshead in charge.

He was active here until a couple of weeks ago when he had a heart attack. He is survived by his widow; Axeliane; two daughters, Mrs. Ebba Webb and Mrs. H. R. Ring; a stepson, Otto Hoeg; five grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. Hettie Bryant, and a nephew, Gordon Murray.

Test Law

the test reel on Wednesday, July 16. The exhibitors and distributors will then sit back and await whatever legal action may be taken by the state board —if any. The industry is certain to carry a court test to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Announcement of the test was made jointly here today by the five theatres and the MPAA. The test is designed "to strike down censorship and give the newsreels full equality under the Constitution with other media of communications, information and expression," it was stated.

Follows Court Decisions

The move follows the recent decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court which said in "The Miracle" and the "Pinky" cases that motion pictures are entitled to the free speech and free press guarantees of the Constitution.

Ohio is one of the few states in America that requires newsreels to have a censor's okay and one of seven states censoring all motion pictures before they can be shown to the public.

The five theatres that will show the uncensored newsreels are:

Little Theatre, Columbus; Lower Mall Theatre, Cleveland; Westwood, Toledo Park, Cincinnati; and Palace, Youngstown. The exhibitors conducting the test are members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, of which Robert A. Wile is executive secretary. Wile and Manning Clagett of the MPAA, New York, jointly released the announcement of the test.

E. J. Hofheimer of the Little Theatre, Columbus, said in a joint statement issued by the exhibitors:

"As exhibitors we are pleased to cooperate in this test. The press and other media of communications are not censored, and should not of course be censored. In our judgment, there is no more justification to censor the newsreel than to censor the newspaper.

"The people not only of Columbus but all the people in Ohio and in the United States have a vital stake in the outcome of this test. It is their freedom, in reality, that is at issue.

"We feel sure that public-spirited citizens who believe in freedom want to make their own decisions as to what they read, see or hear. They don't want somebody else to usurp their constitutional rights and make their decisions for them."

Eric Johnston, MPAA president, said:

"In cooperation with the five exhibitors in Ohio, we are deliberately making this move to invite a court test of newsreel censorship.

"In view of the Supreme Court's recent decisions, it is certainly clear that censorship of newsreels violates the provisions of the Constitution that safeguard freedom of expression in the United States.

"We had hoped that the Ohio censors, upon reading the Supreme Court's decisions, would have promptly on their own discontinued censoring the newsreels. As they did not, we have no recourse but to get the issue into the courts.

"We are supremely confident of the outcome. Surely the courts in Ohio, in light of what the Supreme Court has said, will quickly hold that censorship of newsreels cannot longer be permitted."

Johnston said that other legal moves would be made, in Ohio and elsewhere, to kill censorship—prior restraint—of all motion pictures.

cided that M-G-M will make 38 films in the next fiscal year, beginning September 1. The company had 42 releases in the current fiscal year, counting "Quo Vadis" and "Ivanhoe," both of which were in a "special" sales category.

The Schenck-Schary statement said that an average cost for the 38 films has been determined "which we believe is consistent with present box-office conditions. Our budget will be aimed at eliminating waste factors which have resulted from lush operations in former lush years."

The salary cuts, the statement said, will apply to those in the over $1,000 a week brackets throughout the entire executive staff and officers in Hollywood, New York and overseas, "including ourselves." It is designed to "provide leadership in the drive of economy," the Schenck-Schary statement asserted, and "no part of the salary given up during this period will be returned under any circumstances."

"There will be reductions in the number of producers, directors and writers who will be kept on a permanent contract basis," the statement continued. "Those remaining under contract with the studio will be required to turn out a greater number of films in the effort to reduce studio overhead."

Indicating that personnel will be pruned where possible, the statement said that "We have also consolidated effort in various departments and there will be some reduction in the numbers of people in these departments. We will insist that everyone give as much as he can to the job for which he is paid. For these reasons, and because we intend to make this insistence a sharp one, we do not contemplate any direct 'across-the-board' salary cuts; nor are we contemplating any wholesale discharge of employes.

"We plan to insure the level of salaries by requiring a full-time job in exchange for a full week's salary."

"We will continue to provide opportunity for young directing, acting producing and writing talent," the statement continued, "and such talent will be channeled through a planned program of films. Casting and cost factors will be altered to suit individual projects in this program.

"We have analyzed during these conferences the cost of waste factors, such as tardiness, interference, temperament, lack of preparation and loss of working time, of all talent working at the studio. As a result, each person in every field of activity concerned with the making of films has been asked and has agreed to cooperate more fully in eliminating these factors."

The statement pointed out that the conferences leading to formulation of the program had included top executive personnel, creative talent and labor leaders. All phases of studio operations were examined and the conferences were unhurried.

"We wanted to be certain," the statement said, "that decisions made as a result of these conferences would be practical and reflect care and judgment. Too often adjustments have been temporary because they have been based on panic and, consequently, on injudicious thinking."

C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's vice-president and treasurer, participated in the conferences during a three weeks period and Howard Dietz, vice-president in charge of advertising-publicity, was at the sessions for a week from the home office.

Schenck will conclude his six weeks stay here on Friday when he leaves for New York by train. Howard Strickling, studio publicity head, also will leave for New York this week-end, arriving there Monday.

MGM Has No Plans For Films for TV

Culver City, July 9.—"At the present time we have no plan, nor are we contemplating any plan for television filming," Nicholas M. Schenck and Dore Schary told the studio organization in their statement of policy here today.

"The field of television production," they said, "is one which will be examined and re-examined as time goes on, because the economic factors involved are ever changing." But no plan for M-G-M to enter that field exists now, they emphasized.

Meanwhile, Beverly Hills itself has joined the list of American communities which have established memorials to the cowboy humorist. Will Rogers Memorial Park is the new name of Civic Center Park just off Sunset Boulevard in mid-city.

tration talks could only be rescued if distribution company presidents personally participated in future arbitration conferences. The position of many exhibitor delegates is that they are not dealing with principals, although they, themselves are principals representing various exhibitor organizations.

Stalled Last Week

Last week's arbitration conference ended after two-and-a-half days, following the inability to make further progress on disputed phases of arbitration of competitive bidding complaints.

Johnston, who has been visiting his home in Spokane, was due here last night.

Para. Hearings

centrating on the elimination of the anti-trust phase, following the joint action late Tuesday by UPT, ABC and the Columbia Broadcasting System of a similar plea which stressed the urgency of getting the merger question settled by September so that ABC could plan television programming schedules for the winter season.

Should the FCC accept this proposal, it would mean that the license of Paramount station KTLA in Los Angeles would be renewed on a permanent basis, the merger of ABC and UPT consummated, and the sale of UPT television station WBKB, Chicago also approved.

The FCC broadcast bureau, whose attorneys, headed by Frederick Ford, have been arguing the commission's side of the case in the hearings, will, however, oppose this step. He is expected to file his reply within a few days.

And DuMont, whose status also is involved, as to whether or not it is actually controlled by Paramount, also will file a reply petition early next week, according to attorney Morton Galane. Under the proposed action, the DuMont phase also would be decided directly by the commission.

Galane said DuMont's position had not been fully determined, but that it is likely the company will not take a stand one way or the other on the elimination of the anti-trust issue, but will insist on an examiner's report before the matter is taken up by the full commission.

The petitions of the other parties asked that the hearings be canceled and the report of examiner Leo Resnick waived, and that the commission itself issue the final decision after a 20-day period for the filing of proposed findings by all those concerned.

accoutrements were stored. Police were holding four boys on suspicion of arson.

A brisk wind carried flames across adjacent dry Los Angeles River into the Hollywood foothills where firemen tonight were attempting to stem the spread.

NBC's television station, KNBH, picked up the fire at its outbreak from NBC's partially completed new studio adjacent to Warners. Later KTLA, independent station, also picked up the event.

Tax Leaders To Be Picked At Local Level

Letters to Top Exhibitors Will Go Out Shortly

Letters to leading exhibitors throughout the country calling upon them to organize state anti-tax committees will be sent out shortly by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' tax committee, it was learned here today.

This method rather than the naming of state anti-tax heads by the COMPO tax committee will be utilized, according to present plans. State anti-tax chairmen, under the current plan, will be selected at the "grass roots" level, by the various groups themselves, rather than being named by the COMPO committee organized to work for repeal of the 20 per cent tax on admissions.

Pat McGee and Col. H. A. Cole, co-chairmen of the COMPO tax committee, plan to leave here Saturday for their homes in Denver and Texas, respectively.

NCA in Industry's Campaign vs. Tax

MINNEAPOLIS, July 10.—North Central Allied, headed by Benjamin Berger, is the latest exhibitor organization to undertake an open, active and militant part in the industry's campaign for the repeal of the 20 per cent Federal admission tax, because "many exhibitors have expressed the view that elimination of the tax would mean business salvation."

In a bulletin to NCA members and other independent exhibitors, Berger urged every owner to see his Con-

Universal Redeems $213,195 Debentures

Washington, July 10.—The redemption of 217,000 sinking fund debentures for a cash consideration of $213,195 during June was reported here today by Universal Pictures to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The value of Universal debentures, bearing 3¾ per cent interest, still outstanding is $2,657,000.

Doob Named Head of Tax Repeal Group

Oscar A. Doob is chairman and Sam Rosen and Robert Weitman are members of a new policy and publicity committee for the industry's tax repeal campaign, it was disclosed here yesterday by Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the tax repeal campaign committee of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

The new committee was authorized at Tuesday's meeting here of the full tax repeal campaign committee.

TV Held 'Frantic' as It Turns to Films

MINNEAPOLIS, July 10.—The "real controversey" between the film industry and television revolves around "the frantic efforts by TV to obtain the best motion pictures with which to bolster its own unsatisfactory program," according to Allied States general counsel Abram F. Myers.

In a current membership bulletin, Ben Berger, North Central Allied president, quotes Myers as also saying that "the public needs to be told that TV interests have employed an ex-Democratic United States Senator and a Collector of Internal Revenue in an attempt to persuade the Department of Justice and the Federal

Open Probe Based On Complaints by SCTOA on Coast

HOLLYWOOD, July 10.—The probe into trade practices on the grounds of the complaint by the Southern California Theatre Owners Association to the Senate Small Business Committee got under way today when special investigator William D. Amis met with SCTOA trade practice committee members in his chambers in Federal Building here.

Committee chairman Cecil Vinnicoff, accompanied by members Al Hanson and Gus Metzger, spent several hours outlining post-consent decree practices they consider contrary to the spirit of the decree, and volunteered to document their charges fully.

Amis, who expects to remain here a fortnight, told MOTION PICTURE DAILY

TV Newsreelers Hit Olympic Games Ban

Representatives of American TV newsreel agencies have made known the refusal of the Olympic Committee to permit U. S. TV newsreels to cover the international games, according to Telenews Productions.

Only TV newsreelers are involved; regular American newsreels will service theatres with Olympic film footage.

EARLY CHICAGO TELECAST AIDED BOX-OFFICES, SAYS LUX

BUFFALO, July 10.—"There had been great concern among exhibitors in this area about getting outstanding pictures for showing during the period of the two big political conventions, because owners felt that the telecasting of the proceedings in Chicago would adversely affect the box-office," said Elmer F. Lux, vice-president and general manager of Lazar Theaters, Inc. (formerly Darnell Theatres) and president of the Buffalo Common Council.

"But it seems that the monotony of the early proceedings and the fact that a televiewer, because of only one TV channel here can see nothing else but those proceedings, drove folks into theatres, so that the TV convention programs really helped, instead of hurt business," continued Lux.

"Less than 10 per cent of the people are interested in politics anyway," said Lux, "so that the great mass did not watch the telecasts. In our own case, business from Sunday to Wednesday was better in every situation than similar periods going away back to Easter time and I understand that drive-ins have been doing the biggest business of the year."

"Telecasting of the convention early this week certainly did not hurt our business," said William P. Rosenow of Skyway Drive-in Theatres, operators of the Lake Shore and Niagara drive-ins. "We have had some top notch shows in both our situations and business has been very good. The one channel TV situation in Buffalo means that televiewers cannot get anything else but the convention stuff which undoubtedly sends

Ask Company Heads to Join In Arbitration

Johnston to Advance Exhibitors' Proposal

The possibility of having distribution company presidents negotiate personally with officials of exhibitor organizations on the establishment of an industry-wide arbitration system will be explored by Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president.

This was announced at the conclusion of yesterday's meeting here at MPAA headquarters of distribution representatives, called by Johnston in an apparent attempt to spur the progress of negotiations.

Johnston, who was briefed on exhibition sentiment in favor of holding the arbitration talks with company presidents, told distribution delegates on arbitration that he would check with company presidents to see if such

Higher Prices No Solution In Britain, ABPC Reports

By WILLIAM PAY

LONDON, July 8. (By Air Mail)—Relief for theatres from Britain's heavy entertainment tax, rather than increased admission prices, is the need of exhibition here, Sir Philip Warter, chairman, told Associated British Pictures Corp. stockholders in his annual message released this week.

Theatre attendance has been well maintained, Sir Philip reported, but ABPC's directors are conscious of the need to provide the best possible films, which are the industry's best answer to television. Although the public is becoming increasingly discriminatory there is ample evidence to show that there has been no decline in appreciation of the best type of motion pictures.

Although the industry as yet has been unsuccessful in obtaining any worthwhile entertainment tax concessions, Sir Philip said, last year's efforts resulted in increases in certain prices of admission. However, that is not the answer to the problem. Mass entertainment at prices within the reach of everyone is always our aim, Sir Philip reminded.

It is absolutely essential, he said, that our industry should receive substantial relief from the burden of the entertainment duty if we are to continue to attain any measure of success.

Results achieved by ABPC's production groups in the past fiscal year revealed an improvement over the preceding year, due partly to operation of the Eady Fund, the report stated. However, unless that Fund is put on a more permanent basis, the outlook for British film production is not encouraging, Sir Philip said. Sums paid by ABPC's theatres to the Eady Fund during the year were greatly in excess of the benefits received on films produced by its studio units.

Of 20 British features played on the ABC circuit last year, 14 were produced and financed by sources independent of the corporation.

Sir Philip said the company believes it would be in the best interests of all concerned if the Eady Fund were to be put on a permanent and statutory basis. Even with the Eady Fund, he said, production still is a speculative business. We endeavor to lessen its risks by joint production with Warners and other American companies.

Attendance at the company's theatres during the current year have been adversely affected by weather and other causes, while operating costs, mainly wages, continue to rise, the report said. It is still too early to estimate results for the year's operations, it was added.

Amplifying on ABPC's financial report, published in MOTION PICTURE DAILY on June 27, Sir Philip reported the company's total assets at £20,939,308, including fixed assets of £18,270,401 and film productions, rights, etc., of £447,279. Reserves and undistributed profits increased by £131,271. The group's theatres had 207,700,717 admissions during the year, a decrease of approximately two per cent from the previous year, ended March 31, 1951. Nevertheless, gross receipts rose to £19,960,394, an increase of £1,059,280, over the previous year. Of the increase, the entertainment tax and Eady levy absorbed £93,200.

The total entertainment tax and Eady levy paid by the group was £7,941,415, or approximately 40 per cent of the gross.

U.K. Is Worried By Hollywood's Desertion of 'B's'

LONDON, July 8 (By Air Mail).—Sidney A. Myers, British Lion's assistant managing director, has returned from his product-hunting expedition in the U. S. He states that he concluded tentatively deals involving not only what he describes as a number of useful "B" pictures but the regular output of an American producer operating with "A" subjects. But those deals will demand ratification in British Lion's London office.

The Myers safari pin-points difficulties in which a number of distributors find themselves here. Acknowledgedly, British Lion finds itself particularly embarrassed following the withdrawal from its fold of the considerable Republic output and the Herbert Wilcox-Anna Neagle films. But the company is not alone in feeling the pinch arising out of the declared policy of Hollywood majors to concentrate on bigger pictures and to cut down on "B" product.

In spite of pronouncements here from distinguished American visitors like Jack L. Warner to the effect that the day of the double-feature program is over and that the industry's only answer to the TV-menace is fewer but bigger, better, brighter films, the market for what shrewd exhibitors like J. X. Prendergast describe as bread-and-butter pictures persists. But it's a market with shortening supply. Concern grows not only among bread-and-butter exhibitors but the distributors who feed them.

W. J. Gell's Monarch Films is generally accepted as British Lion's leading rival in that field. Gell has also lately been in New York on a product-seeking mission.

It is considered significant that George Minter's Renown Pictures, which built up a flourishing traffic in the "B" picture field and during the war years in particular was one of the big stand-bys for independent theatremen, has switched now to major productions.

Post $22,619 to Meet Bordonaro Verdict

Buffalo, July 10.—To prevent an-accumulation of additional interest while an appeal is pending, three distributors have paid $22,619 to the Federal Court clerk here, the sum representing a $22,500 verdict, plus interest from June 2, awarded to Bordonaro Brothers Theatres, Inc., of Olean. The plaintiff has appealed to the U. S. Court of Appeals in New York City contending that the verdict was insufficient.

The verdict was against Paramount Pictures, RKO Pictures and Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corp

Predicts $2½-Million 'Kong' Reissue Gross

Despite 1952 being little more than half over, Time magazine, in its current issue, dated July 14, reviews RKO Radio's re-released "King Kong" under the headline of "Movie of the Year." Saying "RKO had struck pay dirt" with the 19-year-old film, Time estimated that the picture would gross $2,500,000 this year, since it was doing "2½ times the rate of a normal A picture."

Top Grosses Cited For U-I's 'My Gal'

"Has Anybody Seen My Gal", Universal-International release, is understood to have rolled up house records of $952 on the opening day at the Five Points Theatre in Jacksonville, $1,360 for the best opening day's business in 33 weeks at the Rialto Theatre in Atlanta, and a record $15,200 for the first three days at the Missouri Theatre in St. Louis.

people outdoors and into theatres," he added.

On the other hand, Vincent R. McFaul, general manager of Shea Theatres, said: "There is no doubt that any affair such as a national convention does some harm to our box-offices. Any time you get personalities of Taft, Eisenhower or McArthur caliber on radio or TV, you are going to have some people stay at home to listen. To what extent or what percentage of our attendance is affected is hard to say because there are so many elements now that all combine and are making serious inroads into normal business. The extremely hot weather we have been experiencing and the steel strike, which has crippled industry on the Niagara frontier, are other major items that affect our business," concluded McFaul.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 10.—The home telecasts of the Republican national convention so far this week apparently have failed to keep the Johnnie Ray fans away from the 4,000-seat Radio City Theatre here. Monday, usually one of the poorest days of the week, showed a strong $4,000 at Radio City.

Subsequent week-day grosses were good but it is expected that Ray will gross only about $25,000 for the full week, against nearly $75,000 garnered by Martin and Lewis recently at the same theatre.

CINCINNATI, July 10.—Box-office receipts at first-run and neighborhood theatres were reported to be lower this week due to the wide interest displayed here in the Republican national convention. The drop in Senator Taft's home town was more pronounced Monday and Tuesday nights, when the addresses of General Douglas MacArthur and former President Herbert Hoover were telecast.

DETROIT, July 10.—Box-office business in Detroit is just about normal. Few first-runs reported above average business. Exhibitors here say the national convention is not harming business. If the box-office does slump, it is because of heavy lay-offs at auto factories due to the steel strike. No effort is being made to combat telecast competition. Drive-ins are doing very well.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 10.—The national Republican convention, with its interrupted flow of telecasts and broadcasts, has thus far made no material difference in the business done by theatres in Albany. The balloting for the presidential nomination, managers think, may affect grosses, if it takes place at night.

KANSAS CITY, July 10.—There has been no pronounced effect discernible in theatre attendance from the Republican national convention. Though there are many television sets in homes, and several radio stations give extensive coverage afternoon and evening, there seems insufficient excitement to keep attention glued to receivers at the expense of good theatre entertainment.

BALTIMORE, July 10.—First-run exhibitors here are agreeably surprised that the Republican convention TV has not been in competition with box-offices. Business is just the same, or slightly better, at downtown houses and also in neighborhood theatres.

"Jumping Jacks" which opened yesterday at Keith's drew capacity business all day and evening. Jack Sidney, city manager for Loew's houses here, said "business was better," and Rodney Collier, Stanley's manager, said there isn't any evidence of the convention cutting-in on grosses at present.

Television--Radio

with Pinky Herman

"FOR many are called but few are chosen" is an oft-quoted line that is definitely more truth than poetry. . . . With a slight variation in subject matter, we find that "Many ask questions but few supply the answers," all of which is merely to advise all and sundry that the cycle of quiz shows, instead of showing signs of disintegrating, is increasing. . . . A lengthy dispatch from Syd Eiges' fourth floor cubicle in Radio City gives detailed accounts of two forthcoming video quizzers which will bow onto the scene starting July 28. . . . "I've Got News for You," emceed by Jack Paar, will be seen and heard Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 7-7:30 P.M. and that time slot on Tuesday and Thursday will be filled by Walter O'Keefe's "The Mayor of Hollywood." . . . While on the subject of quizzes, "Masquerade Party," which NBTees off Monday night will feature a nationally famous Democrat who will masquerade as a Republican. . . . Timely, no?

In Tuesday's "Break the Bank" story, we reported that the all time record sum ever won by a contestant on that program was $11,840 dollars. . . . But because it was a terribly hot night, the Giants lost a close game, the Republican Convention was getting underway or perhaps you can even think up a better reason for the error, the fact is that the printer inadvertently made a slight mistake and gave as the record payoff of $11,840,000. . . . Of course one might argue that with the devaluation of the dollar to the extent where the current dollar is worth the equivalent of about 51 cents of the 1931 dollar the error was really of minor consequence and with that view we might concur, but in all fairness to all concerned we feel it proper and entirely necessary to assure Corporal Martin Diamant (who won the record sum of $11,840 in December, 1951) that the sponsors of "Break the Bank" do NOT owe him an additional $11,728,160. . . . Somewhere there must be a moral to this story and because we can't seem to find an appropriate one, we'll resort to the use of the classic, "Never cry Wolf (Ed Wolf), unless you have an idea for another giveaway program that is as durable, exciting and commercial as 'Break the Bank.'"

From here it looks like the Max Liebman-Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca film deal may be closed with 20th Century-Fox. . . . If and when concluded, it will be a participation deal. . . . Producer Max Liebman, due next week from Europe, will fly to the Coast for final talks. . . . Is NBC trying to interest Alexander Korda in a pact which will have A.K. produce special hour-long flickers for exclusive NBT telecasts? . . . Ben Fryc, executive producer of Studio Films, commutes from Solon, Ohio, to Emil Velasco Studios here, where he supervises the editing of several musical short subjects made especially for TV. . . . Films will be ready about August 1, and will be distributed by United Television Programs, Inc.

Don Russell, announcer for the "Cavalcade of Stars" series via DuMont and emcee of his own "Take the Break" WABDeejay series, has come a long way since he was a page at NBC only three years ago. . . . Ad agencies are getting a pitch on a new TV series titled, "The Farmer's Daughter," starring Loretta Young. . . . Did you know that Ted Mack was once a side man in Ben Pollack's Orchestra?

Theatremen in Tilt For Video Channel

DENVER, July 10.—Two theatre groups in Denver are involved in a contest for television channel No. 7, and this contest is expected to be the most bitter of the three now in sight here.

Denver Television Co., organized by Harris and John Wolfberg, owner of the Paramount, Broadway, and four drive-ins, is asking for channel No. 7, and so is Aladdin Radio & Television Co., owners of KLZ. Partners in Aladdin include Frank H. Ricketson Jr., president of Fox Intermountain Theatres, and Harry Huffman, retired Denver city manager for that circuit.

There are five other applicants for television channels in Denver, which is without TV due to the "freeze." Applicants include Eugene O'Fallon, Inc., (KFEL), asking for channel No. 2; Colorado Television Co., (KVOD), and Empire Coil Co., New Rochelle, N. Y., asking for channel No. 9; asking for channel No. 4 are KMYR Broadcasting Co. and Metropolitan Television Co., organized for the purpose of buying KOA here from NBC, with Bob Hope as a principal stockholder. It is thought channel No. 4 will be the NBC outlet in Denver.

There are no applicants for channel No. 6, educational, nor for 20 and 26 (UHF).

1st Oregon TV Sends Grosses Down 20%

PORTLAND, Ore., July 10.—Downtown theatre grosses here were down 20 per cent as four stations and TV set distributors combined to bring in the first full TV coverage for Portland this week.

The excessive heat and the number of drive-ins in the area were also given as reasons for the box-office dip.

his resignation is regretted by the entire organization.

Michalson, a native of Pittsburgh, celebrated his 30th anniversary with RKO and its predecessor company last April. He entered the industry in the capacity of salesman, from which he rose to branch manager, division manager and short subject sales manager. On Aug. 13, 1947, he was elected president of RKO Pathe in addition to his short subject post, and finding his duties as president of RKO Pathe increasingly demanding, he relinquished his position as short subject sales manager in 1950, to give all of his time to RKO Pathe.

Berger declared that Congress and the public both "realize that our industry is sorely distressed . . . and aware of our plight." He said elimination of the tax will aid materially in keeping many theatres open.

"We believe the tax can be entirely eliminated if each and every exhibitor does his job," said Berger.

Reviews

"The Story of Will Rogers"

(Warner Brothers)

THE LIFE OF WILL ROGERS was a full one, rich with humor and deep with understanding. In recreating it on the screen, in color by Technicolor, Warner Brothers has fashioned a quality picture that has much to recommend. Will Rogers, Jr., does an outstanding portrayal of his casual-talking father, and Jane Wyman turns in a warm and touching performance as Mrs. Rogers.

Quite obviously, as biographical drama, the picture becomes a procession of events in the life of the subject, and as such it has none of the soaring elements of fiction. But it has an appeal in every sequence that will touch the hearts of audiences. As the story of Rogers' life unfolds, from his humble beginnings as a cowpoke to his rise to an eminent place in American life, there also unfolds in nostalgic review a history of the first third of this century.

Eddie Cantor appears briefly and refreshingly, as himself, and as another highlight there has been fitted into the picture footage of such grand performers as Al Jolson, Fanny Brice, Marilyn Miller, and others. There are about a dozen songs in the film.

Some of the most entertaining sequences are the early ones, after Rogers' marriage, in which he performs as a rope artist. One day, while nervously awaiting the birth of his first child, Rogers goes on stage and begins talking spontaneously. That moment Rogers found his forte and he goes steadily onward to achieve prestige and fortune. The picture has President Wilson say in citing him, his was the "voice from the heart of the people."

Rogers' patriotic services were numerous. Between these many deeds he found time to go to Hollywood and make many films, silent and sound. And it was in Hollywood that he met Wiley Post, resulting in a deep friendship, and a concomitant interest in aviation.

Frank Davis and Stanley Roberts did the screenplay, from a Saturday Evening Post story by Mrs. Will Rogers. Some of the other highlights of the crowded life include the "favorite son" nomination for President at a Democratic convention and the interesting European travels. And, finally, that ill-fated flight to Alaska with Post, in 1935.

Others in the cast are Noah Beery, Jr., who turns in a splendid role as Post; James Gleason, a theatrical agent, and Carl Benton Reid, as Rogers' father.

Robert Arthur produced and Michael Curtiz directed.

Running time, 109 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, July 26.

"Don't Bother to Knock"

(20th Century -Fox)

A SERIOUS DRAMATIC ROLE is given shapely and enticing Marilyn Monroe in provocatively-titled "Don't Bother to Knock." Playing a psychically distressed young lady, she serves as the agent in reuniting two estranged lovers, Richard Widmark and Anne Bancroft.

A forceful, novel story and a good cast combine to make the picture a reliable piece of merchandise. As entertainment, it is uneven, sometimes excellent and sometimes just fair.

Miss Monroe's acting talent is difficult to assess, since playing an unbalanced girl, most any type of portrayal could be considered as stemming naturally from her disturbance. At any event it looks on the surface like a professionally competent job, and there is nothing wanting in the performances of the others in the lead.

The screenplay, by Daniel Taradash, throws the spotlight on a handful of people during a night at a Manhattan hotel. Widmark, a commercial pilot, is there to win back the fading love of Miss Bancroft, who is a vocalist in the cocktail lounge. Miss Monroe is there through the good services of her elevator-operating uncle, Elisha Cook, Jr., who has arranged for her to do some baby-sitting for newspaper publisher Jim Backus and his wife, Lurene Tuttle.

On the rebound of a rebuff from Miss Bancroft, Widmark flirts with negligee-clad Miss Monroe through the hotel windows, and presently he becomes a guest in her room. It develops that Miss Monroe spent some time in a mental institution following the death of her lover in an airplane mishap. In Widmark she begins to see the image of her lover and verges on irrationality. Among the series of incidents that erupt is an attempt by her to kill the child for whom she was baby-sitting. The story culminates in a scene in which Miss Monroe, beset and baffled, tries to kill herself with a razor blade, but soothing talk by Widmark prevents the tragedy. Miss Bancroft, now seeing that Widmark has the depth of understanding she wanted of him, reunites with him.

Julian Blaustein produced and Roy Baker directed.

Running time, 76 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

the committee's complaints, as presented, "appear justified," and indicated, if further investigation shows them to be valid, that he will suggest in his report to the Small Business Committee that a Senatorial committee come here to hold hearings on the matter. This probably could not be done before the national election, however, Amis said.

Amis, who tomorrow and over the weekend will visit individual independent exhibitors in the Los Angeles territory, intends also to meet with the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and individual independent producers during his stay here. He expects to conduct a similar investigation in Chicago next, he said, with New York and possibly other centers scheduled for later.

J.J. Theatres Suit To Trial on Jan. 12

A trial date of Jan. 12 has been set here by Federal Judge Knox in the $3,075,000 triple damage anti-trust suit of J. J. Theatres, Inc. and Luxor Group, Inc. against 20th Century-Fox and Skouras Theatres.

Damages are claimed from 20th-Fox and Skouras Theatres since March 15, 1941. The complaint alleges failure to get the entire first-run split at the plaintiff's Luxor Theatre in the Bronx. Other companies named by the plaintiff, RKO Pictures, Warner Brothers and Universal, are named co-conspirators in the complaint, which claims that unlike the defendants that they have offered first-run neighborhood bookings to the defendant's theatre since February, 1949.

A counter-claim and a cross-claim, in the meantime, have been entered by Skouras Theatres against the plaintiff, naming the following other defendants, Warner Brothers , RKO Theatres, RKO Pictures and Universal. The counter-claim alleges violation of the trust laws with added defendants giving the Luxor a day and date first-run with the Park Plaza and Croton since 1949.

To Join in Arbitration

an arrangement could be worked out.

The probability of company presidents taking part personally in the controversial phases of setting up an arbitration system was viewed as dim in trade quarters, however. In addition to the many days which would have to be devoted to the problem, it was suggested that it would be most difficult to set a date in New York when the presence of all company presidents could be assured.

Currently, Loew's-M-G-M president Nicholas M. Schenck is just returning to New York after many weeks on the Coast. Spyros P. Skouras, 20th Century-Fox president, Harry Warner, president of Warner Brothers, and Harry Cohn, Columbia president, are on the Coast. Barney Balaban, Paramount president, is in Europe. The situation in Universal Pictures is in a state of flux with Milton R. Rackmil, Decca Records president, slated to assume the presidency of Universal next Tuesday. Ned E. Depinet, RKO Pictures president, leaves for the Coast Thursday.

It is believed the result of Johnston's move is more apt to result in the delegation of additional authority to the company sales managers and attorneys currently participating in the arbitration talks. The limitation of authority of distribution representatives was one of the major objections of exhibition representatives who contend that it makes it necessary for the distributor negotiators to continually delay decisions for consultations with their principals, with the result that progress on an arbitration plan is slowed to a snail's pace.

If negotiating progress is not expedited through delegation of greater authority to the distributor negotiators, then it would be up to the company presidents to decide whether they wanted arbitration badly enough to engage in the negotiations themselves. Even if they did, it was pointed out, they still would require the presence of their sales executives and attorneys as consultants.

Exhibitor negotiators at the same time point out that they are the principals of their organizations and are in a position to make decisions on the spot. Discouraged by the slow rate of progress, they ended the arbitration talks a week ago following continued inability to reach agreements on arbitration of competitive bidding complaints.

At the conclusion of yesterday's meeting, Johnston called for another conference of the distribution representatives on July 21 here. Yesterday's talks, it was stated, centered around the arbitration meetings held over the past two months.

Besides Johnston the following attended: William F. Rodgers, Charles Reagan and Henderson Richey of M-G-M; Theodore Black, Richard Yates, Republic; Robert Mochrie, RKO Pictures; Robert Perkins, Ben Kalmenson, Warner Brothers; Al Schwalberg, Austin Keough, Monroe Goodman, Paramount; Abe Montague, Columbia; Charles Feldman, Universal; Al Lichtman, 20th Century-Fox; Bernard Kranze, United Artists; and Maurice Goldstein, Monogram

The MPAA was represented by Joyce O'Hara, Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., and Sidney Schreiber, in addition to Johnston.

Sues to Determine Cryptix Validity

CINCINNATI, July 10.—Frank W. Huss, Jr., president of Associated Theatres, local suburban circuit, has filed suit in U. S. District Court for the Southern district of Kentucky against Seldon R. Glenn, U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue, to obtain a ruling on the validity of using Cryptix numbered tickets in filing admission tax returns for the Hiland Theatre, an Associated Theatres subsidiary, at Fort Thomas, Ky., just across the Ohio river from here.

The suit also seeks an injunction to restrain Glenn and A. B. Grolling, deputy collector, from enforcing an order to destroy the tickets which they claim are not valid.

Each of the approximately 100 theatres using Cryptix tickets, developed and distributed by Willis Vance, head of the local Central Ticket Office, has an individual numbering system combining letters and a code, which are filed with the Internal Revenue Department. The code is designed to prevent improper or unauthorized persons from checking theatre receipts.

THE INTERNATIONAL REFERENCE BOOK

Letters

July 7, 1952.

To the Editor: I certainly enjoyed reading your editorial in the June 30th issue of the Motion Picture Daily.

Enclosed, herewith, is a copy of a letter I wrote to the Wall Street Journal and a copy of their reply.

The article they published certainly met with my expectations and regardless of what type and kind of article they publish now, great harm will have been done to our industry.

ROTUS HARVEY, President,
Western Theatre Owners, Inc.

June 18, 1952.

Mr. Henry Gemmill, Managing Editor
Wall Street Journal
44 Broad Street
New York 4, New York

Dear Mr. Gemmill:

Yesterday I received a telephone call from a Mr. Thompson in your local office. He advised the Journal is planning a series of articles on the motion picture industry and he propounded several questions and requested answers. I informed Mr. Thompson I would not answer such questions over the telephone and asked him to submit them in writing as I did not care to answer such pertinent questions 'off the cuff' for they required thoughtful answers and, in some instances, research. I was then informed there was not sufficient time to put the questions in writing as he had to submit his report within the next few days. So ended our telephone conversation.

I have no doubt your reporter can find many local members of our industry who will answer his questions but any spur of the moment replies he will get cannot be accurate.

I have always felt, and I am sure the majority of your readers feel the same, that the Wall Street Journal's articles and editorials are conservative, thoughtful and factual studies of their subject matter. However, if this experience of mine is an indication of your methods of gathering information and statistics then I wonder if the Journal does publish reliable information.

Frankly, we are very disturbed over what is apparently your type of reporting for too many erroneous articles have already been published by various magazines and these damaging stories have done our industry a great deal of harm. The motion picture industry, like any other business, has its problems but if any industry's problems are to be aired in publications such as yours, then certainly the Wall Street Journal, as well as the others, owe it to the industry involved to be sure of all facts and comments before publishing.

Sincerely,
WESTERN THEATRE
OWNERS, INC.
ROTUS HARVEY, President

June 20, 1952.

Mr. Rotus Harvey, President
Western Theatre Owners, Inc.
369 Turk Street
San Francisco 2, California

Dear Mr. Harvey:

I am forwarding your letter of June 18th to Mr. Joseph Taylor, the Managing Editor of our Pacific Coast Edition who is in charge of our Western news gathering activities.

At this distance you will appreciate that it is very difficult for me to comment at all intelligently on the incident you describe. I have no way of knowing from your letter what questions were propounded to you and how difficult they might be to answer.

For your information, however, the telephone has certainly become a standard and useful tool in modern newspaper reporting and during the years of my own personal experience, I have often found that it is quite possible to get more penetrating replies on this "spur of the moment" basis than when some more around about method is employed. I doubt very much whether I would have chosen to submit any questions in writing to you had I been doing the reporting.

It seems to me that our reporting techniques produce quite satisfactory results or you would hardly have, as you say you do, the feeling "that the Wall Street Journal's articles and editorials are conservative, thoughtful and factual studies of their subject matter."

Yours very truly,
HENRY GEMMILL
Managing Editor

Lippert in Talks on Exchange Sales

Negotiations between Robert Lippert, head of Lippert Productions, and Lippert exchange heads in the New York territory for the sale of his organization's exchanges to finance two projected productions, are understood to be underway. Lippert arrived here yesterday.

The first sale in the exchange-participation plan was consummated with the purchase of the Dallas and Memphis exchanges from Lippert, who is understood to be seeking $1,000,000 from the sale of his 28 exchanges. Further details of his plans will be unveiled next week when Lippert is slated to hold a press conference.

Columbia Exhibit to Tour State Fairs

Columbia Pictures has completed plans for a touring exhibit of Midwestern state fairs this summer and fall to build interest in two of its productions now awaiting release.

The exhibit will feature the bandmaster costume worn by Hans Conreid as Dr. Terwilliker in "The 5000 Fingers of Dr. T," pre-production sketches from that picture, and large set models from "Affair in Trinidad."

The exhibit is set to go on display first as part of a special exhibit prepared by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio at the Ohio State Fair in Columbus, August 22-30. The following week it will be moved to the Indiana State Fair, and will continue from fair to fair until the entire Midwestern area is covered.

FAILURE of the elaborate and costly television and radio coverage of the Republican National Convention in Chicago to affect national theatre attendance to any noticeable degree throughout most of last week is interpreted by many theatre operators as another illustration of the truth of the maxim that you have to have a show, even on TV, to draw the crowds.

For its first four days the convention was without a real show. The result was that its audience was an audience of stay-at-homes. They were not the theatre patrons; certainly not that huge segment of the theatre's patronage found in the below 25-year age groups.

Moreover, some theatre operators surmise, the great group of TV viewers who are not hopelessly addicted, were forced out of their homes (and some of them into theatres) as a result of the cancelling of standard entertainment programs from the networks to accommodate the convention coverage. When the convention itself lacked drama up to its final stages and there was nothing else to turn to on the midget screens, that's when many must have gone out to a movie, these exhibitors believe.

The experience may reasonably be expected to hold true for the Democratic National Convention next week. Unless the Democrats can furnish the living rooms of the nation with something dramatic, the telecasts and radio broadcasts of their proceedings will be virtually without effect on theatre attendance, at least until the balloting begins in the last stages of the convention.

WHAT impressed this department most in the economic policy statement of MGM last week was its complete freedom from any note of hysteria or, even, doubt. There was, in fact, real encouragement not only for the people of that company but for the industry in the confident statement that "We believe strongly that the problems that beset us are soluble—that the obstacles surrounding us can be overcome."

Executives and contract personnel are to be congratulated for cooperating. Others, if deserving, will not be affected. All should be benefited in the long run.

Republicans A 'Grand Old Party', Exhibitors Agree

To the very end, the Republican National Convention was kind to the nation's theatres.

The early Eisenhower victory on Friday was so perfectly tailored to order for theatre business that many in the industry began to wonder if it had not been deliberately planned that way to court exhibitors' votes next November. No patron planning to attend even a matinee on Friday found it necessary to alter his or her plans. All were able to go to the first afternoon performance knowing the identity of the Republican nominee.

All of exhibition now is hoping the Democratic leaders, in convention in Chicago next week, show the industry equal consideration.

Good weekend business appeared the rule as even the incurable TV addicts and chronic stay-at-homes, surfeited with four and one-half days of

Republican Pictures In Newsreel Test

Cleveland, July 13.—When the five independent theatres in Northern Ohio start the test of the legality of censoring newsreels, on Wednesday, the subject will be the Republican convention reels which will be shown without benefit of the state censorship seal. Houses involved in the test, which has the backing of the Motion Picture Association of America, are the Westwood Theatre, Toledo; Palace, Youngstown; Little, Columbus; Park, Cincinnati, and the Lower Mall Theatre here.

San Diego ITO Will Aid Practices Probe

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—The Independent Theatre Owners of San Diego has joined the Southern California Theatre Owners Association in cooperating with the Senate Small Business Committee's special investigator, William D. Amis, who launched the investigation last Thursday, spent the weekend on his continuing round of visits to independent exhibitors. Beginning tomor-

"Son of Paleface"

[Paramount]

IT IS DOUBTFUL that anywhere there breathes a movie-goer who will not erupt into ringing laughter and mirth upon seeing "Son of Paleface." Someone at Paramount had the hilarious good sense to combine Bob Hope, Jane Russell and Roy Rogers in one film and the idea is sure to have a bonanza-reaping effect at the box-office.

The production is extravagant in its entertainment values, including color by Technicolor, eye-filling scenery and some eight songs, variously and at times jointly sung by the principals. Gags, surprises and bits of satire roll off in continuous luxury. And Bing Crosby makes his brief but inevitable appearance.

The spoof opens as our boy Bob, a Harvard man and son of the legendary Indian fighter Paleface, comes to Sawbuck Pass to claim the fortune presumably left by his father. It happens that the territory is being terrorized by an outlaw group led by a mysterious figure known as "The Torch." This desperate fact brings to town none other than government agent Roy Rogers who is determined to get at the roots of all the

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The first grants for construction of new television stations since the freeze were issued on Friday by the Federal Communications Commission.

FCC granted permits for 14 new commercial TV stations, nine of which are in cities presently without television service and five in cities assigned UHF channels only.

In addition, the Commission ordered hearings on 18 other channels in 10 cities for which competing applications had been received. Fourteen applications were tossed out, 13 because they had not been amended since the freeze and one because it was faulty.

Among the applications dropped was one filed by United Paramount Theatres for Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla. UPT would have five stations if the proposed ABC-UPT merger

More Delay Is Seen for New Franco-U.S. Pact

No early resumption of negotiations with the French government on a new agreement for importation of American films and conversion of approximately $4,500,000 in blocked film earnings there is likely, it appeared following a Motion Picture Association of America board meeting here on Friday.

The recent negotiations in Paris, which ended 10 days ago in a stalemate over French insistence on subsidy provisions for French films and a reduction of American film imports, were reviewed at Friday's meeting, presided over by Eric Johnston, MPAA president. Johnston called another meeting for tomorrow to continue the discussions.

Presumably, MPAA will endeavor to come up with a new proposal at tomorrow's meeting which might serve to reopen the discussions in Paris at a later date. There was no indication following Friday's meeting whether Johnston or John McCarthy, MPAA international head, would go to Paris when the sessions are resumed.

In addition, there was no indication from the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers here whether it has designated a representative to attend the Paris sessions when they are resumed. Alfred W. Crown, Samuel Goldwyn Prdouctions sales head, who represented SIMPP at the previous Paris meetings, will leave here for the Coast today and James A. Mulvey, Goldwyn Productions president, who has been a key figure for SIMPP in foreign agreement negotiations, is scheduled to leave here for the Goldwyn studio on Thursday. Mulvey is due back in New York over the weekend, however.

The previous French agreement expired June 30.

Friday's MPAA session also considered reports on current negotiations in Tokyo to free some $10,000,000 in blocked yen accumulated by film companies there during the period of the American Occupation. Considerable progress has been made, it is understood, but negotiations will be continued in an effort to free all of the blocked funds. If successful, the association and SIMPP then will face the difficult task of allocating the sum among the individual distribution companies and producers.

Johnston and Joyce O'Hara, MPAA vice-president, left here Saturday for Washington and are due back tonight or tomorrow morning.

Call Report of Offer To Selig Unfounded

HOLLYWOOD, July 13.—Reports from Denver that Robert Selig had been offered the managership of the Roxy Theatre by Charles P. Skouras appeared unfounded today when Skouras spokesman pointed out that National Theatres has not acquired the Roxy. Although Roxy manager David Katz is here conferring with Skouras, there was no indication that his future status is concerned.

Twin City Theatres Is Bowing Out

MINNEAPOLIS, July 13.—Twin City Theatres, less than a year ago a potent factor in the independent theatre field in St. Paul, is making its exit from exhibition in favor of the ice-cream business.

Owners with Burt Myers of the Dairy Queen franchise for several states, the three officers of Twin City (M. E. Montgomery, Howard Dale and Bob Rydeen) until last Feb. 23 operated the Strand and Tower first-runs and Lyceum and State last-runs in the loop and the neighborhood Hamline in the Midway district.

On Feb. 23, they shuttered the Strand and Tower after starting court action to force Minnesota Amusement Co. to take the two theatres back and refund payments of $75,000, claiming possibilities of the houses had been misrepresented. (The two theatres are still dark.)

Last week, Mrs. Howard Dale, wife of one of the Twin City owners negotiated a new lease with the owners of the Lyceum, and took over operation of the Hamline, on which TCT holds the lease with the property owners. This week, TCT is concluding negotiations for the sale of the equipment in the State and its lease.

staring at their miniature screens, stretched, rubbed their tired eyes and resumed life among the living, away from the living room.

Theatre owners in the Cleveland area were typical of the thousands throughout the land who hope that the Democratic convention home telecasts will follow the pattern of the Republican convention telecasts which resulted in a box-office bonanza.

Practically all of Cleveland's exhibitors, both first and subsequent-run owners, reported the best three day's business in recent months. TV convention concentration drove people out of their homes in quest of amusement entertainment. Even mediocre programs drew heavy attendance, exhibitors reported.

A full year's first-run circuit deal with Edelberto Carrera in Cuba assures United Artists of expanded playing time and top terms for its 1953 product, it was announced here by Arnold M. skullduggery. "The Torch," it develops, is Miss Russell, who conceals her nefarious enterprises by working at the local saloon as an entertainer with a smoldering way with a song.

These basic plot factors have been expanded by scriptwriters Frank Tashlin, Robert L. Welch and Joseph Quillan into a joyous collection of tangled fancies that sends one's spirit soaring.

When Hope finds his father's treasure chest it is empty, a circumstance he would like to keep concealed in the light of the horde of angry debtors at his neck. Meanwhile Miss Russell lays plans to get Hope under the moonlight and then romance away his fortune. The adventures that follow are wildly imaginative.

Since things are done in a big way in Robert L. Welch's production there are two bubble baths, one that Miss Russell takes and one that Hope tackles.

In the course of events there are a series of holdups, battles with badmen and Indians, and asserted encounters with peril. It all, however, leads to the end in which Hope finds his fortune, wins a reformed Miss Russell, and receives the blessing of outlaw-conquering Rogers.

As for the showman, he can be assured of the customer leaving the theatre in the gay mood that will bring him back.

Tashlin also directed.

Film Personalities Involved

Personalities in the film industry were also involved in the hearings to be held by FCC. Bob Hope is a stockholder in Metropolitan Television, which seeks a Denver channel in competition with KMYR Broadcasting. Also in Denver, John Wolfberg, a local exhibitor, owns 34 per cent of the same company, which seeks a channel in competition with Alladin Radio and TV.

A hearing was also ordered in the contest between Orange Television Broadcasting, of which Wometco's Mitchell Wolfson owns five per cent, and Tampa Broadcasting Co. Involved is a Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., channel.

Mid-Continent Television, in which Los Angeles exhibitor Sherill Corwin has a 20 per cent interest, will compete for a Wichita, Kans., channel with two other applicants. W. S. Butterfield Theatres will contest for a Flint, Mich., channel.

FCC granted three construction permits for Denver channels, one in Portland, Ore.; two in Springfield-Holyoke, Mass.; two in Youngstown, Ohio; two in York, Pa.; and one each in Flint, Mich.; Bridgeport, Conn.; New Britain, Conn., and New Bedford, Mass.

Both major and independent producers are scheduled to be canvassed with respect to exhibitor complaints which induced Amis' investigation.

Sparked by SCTOA

The investigation was sparked by the complaints of the SCTOA to the Senate Small Business Committee. At an initial meeting last Thursday, Amis met with SCTOA trade practice committee members who outlined post-consent decree practices they consider contrary to the spirit of the decree and volunteered to document their charges fully.

Amis expects to conduct similar investigations in Chicago, New York, and possibly other centers.

Capital Takes Early Lead in U. A. Drive

United Artists exchanges in Washington, St. Louis and Salt Lake City have leaped to early leads in their respective groups in the second week of the first lap of the "Bill Heineman Sales Drive," it was revealed here by Max E. Youngstein, UA vice-president and drive captain. The sales effort to honor William J. Heineman, UA's vice-president in charge of distribution, will run to December 6. Each UA exchange is placed in one of three groups in order to establish greater opportunities for all. The drive is divided into three laps of six weeks each during which periods first, second and third prizes will be awarded. The last seven weeks will be utilized to determine grand prize winners.

Closely following the leaders in each group are Dallas and Atlanta, holding second and third spots, respectively, in the first group; Cleveland and Charlotte, second and third in the second group, and New Haven and Montreal, second and third in the third group.

Central district manager Moe Dudelson is holding an early lead in the special contest among UA districts with Southern manager George Pabst running a close second.

Cincinnati Buildings Get Valuation Cuts

CINCINNATI, July 13. — The State Board of Tax Appeals, in Columbus, has upheld a 10 per cent reduction in the valuation of 14 Cincinnati suburban theatres, which the Hamilton County Board of Taxation allowed to 19 theatres some time ago at the request of the theatre owners "because of economic conditions resulting from a definite decline in attendance." However, 13 owners, representing 14 theatres, appealed for larger reductions.

The companies involved are: Hamilton Amusement Co., Harmony Amusement Co., Royal Theatre Co., Cheviot Four-Star Theatres, Albert J. and Jacob D. Rinsberg, John H. Hoskins and Louis Wiethe, Pela Theatre Co., Montgomery Amusement Co., George C. Kolb, Samuel S. Schaengold, N. R. Baum, Pearl G. Hunt and Ruth Chase and Loretta Jackson.

"Barbed Wire"

GENE AUTRY, aided by his comical sidekick, Pat Buttram, pits his wit and guns against a would-be railroad magnate in his latest production which Armand Schaefer produced and George Archainbaud directed. The film is on a par with previous Autry pictures and from time to time is highlighted, as usual, with songs by the star.

Autry appears as a cattle buyer from a Kansas railhead who goes to Texas to investigate a group of homesteaders whose barbed wire fences have cut off one of the state's most important cattle trails. The homesteaders turn out to be "phonies," acting on orders of Leonard Penn, another cattleman, who hopes to create a demand by a group of cattlemen for a railroad in the area. The railroad would have to be built over territory owned by Penn, who plans in that fashion to become wealthy and powerful. Gene, with the aid of Buttram and Anne James, pretty newspaper publisher, eventually marshals the cattlemen and brings the dubious schemes of Penn out into the open. A climactic gun fight ends Penn's career.

Running time, 61 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

"Desert Pursuit"

(Monogram)

CUSTOMERS had better be warned to see this film from the beginning, since a foreword explains the mystifying presence of three Arabs on camels in Death Valley as left-overs from an unsuccessful Confederate dromedary detachment organized during the Civil War. In other respects, the traditional Western plot unfolds as the Arabs pursue Wayne Morris and his supply of freshly-panned gold, and Virginia Grey, an erstwhile gambling table dealer, with intent to rob them.

The late W. Scott Darling wrote the script, which rides a good part of its distance on silently photographed stretches of desert, showing the pursued and the pursuers making their difficult way across Death Valley's gigantic rock and sandy slopes. These are the film's best minutes. When the dialogue is resumed, and when the final, fatal action gets going, the majesty of the terrain tends to overwhelm the human issues being worked out. This final, fatal action takes place on the mountainous rim of Death Valley as Morris and a friendly Indian fight it out with the Arab robbers, killing two and routing the other.

Produced by Lindsley Parsons, with Morris and Ace Herman in association, and directed by George Blair, the picture is hard to figure as to its future. Although the camel aspect is historically accurate, the sight of the beasts slogging across Death Valley is hard to accept seriously in a projection room. It may look more credible in a theatre.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification.

"The Duel at Silver Creek"

(Universal-International)

A FAST-MOVING Western tale in the conventional mold, "The Duel at Silver Creek" presents Audie Murphy, Faith Domergue and Stephen McNally in the leads. Leonard Goldstein produced knowingly, in color by Technicolor.

Gerald Drayson Adams' story of some blood-thirsty claim jumper outlaws who force mine owners to sign over their claims at the point of a gun, offers plenty of opportunity for exciting action within a familiar framework.

McNally, marshal of the Silver City area which has been terrorized by the claim-jumpers, takes on Murphy as his deputy after the outlaws have put the law officer's trigger finger out of commission. Murphy, as quick on the draw as he is at cards, has a personal grudge against the claim-jumpers since they killed his dad. The campaign against the crew is complicated by McNally's falling for beautiful Miss Domergue who, unknown to McNally and Murphy, actually is the great and good friend of Gerald Mohr, the head of the band. Posing as brother and sister, Mohr and Miss Domergue run a "phony" mining company while directing their underground activities.

The pace is continually good and builds nicely towards the climactic duel of the title. This occurs when McNally and Murphy, having uncovered Miss Domergue's treachery, move towards the bandit hideout for a gun-blazing showdown with Mohr and the rescue of pretty Susan Cabot, Murphy's light-o-love, held as hostage by the bandits.

Don Siegel directed, with the emphasis on movement. The outdoor locales are guaranteed to please the action fans. Adams and Joseph Hoffman wrote the screenplay. Also featured in the competent cast are Eugene Inglesias, as a local Silver City boy-gone-wrong, and James Anderson, one of Miss Domergue's hired assassins.

Running time, 77 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Fight Drive-in Building

ALBANY, N. Y., July 13. — Residents of three housing developments in Guilderland are protesting the erection of a drive-in by John Gardner, owner of the Colony in Schenectady, on a plot that originally had been part of a housing development. A petition subsequently asked the town board to declare the area a residential zone and to halt construction of the theatre.

HOLLYWOOD, July 13.—"Wild Stallion" and "Here Come the Marines," a Monogram dual playing at the first-run Lyric Theatre in Salt Lake City, closed a seven-day run with a gross of $4,152, Harold Wirthwein, Western sales manager, reports here, noting that they topped all grosses for Monogram product in Salt Lake City for a year.

Ask for Particulars In Percentage Suit

FARGO, N. D., July 13.—A motion virtually requiring five film distributing companies to produce copies of contracts or other licensing agreements allegedly violated by three North Dakota theatre owners was presented in U.S. District Court here.

Paramount Film Distributing Corp., RKO Radio Pictures, Universal Film Exchange, Inc., Warner Brothers Pictures Distributing Corp. and 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. have charged, in eight damage actions, that a Bottineau, N. D., and two Rugby, N. D., theatre owners misrepresented box-office receipts in film rental percentage reports.

The motion requesting the complaint be made "more definite and certain," was presented by L. H. Oehlert, Fargo attorney representing Guy A. Troyer and Otis K. Engen, owners of the Lyric Theatre in Rugby, and Carter S. Troyer, owner of the State in Bottineau.

David Shearer, Minneapolis attorney representing the companies, argued against the motion and moved for an inspection of the theatres' records to determine if any fraud in reporting existed.

Judge C. J. Vogel gave 10 days for the filing of the plaintiffs' supplemental brief and 10 days for filing of a reply by the defense.

The case will be heard in U.S. District Court in Grand Forks in November.

Ascap to Weigh New Payoff for Writers

Otto A. Harbach, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, has sent a call to ASCAP members to attend meetings on both coasts in order to hear a revised system of writer royalty distribution. The first meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, at the Waldorf Astoria, here, to be followed in a couple of weeks by a similar meeting on the West Coast.

The revised plan of writer royalty distribution calls for changes in the present sustained performance fund, giving members in the lower categories a greater opportunity to advance, and at the same time assuring stability of a substantial part of each writer's income over a period of years.

Members of the Society who are veterans of World War II are given the benefit of selecting the best five-year average out of their last 10 years of membership.

Accurate Concise and Impartial

VOL. 72. NO. 9 NEW YORK, U. S. A., MONDAY, JULY 14, 1952 TEN CENTS

Tradewise...

By SHERWIN KANE

FAILURE of the elaborate and costly television and radio coverage of the Republican National Convention in Chicago to affect national theatre attendance to any noticeable degree throughout most of last week is interpreted by many theatre operators as another illustration of the truth of the maxim that you have to have a show, even on TV, to draw the crowds.

For its first four days the convention was without a real show. The result was that its audience was an audience of stay-at-homes. They were not the theatre patrons; certainly not that huge segment of the theatre's patronage found in the below 25-year age groups.

Moreover, some theatre operators surmise, the great group of TV viewers who are not hopelessly addicted, were forced out of their homes (and some of them into theatres) as a result of the cancelling of standard entertainment programs from the networks to accommodate the convention coverage. When the convention itself lacked drama up to its final stages and there was nothing else to turn to on the midget screens, that's when many must have gone out to a movie, these exhibitors believe.

The experience may reasonably be expected to hold true for the Democratic National Convention next week. Unless the Democrats can furnish the living rooms of the nation with something dramatic, the telecasts and radio broadcasts of their proceedings will be virtually without effect on theatre attendance, at least until the balloting begins in the last stages of the convention.

WHAT impressed this department most in the economic policy statement of MGM last week was its complete freedom from any note of hysteria or, even, doubt. There was, in fact, real encouragement not only for the people of that company but for the industry in the confident statement that "We believe strongly that the problems that beset us are soluble—that the obstacles surrounding us can be overcome."

Executives and contract personnel are to be congratulated for cooperating. Others, if deserving, will not be affected. All should be benefited in the long run.

Republicans A 'Grand Old Party', Exhibitors Agree

To the very end, the Republican National Convention was kind to the nation's theatres.

The early Eisenhower victory on Friday was so perfectly tailored to order for theatre business that many in the industry began to wonder if it had not been deliberately planned that way to court exhibitors' votes next November. No patron planning to attend even a matinee on Friday found it necessary to alter his or her plans. All were able to go to the first afternoon performance knowing the identity of the Republican nominee.

All of exhibition now is hoping the Democratic leaders, in convention in Chicago next week, show the industry equal consideration.

Good weekend business appeared the rule as even the incurable TV addicts and chronic stay-at-homes, surfeited with four and one-half days of

San Diego ITO Will Aid Practices Probe

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—The Independent Theatre Owners of San Diego has joined the Southern California Theatre Owners Association in cooperating with the Senate Small Business Committee's special investigator, William D. Amis, in his study of trade practices prevalent in this area which independent exhibitors consider injurious to them and contradictory to the intent of the consent decree.

Amis, who launched the investigation last Thursday, spent the weekend on his continuing round of visits to independent exhibitors. Beginning tomor-

"Son of Paleface"

[Paramount]

IT IS DOUBTFUL that anywhere there breathes a movie-goer who will not erupt into ringing laughter and mirth upon seeing "Son of Paleface." Someone at Paramount had the hilarious good sense to combine Bob Hope, Jane Russell and Roy Rogers in one film and the idea is sure to have a bonanza-reaping effect at the box-office.

The production is extravagant in its entertainment values, including color by Technicolor, eye-filling scenery and some eight songs, variously and at times jointly sung by the principals. Gags, surprises and bits of satire roll off in continuous luxury. And Bing Crosby makes his brief but inevitable appearance.

The spoof opens as our boy Bob, a Harvard man and son of the legendary Indian fighter Paleface, comes to Sawbuck Pass to claim the fortune presumably left by his father. It happens that the territory is being terrorized by an outlaw group led by a mysterious figure known as "The Torch." This desperate fact brings to town none other than government agent Roy Rogers who is determined to get at the roots of all the

Grant First TV Permits Since Freeze

Set 14 Stations, Nine in Cities Without Video

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The first grants for construction of new television stations since the freeze were issued on Friday by the Federal Communications Commission.

FCC granted permits for 14 new commercial TV stations, nine of which are in cities presently without television service and five in cities assigned UHF channels only.

In addition, the Commission ordered hearings on 18 other channels in 10 cities for which competing applications had been received. Fourteen applications were tossed out, 13 because they had not been amended since the freeze and one because it was faulty.

Among the applications dropped was one filed by United Paramount Theatres for Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla. UPT would have five stations if the proposed ABC-UPT merger

More Delay Is Seen for New Franco-U.S. Pact

No early resumption of negotiations with the French government on a new agreement for importation of American films and conversion of approximately $4,500,000 in blocked film earnings there is likely, it appeared following a Motion Picture Association of America board meeting here on Friday.

The recent negotiations in Paris, which ended 10 days ago in a stalemate over French insistence on subsidy provisions for French films and a reduction of American film imports, were reviewed at Friday's meeting, presided over by Eric Johnston, MPAA president. Johnston called another meeting for tomorrow to continue the discussions.

Presumably, MPAA will endeavor to come up with a new proposal at tomorrow's meeting which might serve to reopen the discussions in Paris at a later date. There was no indication following Friday's meeting whether Johnston or John McCarthy, MPAA international head, would go to Paris when the sessions are resumed.

In addition, there was no indication from the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers here whether it has designated a representative to attend the Paris sessions when they are resumed. Alfred W. Crown, Samuel Goldwyn Prdouctions sales head, who represented SIMPP at the previous Paris meetings, will leave here for the Coast today and James A. Mulvey, Goldwyn Productions president, who has been a key figure for SIMPP in foreign agreement negotiations, is scheduled to leave here for the Goldwyn studio on Thursday. Mulvey is due back in New York over the weekend, however.

The previous French agreement expired June 30.

Friday's MPAA session also considered reports on current negotiations in Tokyo to free some $10,000,000 in blocked yen accumulated by film companies there during the period of the American Occupation. Considerable progress has been made, it is understood, but negotiations will be continued in an effort to free all of the blocked funds. If successful, the association and SIMPP then will face the difficult task of allocating the sum among the individual distribution companies and producers.

Johnston and Joyce O'Hara, MPAA vice-president, left here Saturday for Washington and are due back tonight or tomorrow morning.

Call Report of Offer To Selig Unfounded

HOLLYWOOD, July 13.—Reports from Denver that Robert Selig had been offered the managership of the Roxy Theatre by Charles P. Skouras appeared unfounded today when Skouras spokesman pointed out that National Theatres has not acquired the Roxy. Although Roxy manager David Katz is here conferring with Skouras, there was no indication that his future status is concerned.

Twin City Theatres Is Bowing Out

MINNEAPOLIS, July 13.—Twin City Theatres, less than a year ago a potent factor in the independent theatre field in St. Paul, is making its exit from exhibition in favor of the ice-cream business.

Owners with Burt Myers of the Dairy Queen franchise for several states, the three officers of Twin City (M. E. Montgomery, Howard Dale and Bob Rydeen) until last Feb. 23 operated the Strand and Tower first-runs and Lyceum and State last-runs in the loop and the neighborhood Hamline in the Midway district.

On Feb. 23, they shuttered the Strand and Tower after starting court action to force Minnesota Amusement Co. to take the two theatres back and refund payments of $75,000, claiming possibilities of the houses had been misrepresented. (The two theatres are still dark.)

Last week, Mrs. Howard Dale, wife of one of the Twin City owners negotiated a new lease with the owners of the Lyceum, and took over operation of the Hamline, on which TCT holds the lease with the property owners. This week, TCT is concluding negotiations for the sale of the equipment in the State and its lease.

Theatre owners in the Cleveland area were typical of the thousands throughout the land who hope that the Democratic convention home telecasts will follow the pattern of the Republican convention telecasts which resulted in a box-office bonanza.

Practically all of Cleveland's exhibitors, both first and subsequent-run owners, reported the best three day's business in recent months. TV convention concentration drove people out of their homes in quest of amusement entertainment. Even mediocre programs drew heavy attendance, exhibitors reported.

"Son of Paleface"

skullduggery. "The Torch," it develops, is Miss Russell, who conceals her nefarious enterprises by working at the local saloon as an entertainer with a smoldering way with a song.

These basic plot factors have been expanded by scriptwriters Frank Tashlin, Robert L. Welch and Joseph Quillan into a joyous collection of tangled fancies that sends one's spirit soaring.

When Hope finds his father's treasure chest it is empty, a circumstance he would like to keep concealed in the light of the horde of angry debtors at his neck. Meanwhile Miss Russell lays plans to get Hope under the moonlight and then romance away his fortune. The adventures that follow are wildly imaginative.

Since things are done in a big way in Robert L. Welch's production there are two bubble baths, one that Miss Russell takes and one that Hope tackles.

In the course of events there are a series of holdups, battles with badmen and Indians, and asserted encounters with peril. It all, however, leads to the end in which Hope finds his fortune, wins a reformed Miss Russell, and receives the blessing of outlaw-conquering Rogers.

As for the showman, he can be assured of the customer leaving the theatre in the gay mood that will bring him back.

Tashlin also directed.

Also in Denver, John Wolfberg, a local exhibitor, owns 34 per cent of the same company, which seeks a channel in competition with Alladin Radio and TV.

A hearing was also ordered in the contest between Orange Television Broadcasting, of which Wometco's Mitchell Wolfson owns five per cent, and Tampa Broadcasting Co. Involved is a Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., channel.

Mid-Continent Television, in which Los Angeles exhibitor Sherill Corwin has a 20 per cent interest, will compete for a Wichita, Kans., channel with two other applicants. W. S. Butterfield Theatres will contest for a Flint, Mich., channel.

FCC granted three construction permits for Denver channels, one in Portland, Ore.; two in Springfield-Holyoke, Mass.; two in Youngstown, Ohio · two in York, Pa.; and one each in Flint, Mich.; Bridgeport, Conn.; New Britain, Conn., and New Bedford, Mass.

Both major and independent producers are scheduled to be canvassed with respect to exhibitor complaints which induced Amis' investigation.

The investigation was sparked by the complaints of the SCTOA to the Senate Small Business Committee. At an initial meeting last Thursday, Amis met with SCTOA trade practice committee members who outlined post-consent decree practices they consider contrary to the spirit of the decree and volunteered to document their charges fully.

Amis expects to conduct similar investigations in Chicago, New York, and possibly other centers.

a sales swing of the South, meeting with the Dallas, Atlanta and Charlotte, exchanges, and of the East, covering the Buffalo and Boston branches.

The sales drive, named in honor of William J. Heineman, UA vice-president in charge of distribution, began on June 15 and will extend to December 6.

For the purpose of the drive, all UA exchanges have been classified into three groups based on their grossing potential over the past several years. Under this plan, exchanges of equal sales strength are placed in competition with one another, rather than with the total sales organization.

Capital Takes Early Lead in U. A. Drive

United Artists exchanges in Washington, St. Louis and Salt Lake City have leaped to early leads in their respective groups in the second week of the first lap of the "Bill Heineman Sales Drive," it was revealed here by Max E. Youngstein, UA vice-president and drive captain. The sales effort to honor William J. Heineman, UA's vice-president in charge of distribution, will run to December 6. Each UA exchange is placed in one of three groups in order to establish greater opportunities for all. The drive is divided into three laps of six weeks each during which periods first, second and third prizes will be awarded. The last seven weeks will be utilized to determine grand prize winners.

Closely following the leaders in each group are Dallas and Atlanta, holding second and third spots, respectively, in the first group; Cleveland and Charlotte, second and third in the second group, and New Haven and Montreal, second and third in the third group.

Central district manager Moe Dudelson is holding an early lead in the special contest among UA districts with Southern manager George Pabst running a close second.

Cincinnati Buildings Get Valuation Cuts

CINCINNATI, July 13. — The State Board of Tax Appeals, in Columbus, has upheld a 10 per cent reduction in the valuation of 14 Cincinnati suburban theatres, which the Hamilton County Board of Taxation allowed to 19 theatres some time ago at the request of the theatre owners "because of economic conditions resulting from a definite decline in attendance." However, 13 owners, representing 14 theatres, appealed for larger reductions.

The companies involved are: Hamilton Amusement Co., Harmony Amusement Co., Royal Theatre Co., Cheviot Four-Star Theatres, Albert J. and Jacob D. Rinsberg, John H. Hoskins and Louis Wiethe, Pela Theatre Co., Montgomery Amusement Co., George C. Kolb, Samuel S. Schaengold, N. R. Baum, Pearl G. Hunt and Ruth Chase and Loretta Jackson.

Reviews

"Barbed Wire"

(Columbia)

GENE AUTRY, aided by his comical sidekick, Pat Buttram, pits his wit and guns against a would-be railroad magnate in his latest production which Armand Schaefer produced and George Archainbaud directed. The film is on a par with previous Autry pictures and from time to time is highlighted, as usual, with songs by the star.

Autry appears as a cattle buyer from a Kansas railhead who goes to Texas to investigate a group of homesteaders whose barbed wire fences have cut off one of the state's most important cattle trails. The homesteaders turn out to be "phonies," acting on orders of Leonard Penn, another cattleman, who hopes to create a demand by a group of cattlemen for a railroad in the area. The railroad would have to be built over territory owned by Penn, who plans in that fashion to become wealthy and powerful. Gene, with the aid of Buttram and Anne James, pretty newspaper publisher, eventually marshals the cattlemen and brings the dubious schemes of Penn out into the open. A climactic gun fight ends Penn's career.

Running time, 61 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

"Desert Pursuit"

(Monogram)

CUSTOMERS had better be warned to see this film from the beginning, since a foreword explains the mystifying presence of three Arabs on camels in Death Valley as left-overs from an unsuccessful Confederate dromedary detachment organized during the Civil War. In other respects, the traditional Western plot unfolds as the Arabs pursue Wayne Morris and his supply of freshly-panned gold, and Virginia Grey, an erstwhile gambling table dealer, with intent to rob them.

The late W. Scott Darling wrote the script, which rides a good part of its distance on silently photographed stretches of desert, showing the pursued and the pursuers making their difficult way across Death Valley's gigantic rock and sandy slopes. These are the film's best minutes. When the dialogue is resumed, and when the final, fatal action gets going, the majesty of the terrain tends to overwhelm the human issues being worked out. This final, fatal action takes place on the mountainous rim of Death Valley as Morris and a friendly Indian fight it out with the Arab robbers, killing two and routing the other.

Produced by Lindsley Parsons, with Morris and Ace Herman in association, and directed by George Blair, the picture is hard to figure as to its future. Although the camel aspect is historically accurate, the sight of the beasts slogging across Death Valley is hard to accept seriously in a projection room. It may look more credible in a theatre.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification.

"The Duel at Silver Creek"

(Universal-International)

A FAST-MOVING Western tale in the conventional mold, "The Duel at Silver Creek" presents Audie Murphy, Faith Domergue and Stephen McNally in the leads. Leonard Goldstein produced knowingly, in color by Technicolor.

Gerald Drayson Adams' story of some blood-thirsty claim jumper outlaws who force mine owners to sign over their claims at the point of a gun, offers plenty of opportunity for exciting action within a familiar framework.

McNally, marshal of the Silver City area which has been terrorized by the claim-jumpers, takes on Murphy as his deputy after the outlaws have put the law officer's trigger finger out of commission. Murphy, as quick on the draw as he is at cards, has a personal grudge against the claim-jumpers since they killed his dad. The campaign against the crew is complicated by McNally's falling for beautiful Miss Domergue who, unknown to McNally and Murphy, actually is the great and good friend of Gerald Mohr, the head of the band. Posing as brother and sister, Mohr and Miss Domergue run a "phony" mining company while directing their underground activities.

The pace is continually good and builds nicely towards the climactic duel of the title. This occurs when McNally and Murphy, having uncovered Miss Domergue's treachery, move towards the bandit hideout for a gun-blazing showdown with Mohr and the rescue of pretty Susan Cabot, Murphy's light-o-love, held as hostage by the bandits.

Don Siegel directed, with the emphasis on movement. The outdoor locales are guaranteed to please the action fans. Adams and Joseph Hoffman wrote the screenplay. Also featured in the competent cast are Eugene Inglesias, as a local Silver City boy-gone-wrong, and James Anderson, one of Miss Domergue's hired assassins.

Running time, 77 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Fight Drive-in Building

ALBANY, N. Y., July 13. — Residents of three housing developments in Guilderland are protesting the erection of a drive-in by John Gardner, owner of the Colony in Schenectady, on a plot that originally had been part of a housing development. A petition subsequently asked the town board to declare the area a residential zone and to halt construction of the theatre.

$4,152 Mono. Dual Gross

HOLLYWOOD, July 13.—"Wild Stallion" and "Here Come the Marines," a Monogram dual playing at the first-run Lyric Theatre in Salt Lake City, closed a seven-day run with a gross of $4,152, Harold Wirthwein, Western sales manager, reports here, noting that they topped all grosses for Monogram product in Salt Lake City for a year.

Ask for Particulars In Percentage Suit

FARGO, N. D., July 13.—A motion virtually requiring five film distributing companies to produce copies of contracts or other licensing agreements allegedly violated by three North Dakota theatre owners was presented in U.S. District Court here.

Paramount Film Distributing Corp., RKO Radio Pictures, Universal Film Exchange, Inc., Warner Brothers Pictures Distributing Corp. and 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. have charged, in eight damage actions, that a Bottineau, N. D., and two Rugby, N. D., theatre owners misrepresented box-office receipts in film rental percentage reports.

The motion requesting the complaint be made "more definite and certain," was presented by L. H. Oehlert, Fargo attorney representing Guy A. Troyer and Otis K. Engen, owners of the Lyric Theatre in Rugby, and Carter S. Troyer, owner of the State in Bottineau.

David Shearer, Minneapolis attorney representing the companies, argued against the motion and moved for an inspection of the theatres' records to determine if any fraud in reporting existed.

Judge C. J. Vogel gave 10 days for the filing of the plaintiffs' supplemental brief and 10 days for filing of a reply by the defense.

The case will be heard in U.S. District Court in Grand Forks in November.

Ascap to Weigh New Payoff for Writers

Otto A. Harbach, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, has sent a call to ASCAP members to attend meetings on both coasts in order to hear a revised system of writer royalty distribution. The first meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, at the Waldorf Astoria, here, to be followed in a couple of weeks by a similar meeting on the West Coast.

The revised plan of writer royalty distribution calls for changes in the present sustained performance fund, giving members in the lower categories a greater opportunity to advance, and at the same time assuring stability of a substantial part of each writer's income over a period of years.

Members of the Society who are veterans of World War II are given the benefit of selecting the best five-year average out of their last 10 years of membership.

Wolfson Hits Shortage of Carrier Lines

TOA Head Optimistic About Medium's Future

The "lack of carrier lines" needed to form national and regional theatre television circuits was pointed up yesterday in a report on the progress of the medium, rendered by Mitchell Wolfson, president of the Theatre Owners of America.

The nine-page report, sent to TOA members throughout the country, painted a rosy picture as to the potentialities of the medium. It stated that theatre television has already established itself as a "new and developing service," citing its growth since 1948 when only one theatre was TV-equipped. Currently, the report pointed out, there are 80 theatres in 46 cities equipped with theatre television, with a seating capacity of almost 200,000.

However, TOA president Wolfson stressed the rate of expansion depends in a large degree on the ready

Notes Upward Trend Here in Business

There has been a "definite upward trend" at the box-office at Loew's neighborhood theatres in New York for the past four weeks compared to the business done for the same period last year, according to a Loew's circuit spokesman.

The spokesman credited a combination of people getting tired of television, the heat wave and good product.

'Married' Opens to Robust $80,000 in Midst of NY Heat

The opening week of "We're Not Married" at the Roxy here is forecast to hit a robust $80,000, setting the pace for other New York first-runs.

The terrific heat wave starting at the weekend appeared to aid some Broadway houses, while other theatres contended their box-offices were adversely affected with people flocking to the beaches and resorts. The final days of the televised Republican National Convention had little or no effect on the box-office, according to most local showmen.

The Roxy, which is currently featuring also an ice revue and Roches-

FCC Grants Four More Video Station Permits

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Federal Communications Commission has granted four more television construction permits, one to a Spokane company in which Bing Crosby owns a 40 per cent interest.

Earlier, the FCC had announced granting of 14 licenses and the ordering of 18 hearings in 10 cities covering channels for which more than one application had been filed.

The added four brought the total of new television station licenses to 18. Two were for Spokane channels. The other two were for channels in Austin, Tex.

Seven more hearings were ordered on as many channels in four more cities, Beaumont-Port Arthur, two; Duluth-Superior, two; Sacramento, two; Fort Wayne, one.

Bing Crosby had originally filed for stations in Spokane, Yakima and Tacoma. He changed his mind about complete ownership and decided not to amend his applications after the freeze, as required by FCC rules, throwing in with the company now awarded a Spokane license. The commission threw out his old application for Spokane, and when it gets around to the other cities will dispose of those applications in the same way.

Exhibitors Stirred By 'Free Movies'

DETROIT, July 14.—Independent theatres located mostly in Northern Michigan are being plagued by persons who have been showing so-called "free movies."

A few months ago, Clive Waxman, independent booker, asked the Grand Rapids city officials to halt the showing of free films under the guise of educational films. Nothing happened.

Lately the situation has been becoming a serious threat to the small exhibitor.

Individuals rent 16 mm. films, many of which are of very recent issue and show these in small towns with the co-operation of local merchants who contribute a few dollars to have their card on the screen.

The films are usually shown on vacant lots with signs proclaiming "free movies."

After they are shown the audience is asked to make a contribution if they desire a continuation of this type of entertainment. No Federal admission tax is collected.

Allied Theatres of Michigan has taken a hand in attempting to stop this situation. The U.S. Senate Small Business Committee in Washington has been asked to investigate.

availability of multi-theatre hook-ups. Explained Wolfson: "At present, such linking together of theatres is limited in many areas of the U. S. by the lack of carrier lines which can be made available for this purpose by the telephone companies."

The report, prepared with the assistance of Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of United Paramount Theatres, and chairman of TOA's television committee, listed five types of theatre TV use, now seen. They are: public service, business service, entertainment, public events and sports.

On public events, the report stated that plans are being perfected for government use of theatre TV as a quick and economical means of informing business, labor and farm leaders all over the country on aspects of defense production.

On the medium's relationship with home television, the report stated that "since theatre TV is so highly specialized, the area of competition with broadcast television is small."

On the telecasting of sports events, Wolfson pointed out that "experience of exhibitors indicate that only a relatively few sports events have sufficient appeal to make them national box-office attractions."

The report, which was prepared with the assistance of Si Fabian, president of the National Exhibitors Theatre Television Committee, also stressed the importance of the industry's bid for channels now before the Federal Communications Commission.

BBC to Make Own Films for Video

LONDON, July 14.—With exhibitors remaining adamant against the trade supplying films for television, the British Broadcasting Corp. is going ahead with plans for producing its own films.

Four films for pre-Coronation showing on television are now to be made by the BBC television film unit. The films will be offered to overseas television organizations. Negotiations are proceeding with one American network. It is understood that the BBC might agree to a reciprocal arrangement whereby American films would be made available to the corporation.

At the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association annual convention at Llandudno last week, the exhibitors decided to discontinue trading with any film renter or producer making or handling films for both television and theatre exhibition.

The exhibitors also turned down the British Film Producers Association suggestion for an exploratory meeting with the BBC until something of a substantial nature arises either from the government or the BBC.

ter on stage, hit a big $55,000 at the weekend, with another $25,000 indicated for the remainder of the week which ends Thursday night.

A pretty good $65,000 is forecast for the initial week of "She's Working Her Way Through College" at the Paramount, which features Jan Murray and the Modernaires on stage. Doing excellent business is "Where's Charley?" at the Radio City Music Hall, where a very good $135,000 is seen for the third inning.

'Robin Hood' Healthy

The third stanza of "Story of Robin Hood" is expected to register a healthy $30,000 at the Criterion, which has booked "Big Sky" as its next attraction, with an August 20 opening date set.

At the Capitol, a fair $21,000 is estimated for the fifth and final week of "Pat and Mike." Opening there tomorrow is "Carrie." Holding up well is "Walk East on Beacon" at the Victoria, where a nice $14,500 is due for its seventh week.

"The Story of Will Rogers" bows in at the Astor Thursday, replacing "3 for Bedroom C," which is expected to do a weak $8,500 for its third and final round.

At the Mayfair, a not-too-bad $10,000 is estimated for the second week of "Has Anybody Seen My Gal." On July 24, "High Noon" will begin its run at the Astor. "Don't Bother to Knock" opens at the Globe Friday replacing "The Lady in the Iron Mask," which is forecast to do a moderate $10,000 for its second and final stanza.

'Paula" Opens Today

"The Washington Story" at Loew's State ended its two-week run there with a weak $8,000 registered for its final session. Opening today is "Paula."

Among off-Broadway houses, "Man in the White Suit" at the Sutton is holding up excellently. The Sutton is expected to rack up a neat $8,000 for the 15th week of the film. Also doing nicely is "Encore" at the Normandie, where $6,700 is seen for the film's 15th week.

A good $4,600 is indicated for the eighth round of "High Treason" at the Trans-Lux 52nd Street, while a fair $3,000 was racked up by "Narrow Margin" at the Trans-Lux 60th Street, ending an 11-week run. Opening at that house today is "White Corridors."

"Island Rescue" is doing fairly well at the Park Avenue, with $5,700 indicated for its second inning. The "King Kong" reissue has been booked to open at the Palace Aug. 8.

Censor Test

the industry, Hissong agreed at the meeting with Manning Clagett, MPAA associate director of public relations and information, and Robert Wile, ITOO executive secretary, that Hofheimer's theatre should serve as the censorship violation point where a state field inspector Wednesday night will witness the exhibition of a Republican Convention newsreel without the censor's seal.

After making certain the seal was not borne by the film the inspector will swear out warrants returnable in municipal court against the exhibitor and the distributor, in this case Warner Brothers.

Penalties for exhibiting film in Ohio without the censors' seals are not less than $25 or more than $300 for a first offsense, and not less than $300 and not more than $500 for each subsequent offense. Distributor penalties are not less than $25 or more than $300 for delivering to the exhibitor an uncensored print and not less than $300 or more than $500 for failure to submit a print for censorship. Subsequent such failures provide penalties of not less than $500 or more than $1,000.

Five Ohio theatres in all will initiate censorship violations on Wednesday with the showing of Republican Convention reels that were not submitted for the censors' approval. They include, in addition to the Little Theatre here, the Lower Mall Theatre, Celevland; Westwood, Toledo; Park, Cincinnati, and the Palace, Youngstown. The others may be subject to the fines, but the Little Theatre will be the only house to figure in the court test.

Await Ohio Censor Board Decision on 'Miracle'

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Decision on "The Miracle," viewed by the Ohio film censor board on July 1, is expected by tomorrow according to Dr. Clyde Hissong, chief film censor.

The Columbus Citizen voiced its "regret" at the inaccuracy of its editorial statement that Ohio film censor fees of $3 per reel "netted $3-million per year." The Citizen printed a letter from Dr. Hissong in which he gave the correct yearly amounts of censor fees. Receipts from fees in fiscal 1952 amounted to $294,783, said Dr. Hissong. Receipts in 1951 were $297,892, in 1950, they were $300,573, and in 1949, $276,563.

Intent on securing at least 45 shuttered theatres at the outset, Lawrence said that with funds he has available he would prepare three musicals "with very broad appeal" that can be offered in theatres of 2,000 seats, or more, for a top price of $2.40.

Stars Available

"Stars from Hollywood are available for roles in these musicals," Lawrence added. He declared motion picture trailers would be used in the theatres to promote coming stage attractions. According to his estimate, "six months should be sufficient to set this plan properly, tastefully and economically into operation." If the plan should succeed, Lawrence said, it would mean that theatres that now are dark could be kept open and earn revenue at least 30 weeks out of a year.

THE tumult and the shouting dies, the Captains and the Kings depart . . . Alfred Lord Tennyson's 'Recessional' aptly describes the scene in Chicago where the ghost of the 1952 Republican Convention is about all that remains of the charged atmosphere, heated words, dynamic demonstrations and the resultant nomination of General Dwight D. Eisenhower as that party's standard bearer . . . the millions of TViewers in America both at home or at theatres who thrilled to the historic scenes depicting Democracy at work, will never again be satisfied with mere reports of such gatherings alone but rather will look upon printed reports as complements and component parts of the complete story, part of which they themselves witnessed. . . . Starring the Democratic Party Bigwigs, Act 2 of the National Drama, will now take place at the same spot and over similar networks and tie-ups with the last and final Act (3) recorded, filmed and kinescoped for posterity across the length and breadth of the country, and starring Mr. and Mrs. John Q. UPT-ABC anti-trust phases be dropped. The Tuesday brief also questioned the relevancy of the anti-trust phase, and further cited the need of ABC for a decision before September so that the fall broadcast schedule could be planned.

DuMont, through attorney Morton Galane, said that even if the Commission did decide the case directly as asked, the September deadline could not be met. The need for an examiner's report, on the other hand, "is clear under the legislative history and judicial interpretations of the administrative procedure act," Galane said.

It would not be fair to subject DuMont to a decision on the question of whether it is controlled by Paramount without an initial decision to which exceptions could be taken, the brief argued. "The examiner's report is essential to resolve the conflicts of fact."

As to the anti-trust issue, DuMont denied that the absence of any violations by the parties to the proposed merger since 1949 has any significance. The terms of the consent decree make such violations impossible in the film industry, but afford no protection in the field of broadcasting.

The record of past conduct should be examined in the light of the fact that UPT directors were involved in the violations and "the UPT-ABC merger poses dangers to independent stations as against the network, and to small networks as against the merged company—dangers that have no relation to financial resources, but that would stem from the imposition of unreasonable runs and clearances or the inability to get film product due to the tie-in of the ABC network with the UPT theatre chain."

The brief continued, "past experience aids in the prediction of consequences," and said that examination of "unlawful advantage" taken in the past because of "the tie-in of subsidiary theatre chains" should be made in the light of possible transference of the practices to the broadcast field.

DuMont argued that past theatre buying practices proves that "suppression of competition" would result from the merger, if approved. The company pointed out that it was not arguing that past anti-trust violations should automatically disqualify an application from individual licenses.

Wolfson Hits Shortage of Carrier Lines

TOA Head Optimistic About Medium's Future

The "lack of carrier lines" needed to form national and regional theatre television circuits was pointed up yesterday in a report on the progress of the medium, rendered by Mitchell Wolfson, president of the Theatre Owners of America.

The nine-page report, sent to TOA members throughout the country, painted a rosy picture as to the potentialities of the medium. It stated that theatre television has already established itself as a "new and developing service," citing its growth since 1948 when only one theatre was TV-equipped. Currently, the report pointed out, there are 80 theatres in 46 cities equipped with theatre television, with a seating capacity of almost 200,000.

However, TOA president Wolfson stressed the rate of expansion depends in a large degree on the ready

Notes Upward Trend Here in Business

There has been a "definite upward trend" at the box-office at Loew's neighborhood theatres in New York for the past four weeks compared to the business done for the same period last year, according to a Loew's circuit spokesman.

The spokesman credited a combination of people getting tired of television, the heat wave and good product.

'Married' Opens to Robust $80,000 in Midst of NY Heat

The opening week of "We're Not Married" at the Roxy here is forecast to hit a robust $80,000, setting the pace for other New York first-runs.

The terrific heat wave starting at the weekend appeared to aid some Broadway houses, while other theatres contended their box-offices were adversely affected with people flocking to the beaches and resorts. The final days of the televised Republican National Convention had little or no effect on the box-office, according to most local showmen.

FCC Grants Four More Video Station Permits

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Federal Communications Commission has granted four more television construction permits, one to a Spokane company in which Bing Crosby owns a 40 per cent interest.

Earlier, the FCC had announced granting of 14 licenses and the ordering of 18 hearings in 10 cities covering channels for which more than one application had been filed.

The added four brought the total of new television station licenses to 18. Two were for Spokane channels. The other two were for channels in Austin, Tex.

Seven more hearings were ordered on as many channels in four more cities, Beaumont-Port Arthur, two; Duluth-Superior, two; Sacramento, two; Fort Wayne, one.

Bing Crosby had originally filed for stations in Spokane, Yakima and Tacoma. He changed his mind about complete ownership and decided not to amend his applications after the freeze, as required by FCC rules, throwing in with the company now awarded a Spokane license. The commission threw out his old application for Spokane, and when it gets around to the other cities will dispose of those applications in the same way.

Exhibitors Stirred By 'Free Movies'

DETROIT, July 14.—Independent theatres located mostly in Northern Michigan are being plagued by persons who have been showing so-called "free movies."

A few months ago, Clive Waxman, independent booker, asked the Grand Rapids city officials to halt the showing of free films under the guise of educational films. Nothing happened.

Lately the situation has been becoming a serious threat to the small exhibitor.

Individuals rent 16 mm. films, many of which are of very recent issue and show these in small towns with the co-operation of local merchants who contribute a few dollars to have their card on the screen.

The films are usually shown on vacant lots with signs proclaiming "free movies."

After they are shown the audience is asked to make a contribution if they desire a continuation of this type of entertainment. No Federal admission tax is collected.

Allied Theatres of Michigan has taken a hand in attempting to stop this situation. The U.S. Senate Small Business Committee in Washington has been asked to investigate.

availability of multi-theatre hook-ups. Explained Wolfson: "At present, such linking together of theatres is limited in many areas of the U. S. by the lack of carrier lines which can be made available for this purpose by the telephone companies."

The report, prepared with the assistance of Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of United Paramount Theatres, and chairman of TOA's television committee, listed five types of theatre TV use, now seen. They are: public service, business service, entertainment, public events and sports.

On public events, the report stated that plans are being perfected for government use of theatre TV as a quick and economical means of informing business, labor and farm leaders all over the country on aspects of defense production.

On the medium's relationship with home television, the report stated that "since theatre TV is so highly specialized, the area of competition with broadcast television is small."

On the telecasting of sports events, Wolfson pointed out that "experience of exhibitors indicate that only a relatively few sports events have sufficient appeal to make them national box-office attractions."

The report, which was prepared with the assistance of Si Fabian, president of the National Exhibitors Theatre Television Committee, also stressed the importance of the industry's bid for channels now before the Federal Communications Commission.

BBC to Make Own Films for Video

LONDON, July 14.—With exhibitors remaining adamant against the trade supplying films for television, the British Broadcasting Corp. is going ahead with plans for producing its own films.

Four films for pre-Coronation showing on television are now to be made by the BBC television film unit. The films will be offered to overseas television organizations. Negotiations are proceeding with one American network. It is understood that the BBC might agree to a reciprocal arrangement whereby American films would be made available to the corporation.

At the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association annual convention at Llandudno last week, the exhibitors decided to discontinue trading with any film renter or producer making or handling films for both television and theatre exhibition.

The exhibitors also turned down the British Film Producers Association suggestion for an exploratory meeting with the BBC until something of a substantial nature arises either from the government or the BBC.

ter on stage, hit a big $55,000 at the weekend, with another $25,000 indicated for the remainder of the week which ends Thursday night.

A pretty good $65,000 is forecast for the initial week of "She's Working Her Way Through College" at the Paramount, which features Jan Murray and the Modernaires on stage. Doing excellent business is "Where's Charley?" at the Radio City Music Hall, where a very good $135,000 is seen for the third inning.

'Robin Hood' Healthy

The third stanza of "Story of Robin Hood" is expected to register a healthy $30,000 at the Criterion, which has booked "Big Sky" as its next attraction, with an August 20 opening date set.

At the Capitol, a fair $21,000 is estimated for the fifth and final week of "Pat and Mike." Opening there tomorrow is "Carrie." Holding up well is "Walk East on Beacon" at the Victoria, where a nice $14,500 is due for its seventh week.

"The Story of Will Rogers" bows in at the Astor Thursday, replacing "3 for Bedroom C," which is expected to do a weak $8,500 for its third and final round.

At the Mayfair, a not-too-bad $10,000 is estimated for the second week of "Has Anybody Seen My Gal." On July 24, "High Noon" will begin its run at the Astor. "Don't Bother to Knock" opens at the Globe Friday replacing "The Lady in the Iron Mask," which is forecast to do a moderate $10,000 for its second and final stanza.

'Paula" Opens Today

"The Washington Story" at Loew's State ended its two-week run there with a weak $8,000 registered for its final session. Opening today is "Paula."

Among off-Broadway houses, "Man in the White Suit" at the Sutton is holding up excellently. The Sutton is expected to rack up a neat $8,000 for the 15th week of the film. Also doing nicely is "Encore" at the Normandie, where $6,700 is seen for the film's 15th week.

A good $4,600 is indicated for the eighth round of "High Treason" at the Trans-Lux 52nd Street, while a fair $3,000 was racked up by "Narrow Margin" at the Trans-Lux 60th Street, ending an 11-week run. Opening at that house today is "White Corridors."

"Island Rescue" is doing fairly well at the Park Avenue, with $5,700 indicated for its second inning. The "King Kong" reissue has been booked to open at the Palace Aug. 8.

Censor Test

the industry, Hissong agreed at the meeting with Manning Clagett, MPAA associate director of public relations and information, and Robert Wile, ITOO executive secretary, that Hofheimer's theatre should serve as the censorship violation point where a state field inspector Wednesday night will witness the exhibition of a Republican Convention newsreel without the censor's seal.

After making certain the seal was not borne by the film the inspector will swear out warrants returnable in municipal court against the exhibitor and the distributor, in this case Warner Brothers.

Penalties for exhibiting film in Ohio without the censors' seals are not less than $25 or more than $300 for a first offsense, and not less than $300 and not more than $500 for each subsequent offense. Distributor penalties are not less than $25 or more than $300 for delivering to the exhibitor an uncensored print and not less than $300 or more than $500 for failure to submit a print for censorship. Subsequent such failures provide penalties of not less than $500 or more than $1,000.

Five Ohio theatres in all will initiate censorship violations on Wednesday with the showing of Republican Convention reels that were not submitted for the censors' approval. They include, in addition to the Little Theatre here, the Lower Mall Theatre, Celevland; Westwood, Toledo; Park, Cincinnati, and the Palace, Youngstown. The others may be subject to the fines, but the Little Theatre will be the only house to figure in the court test.

Await Ohio Censor Board Decision on 'Miracle'

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Decision on "The Miracle," viewed by the Ohio film censor board on July 1, is expected by tomorrow according to Dr. Clyde Hissong, chief film censor.

The Columbus Citizen voiced its "regret" at the inaccuracy of its editorial statement that Ohio film censor fees of $3 per reel "netted $3-million per year." The Citizen printed a letter from Dr. Hissong in which he gave the correct yearly amounts of censor fees. Receipts from fees in fiscal 1952 amounted to $294,783, said Dr. Hissong. Receipts in 1951 were $297,892, in 1950, they were $300,573, and in 1949, $276,563.

Intent on securing at least 45 shuttered theatres at the outset, Lawrence said that with funds he has available he would prepare three musicals "with very broad appeal" that can be offered in theatres of 2,000 seats, or more, for a top price of $2.40.

Stars Available

"Stars from Hollywood are available for roles in these musicals," Lawrence added. He declared motion picture trailers would be used in the theatres to promote coming stage attractions. According to his estimate, "six months should be sufficient to set this plan properly, tastefully and economically into operation." If the plan should succeed, Lawrence said, it would mean that theatres that now are dark could be kept open and earn revenue at least 30 weeks out of a year.

THE tumult and the shouting dies, the Captains and the Kings depart . . . UPT-ABC anti-trust phases be dropped. The Tuesday brief also questioned the relevancy of the anti-trust phase, and further cited the need of ABC for a decision before September so that the fall broadcast schedule could be planned.

DuMont, through attorney Morton Galane, said that even if the Commission did decide the case directly as asked, the September deadline could not be met. The need for an examiner's report, on the other hand, "is clear under the legislative history and judicial interpretations of the administrative procedure act," Galane said.

It would not be fair to subject DuMont to a decision on the question of whether it is controlled by Paramount without an initial decision to which exceptions could be taken, the brief argued. "The examiner's report is essential to resolve the conflicts of fact."

As to the anti-trust issue, DuMont denied that the absence of any violations by the parties to the proposed merger since 1949 has any significance. The terms of the consent decree make such violations impossible in the film industry, but afford no protection in the field of broadcasting.

The record of past conduct should be examined in the light of the fact that UPT directors were involved in the violations and "the UPT-ABC merger poses dangers to independent stations as against the network, and to small networks as against the merged company—dangers that have no relation to financial resources, but that would stem from the imposition of unreasonable runs and clearances or the inability to get film product due to the tie-in of the ABC network with the UPT theatre chain."

The brief continued, "past experience aids in the prediction of consequences," and said that examination of "unlawful advantage" taken in the past because of "the tie-in of subsidiary theatre chains" should be made in the light of possible transference of the practices to the broadcast field.

DuMont argued that past theatre buying practices proves that "suppression of competition" would result from the merger, if approved. The company pointed out that it was not arguing that past anti-trust violations should automatically disqualify an application from individual licenses.

U.K. Quota

stone, former CEA president, had charged that the quota amounted to the blackmailing of exhibitors into playing worthless second features and documentaries which drive patrons away from theatres.

Following the indictment of the quota by the CEA at its annual convention last week at Llandudno, North Wales, the Council also decided to give further consideration to a memorandum in support of the exhibitor stand which Tom O'Brien, NATKE general secretary, sent to the convention.

Referring in the memorandum to the BOT president's statement that he was considering prosecuting some 55 cases of persistent exhibitor quota defaults, O'Brien asserted that that "is a little over one per cent of the operating cinemas in the United Kingdom."

He continued: "The two great circuits have maintained a level of production from resources that were primarily invested for the exhibition of films. These circuits, and the overwhelming majority of exhibitors, have endeavored, often under serious disadvantages, to carry out their quota obligations."

Turning to the Anglo - American Film Agreement, O'Brien said, the impending discussions between Her Majesty's Government and the Americans are being made the occasion to further the anti-American policy of the Cominform.

Says Fund Would Collapse

O'Brien continued: "Deprived of an adequate supply of American films the Eady Fund would collapse and Entertainments Tax revenue would suffer a severe laceration. "It is an unpalatable but inescapable fact that the British film industry cannot flourish in its own market without imported films. The debacle of 1947, which put 6,000 of our members out of work, from which we have never recovered, proved that. We have not the optimum essentials to maintain even half the level of current weekly public attendances at nearly 5,000 cinemas with British films alone. It would be catastrophic to attempt to do so."

O'Brien concluded with an appeal to the Films Council to consider ways and means whereby it could rehabilitate the prestige of the industry. NATKE sincerely believes that the Films Council should vigorously perform its functions, face the facts as they are and rid itself of these subversive interests, political and otherwise, that have injected themselves into the councils of the industry, as, indeed, they have done, with devastating consequences, into the wider activities of the nation's industries.

'U' Board Elects Rackmil

coupled with the board statement that the company, which heretofore followed the practice of declaring annual dividends, proposes to place its common stock on a semi-annual dividend basis.

Yesterday's declaration of a dividend represented Decca's first return on its $7,000,000 investment in Universal. As holders of 406,175 shares of Universal common, a 42 per cent interest in the film company, Decca stands to gain $203,087 in Universal dividend payments. It's yearly return, assuming the same dividend is declared six months hence, would total $406,175.

Rackmil, who was elected to the board at Universal's recent annual meeting of stockholders, announced that "there will be no changes in the management of the company" upon his assuming the presidency.

It was further announced that Rackmil will continue to serve as president of Decca, utilizing the "kindred interests" of the two companies "in the advancement of plans for all entertainment media."

Blumberg, who has been president of Universal since 1938 and is commemorating his 40th year in the industry, also stressed the mutual interests of both companies. Both Rackmil and Blumberg in their statements expressed confidence in the future of the motion picture industry, pointing out that Universal has hit a new high in its worldwide gross income.

Nate Blumberg

Rackmil, who was one of the founders of Decca in 1934, has been president of the record company since 1949. Rackmil, the principal in Decca's acquisition of Universal Stock, bought Decca's holdings to 406,175 shares of Universal common when he purchased J. Arthur Rank's interest in Universal for $2,700,000. Rank's holdings totaled 134,375 shares of Universal common.

Yesterday's 50-cent dividend declaration by Universal will be payable August 6 to stockholders of record on July 25. The last previous dividend payment on the common was made on Dec. 19, 1951 when a year-end dividend of 60 cents per share was paid.

The cumulative preferred stock dividend will be payable on September 1, to stockholders of record on August 15.

National Pre-Selling

SENN LAWLOR, publicity director for Fox Midwest Theatres in Kansas City, read an item in "National Pre-Selling" a week ago and was immediately interested in the fact that the August 31 issue of American Weekly is to be devoted to motion pictures. And since there is no Hearst newspaper in the trading area where this Fox division operates 135 theatres, he wrote asking us to convey to Ernest V. Heyn, editor of the Sunday newspaper magazine, his order for 200,000 copies to be distributed as a major item in Fox's fall campaign. He will obtain circulation for the special issue over a five-state area, where the Sunday magazine would not ordinarily be read, for mutual benefit and advantage.

Walter Brennan, Jeffrey Hunter and Anne Francis are the 20th Century-Fox stars participating in the world premiere of "Lure of the Wilderness" in Georgia this week. U.K. Quota stone, former CEA president, had charged that the quota amounted to the blackmailing of exhibitors into playing worthless second features and documentaries which drive patrons away from theatres.

Following the indictment of the quota by the CEA at its annual convention last week at Llandudno, North Wales, the Council also decided to give further consideration to a memorandum in support of the exhibitor stand which Tom O'Brien, NATKE general secretary, sent to the convention.

Referring in the memorandum to the BOT president's statement that he was considering prosecuting some 55 cases of persistent exhibitor quota defaults, O'Brien asserted that that "is a little over one per cent of the operating cinemas in the United Kingdom."

He continued: "The two great circuits have maintained a level of production from resources that were primarily invested for the exhibition of films. These circuits, and the overwhelming majority of exhibitors, have endeavored, often under serious disadvantages, to carry out their quota obligations."

Turning to the Anglo - American Film Agreement, O'Brien said, the impending discussions between Her Majesty's Government and the Americans are being made the occasion to further the anti-American policy of the Cominform.

Says Fund Would Collapse

O'Brien continued: "Deprived of an adequate supply of American films the Eady Fund would collapse and Entertainments Tax revenue would suffer a severe laceration. "It is an unpalatable but inescapable fact that the British film industry cannot flourish in its own market without imported films. The debacle of 1947, which put 6,000 of our members out of work, from which we have never recovered, proved that. We have not the optimum essentials to maintain even half the level of current weekly public attendances at nearly 5,000 cinemas with British films alone. It would be catastrophic to attempt to do so."

O'Brien concluded with an appeal to the Films Council to consider ways and means whereby it could rehabilitate the prestige of the industry. NATKE sincerely believes that the Films Council should vigorously perform its functions, face the facts as they are and rid itself of these subversive interests, political and otherwise, that have injected themselves into the councils of the industry, as, indeed, they have done, with devastating consequences, into the wider activities of the nation's industries.

coupled with the board statement that the company, which heretofore followed the practice of declaring annual dividends, proposes to place its common stock on a semi-annual dividend basis.

Yesterday's declaration of a dividend represented Decca's first return on its $7,000,000 investment in Universal. As holders of 406,175 shares of Universal common, a 42 per cent interest in the film company, Decca stands to gain $203,087 in Universal dividend payments. It's yearly return, assuming the same dividend is declared six months hence, would total $406,175.

Rackmil, who was elected to the board at Universal's recent annual meeting of stockholders, announced that "there will be no changes in the management of the company" upon his assuming the presidency.

It was further announced that Rackmil will continue to serve as president of Decca, utilizing the "kindred interests" of the two companies "in the advancement of plans for all entertainment media."

Blumberg, who has been president of Universal since 1938 and is commemorating his 40th year in the industry, also stressed the mutual interests of both companies. Both Rackmil and Blumberg in their statements expressed confidence in the future of the motion picture industry, pointing out that Universal has hit a new high in its worldwide gross income.

Nate Blumberg

Rackmil, who was one of the founders of Decca in 1934, has been president of the record company since 1949. Rackmil, the principal in Decca's acquisition of Universal Stock, bought Decca's holdings to 406,175 shares of Universal common when he purchased J. Arthur Rank's interest in Universal for $2,700,000. Rank's holdings totaled 134,375 shares of Universal common.

Yesterday's 50-cent dividend declaration by Universal will be payable August 6 to stockholders of record on July 25. The last previous dividend payment on the common was made on Dec. 19, 1951 when a year-end dividend of 60 cents per share was paid.

The cumulative preferred stock dividend will be payable on September 1, to stockholders of record on August 15.

Complaints on Bidding Top Coast Probe

Amis Shifting Attention Now to Distributors

HOLLYWOOD, July 16. — Unfairness on the part of distributors in administering the bidding system is foremost among the charges voiced by independent exhibitors in their talks with William D. Amis, investigator for the Senate Small Business Committee, who today told MOTION PICTURE DAILY he intends shifting his attention now to distributors in a follow-through of the testimony gathered during the first week of his stay.

Amis, who came West in sequel to Southern California Theatre Owners Association's request to the Senate Small Business Committee, said the outstanding complaint made by some 35 independent exhibitors talked with individually is that exchangemen habitually play one bidder against another by cross-quoting bids in violation of fair trade principles.

SOUTH GOING IN HEAVILY FOR TWIN DRIVE-INS; STRONG PUBLIC SUPPORT

NEW ORLEANS, July 16.—The general tendency in the industry in this exchange area is centered on the erection of twin drive-ins. Reports from Alexandria, La. where the first in this territory was opened not so long ago by Joy N. Houck and associates of Joy Theatres, Inc., indicate that the enthusiastic reaction of theatregoers, their preference for this style and policy of film presentation, and the large crowds attracted thereto has whipped up perhaps the greatest resurgence hereabouts since the appeal for the need of reorientation in showmanship was first expounded.

Several theatre owners are devising plans for such projects, while others are scurrying around in search of suitable sites. Meanwhile, Houck and associates already have two others under construction, one near Bunkie, La., the other in Monroe. Thomas McElroy, of Broadmoor Theatres, Inc., Shreveport, also has one planned for Monroe, on which construction will soon get underway. Fred T. McLendon, head of a string of theatres throughout the South, M. A. (Max) Connet, pilot of a circuit of theatres in Mississippi, and Milton Guidry, associated with the former two in several single theatre projects have started the building of Twin Hub, one and a half miles out of Lafayette's limits on U.S. Highway 167. It will accommodate 1,000 cars.

A feature attraction that many drive-in owners are contemplating to add to their amusement areas, both single and twin, is a "little theatre for little people," equipped with kiddy chairs, 16mm. projection and screen where the youngsters can view a program of comics, cartoons and Westerns.

Warrants Due Today In Censor 'Test'

Cleveland, July 16.—Exhibition today by the Lower Mall Theatre here of the uncensored "American Newsreel," which highlights the Republican National Convention, left the exhibitor and Universal Newsreel, distributor of the print, subject to the fines imposed by the state of Ohio, the censoring governing body, in the test of the legality of the state censorship law. Originally, the Little Theatre in Columbus and Warner Pathe News were to be the subjects of the test.

Warrants returnable in municipal court against the exhibitor and the distributor are scheduled to be served tomorrow by a state field inspector who witnessed the exhibition, thus inaugurating what is expected to be a long, drawn-out legal test of Ohio's right to censor newsreels.

British Attendance Continues Decline

LONDON, July 16.—The downward trend of box-office attendance, reported by Sir Philip Warter, chairman of Associated Britsh Picture Corp. has been confirmed by the latest entertainment tax returns. For the fifth month in succession receipts from the entertainment duty from theatres show a decline.

According to the official Customs and Excise figures for May the total duty paid by theatres was £3,298,000. In January the figures were £3,502,000; February, £3,423,000; March, £3, 342,-000; April £3,336,000.

Sir Philip, whose ABC circuit comprises 450 theatres, in his annual report to stockholders said: "The attendance in the current year to date has been adversely affected by the exceptionally fine weather and other causes, and having regard to the continual rise in operating costs, mainly wages, the results in the first quarter of the current financial year do not compare favorably with the corresponding period of last year. It is, of course, too early to form any reliable estimate as to the probable outcome of the year's trading."

Little Concern Is Felt for Business From Democrats' Home Telecasts

Theatremen, heartened by the virtual failure of the home televised Republican National Convention to make a dent last week in box-office receipts, are viewing the possible competition of the upcoming Democratic National Convention on home television with little concern.

The twin factors of prohibitive prices and lack of exclusivity make the event undesirable for TV-equipped theatres. Like the Republican convention, the television pool would charge a theatre 50 cents per seat if it carried the Democratic convention, which opens Monday.

Theatre Network Television, which sought to televise both conventions at the request of a number of exhibitors, said that the television pool also sought payment for all cable charges from Chicago.

"Secret Flight"

(Rank-Snader)

DESPITE some pronounced merits, "Secret Flight" falls short of the mark necessary to reach and bemuse the art house audiences. Perhaps it is the photography and direction that is accountable; it all seems done in the ill-lit murk of war, at home or at the front. Perhaps it is the grubbiness rather than the grandeur of the efforts involved. Perhaps, in this instance, the tendency to underplay has spread to a whole film. Perhaps it is the language handicap.

On the merit side, there are sharp character sketches; rich bits of humor delivered as only the specially portrayed group of British can deliver them. And there is the advantage of the documentary treatment of wartime activity; there is action, and there is deadly suspense.

The story is of "the Boffins," Britain's scientists corralled by the government and set to work to solve problems of navigational aids, bombing, submarine hunting, night air fighting, radar, and the like. They are motley, and individual, true scientists, patriots, and brave men. They deliver startling ideas, they help win the war, and some of them die.

The humor is ever present. Sir Ralph Richardson, a top British character actor, is the leading performer. Abrupt, unworldly, but with insight and fortitude, he finally is given the most dangerous of all assignments—to land with commandos and bring back complete German radar equipment. Others in the peculiar group domiciled in a small provincial city have gone on bombing raids and submarine hunts. Richardson brings home the goods, and those who survive swap tales of tall doings. The military men who supervise them, and in fact all the performers are brilliant in characterization and are aided by Peter Ustinov's script.

To Ustinov goes the credit for direction. Two Cities Films produced for J. Arthur Rank.

Running time, 74 minutes. General audience classification. For July release.

Film Dividends

paid by Loew's in June of this year from 37½ cents paid in June, 1951, accounted for a good part of the drop.

The reporting companies paid out $3,755,000 in dividends in June, compared to $4,671,000 in the same month last year. During the first six months of this year, they declared $13,656,000 in dividends, compared to $15,063,000 in the same period during 1951.

Loew's Dividend $1,029,000

Loew's June dividend this year amounted to $1,029,000. During the same month of 1951, Loew's paid $1,929,000. Both Consolidated amusement and the Roxy Theatre paid the same dividends this year as last, but switched payment months from May to June. Consolidated paid $100,000 and Roxy paid out $6,000.

Others dropped slightly under 1951. Twentieth Century-Fox paid out $1,384,000 in June, this year, compared to $1,509,000 in the same month during 1951. United Artists dropped to $10,000 this June from $11,000 last year. Universal fell to $61,000 this June from $64,000 last year.

compared with a take of $750,000 when it was originally released in 1933.

In test engagements so far in 400 theatres, the picture has done "phenomenally," said Turner. By the end of August it will have played throughout the U. S. and Canada, he disclosed. An allocation of $250,000 for TV promotion has been set aside for the film, with an overall promotional budget of $400,000. The film will open in 150 theatres in New York and New Jersey during the first week of August.

Should the TV formula be as successful in promoting "Sudden Fear" as it has been with "King Kong," Turner said, it will prove that "if you have the right format and use it judiciously, TV can become an instrument of good fortune for the industry."

Complaints on Bidding Top Coast Probe

HOLLYWOOD, July 16. — Unfairness on the part of distributors in administering the bidding system is foremost among the charges voiced by independent exhibitors in their talks with William D. Amis, investigator for the Senate Small Business Committee, who today told MOTION PICTURE DAILY he intends shifting his attention now to distributors in a follow-through of the testimony gathered during the first week of his stay.

Amis, who came West in sequel to Southern California Theatre Owners Association's request to the Senate Small Business Committee, said the outstanding complaint made by some 35 independent exhibitors talked with individually is that exchangemen habitually play one bidder against another by cross-quoting bids in violation of fair trade principles.

SOUTH GOING IN HEAVILY FOR TWIN DRIVE-INS; STRONG PUBLIC SUPPORT

NEW ORLEANS, July 16.—The general tendency in the industry in this exchange area is centered on the erection of twin drive-ins. Reports from Alexandria, La. where the first in this territory was opened not so long ago by Joy N. Houck and associates of Joy Theatres, Inc., indicate that the enthusiastic reaction of theatregoers, their preference for this style and policy of film presentation, and the large crowds attracted thereto has whipped up perhaps the greatest resurgence hereabouts since the appeal for the need of reorientation in showmanship was first expounded.

Several theatre owners are devising plans for such projects, while others are scurrying around in search of suitable sites. Meanwhile, Houck and associates already have two others under construction, one near Bunkie, La., the other in Monroe. Thomas McElroy, of Broadmoor Theatres, Inc., Shreveport, also has one planned for Monroe, on which construction will soon get underway. Fred T. McLendon, head of a string of theatres throughout the South, M. A. (Max) Connet, pilot of a circuit of theatres in Mississippi, and Milton Guidry, associated with the former two in several single theatre projects have started the building of Twin Hub, one and a half miles out of Lafayette's limits on U.S. Highway 167. It will accommodate 1,000 cars.

A feature attraction that many drive-in owners are contemplating to add to their amusement areas, both single and twin, is a "little theatre for little people," equipped with kiddy chairs, 16mm. projection and screen where the youngsters can view a program of comics, cartoons and Westerns.

Warrants Due Today In Censor 'Test'

Cleveland, July 16.—Exhibition today by the Lower Mall Theatre here of the uncensored "American Newsreel," which highlights the Republican National Convention, left the exhibitor and Universal Newsreel, distributor of the print, subject to the fines imposed by the state of Ohio, the censoring governing body, in the test of the legality of the state censorship law. Originally, the Little Theatre in Columbus and Warner Pathe News were to be the subjects of the test.

Warrants returnable in municipal court against the exhibitor and the distributor are scheduled to be served tomorrow by a state field inspector who witnessed the exhibition, thus inaugurating what is expected to be a long, drawn-out legal test of Ohio's right to censor newsreels.

British Attendance Continues Decline

LONDON, July 16.—The downward trend of box-office attendance, reported by Sir Philip Warter, chairman of Associated Britsh Picture Corp. has been confirmed by the latest entertainment tax returns. For the fifth month in succession receipts from the entertainment duty from theatres show a decline.

According to the official Customs and Excise figures for May the total duty paid by theatres was £3,298,000. In January the figures were £3,502,000; February, £3,423,000; March, £3, 342,-000; April £3,336,000.

Sir Philip, whose ABC circuit comprises 450 theatres, in his annual report to stockholders said: "The attendance in the current year to date has been adversely affected by the exceptionally fine weather and other causes, and having regard to the continual rise in operating costs, mainly wages, the results in the first quarter of the current financial year do not compare favorably with the corresponding period of last year. It is, of course, too early to form any reliable estimate as to the probable outcome of the year's trading."

Little Concern Is Felt for Business From Democrats' Home Telecasts

Theatremen, heartened by the virtual failure of the home televised Republican National Convention to make a dent last week in box-office receipts, are viewing the possible competition of the upcoming Democratic National Convention on home television with little concern.

The twin factors of prohibitive prices and lack of exclusivity make the event undesirable for TV-equipped theatres. Like the Republican convention, the television pool would charge a theatre 50 cents per seat if it carried the Democratic convention, which opens Monday.

Theatre Network Television, which sought to televise both conventions at the request of a number of exhibitors, said that the television pool also sought payment for all cable charges from Chicago.

Review

"Secret Flight"

DESPITE some pronounced merits, "Secret Flight" falls short of the mark necessary to reach and bemuse the art house audiences. Perhaps it is the photography and direction that is accountable; it all seems done in the ill-lit murk of war, at home or at the front. Perhaps it is the grubbiness rather than the grandeur of the efforts involved. Perhaps, in this instance, the tendency to underplay has spread to a whole film. Perhaps it is the language handicap.

On the merit side, there are sharp character sketches; rich bits of humor delivered as only the specially portrayed group of British can deliver them. And there is the advantage of the documentary treatment of wartime activity; there is action, and there is deadly suspense.

The story is of "the Boffins," Britain's scientists corralled by the government and set to work to solve problems of navigational aids, bombing, submarine hunting, night air fighting, radar, and the like. They are motley, and individual, true scientists, patriots, and brave men. They deliver startling ideas, they help win the war, and some of them die.

The humor is ever present. Sir Ralph Richardson, a top British character actor, is the leading performer. Abrupt, unworldly, but with insight and fortitude, he finally is given the most dangerous of all assignments—to land with commandos and bring back complete German radar equipment. Others in the peculiar group domiciled in a small provincial city have gone on bombing raids and submarine hunts. Richardson brings home the goods, and those who survive swap tales of tall doings. The military men who supervise them, and in fact all the performers are brilliant in characterization and are aided by Peter Ustinov's script.

To Ustinov goes the credit for direction. Two Cities Films produced for J. Arthur Rank.

Running time, 74 minutes. General audience classification. For July release.

paid by Loew's in June of this year from 37½ cents paid in June, 1951, accounted for a good part of the drop.

The reporting companies paid out $3,755,000 in dividends in June, compared to $4,671,000 in the same month last year. During the first six months of this year, they declared $13,656,000 in dividends, compared to $15,063,000 in the same period during 1951.

Loew's Dividend $1,029,000

Loew's June dividend this year amounted to $1,029,000. During the same month of 1951, Loew's paid $1,929,000. Both Consolidated amusement and the Roxy Theatre paid the same dividends this year as last, but switched payment months from May to June. Consolidated paid $100,000 and Roxy paid out $6,000.

Others dropped slightly under 1951. Twentieth Century-Fox paid out $1,384,000 in June, this year, compared to $1,509,000 in the same month during 1951. United Artists dropped to $10,000 this June from $11,000 last year. Universal fell to $61,000 this June from $64,000 last year.

compared with a take of $750,000 when it was originally released in 1933.

In test engagements so far in 400 theatres, the picture has done "phenomenally," said Turner. By the end of August it will have played throughout the U. S. and Canada, he disclosed. An allocation of $250,000 for TV promotion has been set aside for the film, with an overall promotional budget of $400,000. The film will open in 150 theatres in New York and New Jersey during the first week of August.

Should the TV formula be as successful in promoting "Sudden Fear" as it has been with "King Kong," Turner said, it will prove that "if you have the right format and use it judiciously, TV can become an instrument of good fortune for the industry."

53 More Exhibitors Join Tax Fight on State Level

Raising the total to 99 acceptances, 53 additional exhibitors from 32 states sent telegrams yesterday advising Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations tax repeal campaign, that they will serve on state committees in the campaign organization. Exhibitors in all but seven states have accepted the bid to serve on state committees.

"Never have we seen such an enthusiastic response to a call for service," said Cole and McGee in a joint statement. "This wholehearted eagerness of exhibitors to take on the duties of committee members in their states shows how thoroughly they appreciate the importance of the campaign to remove the onerous burden of the Federal 20 per cent admission tax. It also reveals the confidence they have that our campaign will be successful, for obviously these men would not embark on this movement unless they were convinced it would succeed. week stay in New York on Saturday, has been conferring with Eastern branch managers on his plan to raise $2,500,000. Under the plan, 26 branches would be sold, giving the new owners, preferably their branch managers, a franchise for the servicing of 20 pictures per year for three years, in addition to distribution rights to two projected Lippert film productions.

Favorably Received

The plan, said Lippert, was favorably received by some Eastern branch managers, while others were cautious. Lippert plans to return here in four weeks to complete negotiations, he said. Two exchanges, Dallas and Memphis, have already been sold by Lippert.

Breaking down the estimated $2,500,000 to be raised Lippert explained that he expects to receive in excess of $500,000 on the sale of his exchanges, and for his planned two films, financing would be shared thus: $800,000 from a bank loan, $800,000 from franchise holders and exhibitors and $400,000 from deferments.

UPT Disposed

quence of the terminations of the joint interests, UPT received six theatres in which UPT is permitted to retain 100 per cent interest, leaving the company with a net disposition of 23 theatres during the quarter.

UPT Earned $3,669,000

cents per share of common stock and 12½ cents per share to holders of certificates of interest was sent to stockholders with the report. In the case of certificates of interest, the remaining 12½ cents per share, plus amounts previously withheld will be paid to holders upon conversion of their certificates of interest into common stock, the report stated.

Goldenson pointed out that the usual second quarter seasonal downturn in theatre business was somewhat more pronounced this year. The UPT president blamed the lack of quality in films released in May and June this year for the decline. He stated, however, that the feature pictures which will be released starting mid-July are of a high quality.

The consolidated earnings, excluding capital gains, of UPT represent 16 cents for the second quarter and 71 cents for the six months of 1952 per share on 3,300,838 shares outstanding on June 28, 1952, as compared with 35 cents and $1.04 per share, respectively, on 3,260,227 shares outstanding on June 30, 1951. The consolidated earnings including capital gains were equal to 44 cents for the second quarter of 1952 and $1.06 for the six months, compared to 61 cents and $1.41 for the same periods in 1951.

Theatre television programs, both as box-office and non-box-office attractions, continue to be presented by UPT and it is expected that a fairly active use of large-screen television during the off-hours in the company's theatres for commercial, educational and public service activities will commence in the fall, Goldenson stated. He explained that installation of theatre television is being pushed and by the end of the year national coverage by theatre television, following the long lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, should be available.

Detailing earnings, profits before Federal income tax and other income listed in the report were put at $964,000 for the second quarter of 1952, compared to $2,093,000 for the second quarter of 1951. UPT's direct and indirect share of undistributed earnings of partly owned non-consolidated subsidiaries, not included in consolidated earnings, were estimated at $22,000 for the second quarter of 1952, compared to $98,000 for the same period last year.

Regarding the planned merger of UPT and the American Broadcasting Co., Goldenson stated that if the anti-trust issue were deleted from the Federal Communications Commission hearings, a final decision would be expedited.

"Untamed Frontier"

(Universal-International)

WITH Joseph Cotten and Shelley Winters heading the cast of this large-scale Western drama in color by Technicolor, its solid appeal at the box-office appears to be assured. A Leonard Goldstein production, the plot has been fashioned of conventional and popular ingredients. It concerns the attempts of a patriarch of a huge Texas cattle empire to resist the efforts of homesteaders to use his land as a right-of-way to reach acres of free government land.

The picture has action, gunplay, hard-riding and romance. Scott Brady, as the wayward arrogant son of the ranch owner, Minor Watson, is just a little too itchy with his trigger finger one day and he kills a man. The witness to the shooting is Miss Winters, and so in order to prevent her from testifying aaginst him, he marries her after a swift, ardent, but insincere courtship. Naturally Miss Winters discovers Brady's true metal and the marriage begins to disintegrate.

A large part of the picture centers around the efforts of Cotten to "make a man" of his dissolute nephew, Brady, with resultant friction. In time Cotten begins to realize that Miss Winters, whom at first he thought was a schemer, has some real moral worth, and he grows fond of her.

The screenplay, by Gerald Drayson Adams and John and Gwen Bagni, keeps the acting brewing on the homesteaders' front as well as the romantic front. Brady finally is forced into a deal with outlaws to rustle his own cattle and he is killed in the process.

In a showdown scene, Cotten finally permits the homesteaders to pass unmolested. As a result he also wins the approval and love of Miss Winters in a happily resolved ending. Hugo Fregonese directed.

Running time, 75 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

THAT WONDERFUL SERIES on Grand Opera which last year was telecast "live" in full hour segments via WPIX will be filmed in Eastman color on 35mm. by R. M. Savini's Opera Cameos. The first two of the series of 13, featuring stars of the Metropolitan Opera Co., namely "Cavaliere Rusticana," with Mario Del Monica, Rita Telli and Torge, and "La Traviata," with Lucia Evangelesti, Frank Valentino, Julio Gari and Carlo Tommanelli, have just been completed at 20th-Fox Movietone Studios under the direction of Carlo Vinta. The series will be released through Atlantic Television Corporation. . . .

We hear it isn't the Stein Song but rather the blues that they're singing these days over at MCA where the pressure is heavy because several important MCA artists have demanded some "real fast action in radio and TV bookings—"or else." . . . Inside New York—50 years ago . . .

Re-creating a corner of old New York for the theater is a stage designer's problem.

But re-creating it so that the color camera will see it and the sound camera hear it as the eye saw it and the ear heard it 50 years ago is quite another story.

It is in reducing problems of this character that the Eastman Technical Service is of great service. Their representatives collaborate with studio technicians; they scrutinize the scenery, establish light and color balances; they help select type of film, color or black-and-white, best to use. Special laboratory procedures, too, may be worked out to ensure precise processing—all to make sure that every foot of film produces best results.

To maintain this service, the Eastman Kodak Company has branches at strategic centers . . . invites inquiry on all phases of film use from all members of the industry. Address:

Legal Battle Against Ohio Censors Begins

Smith's Arrest Initiates Industry's Test of Law

TOLEDO, July 20. — Martin G. Smith, past president of both Allied States Association and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, was arrested here Friday for exhibiting at his Westwood Theatre a newsreel that had not been submitted for the approval of the Ohio State Censorship Division. The film was seized and Smith was ordered to appear Saturday in municipal court to answer charges.

Smith deliberately exposed himself to arrest as his contribution to the industry's campaign to have declared unconstitutional the Ohio film censorship laws. Thus he and 20th Century-Fox, distributor of the uncensored newsreel, become defendants in a "test case" founded on the U. S. Supreme Court decisions favoring the in-

Very High Rentals Hit Community Dollar, NCA's Berger Charges

Minneapolis, July 20.—Ben Berger, North Central Allied president, charged here that when a film company walks off with 70 per cent of the gross receipts in film rentals "it dries up the community entertainment dollar for a month to come."

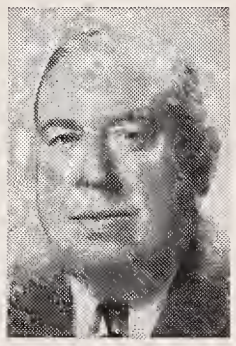
Berger added a new phase to the argument against advanced admission price pictures, declaring that such runs served also to reduce the candy counter and refreshment bar receipts "for when a patron is required to spend more to see the show he has less to spend on popcorn, candy and drinks." Adding that the profits made at the refreshment stand is an important part of a theatre's operation, the NCA head said "the refreshment stand has become more than an additional source of revenue for the exhibitor; frequently it is the only phase of his operation that shows a profit."

Loew's Reports a 40-Week Profit of $4,478,133

Loew's net profit for the 40 weeks ended June 5 was $4,478,133, compared with $5,567,619 for the corresponding period last year, Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president and treasurer, disclosed here at the weekend. The latest figure is equal to 87 cents per share of common stock, whereas the earlier one was the equivalent of $1.08 per share.

Moskowitz reported also a profit of $740,817 for the 12 weeks ended June 5, against $1,341,754 for the corresponding period of the previous year. These figures, respectively, were equal to 14 cents and 26 cents per share of stock.

The financial statement gave effect to revision of the company's film amortization table, effective March 13, 1952, as to pictures released after that date, Moskowitz indicated.



He explained that the revision is based upon the company's most recent film income experience. The revised table allocates 66⅔ per cent of the cost to domestic and 33⅓ per cent to foreign instead of 75 and 25 per cent respectively, as heretofore.

Total cost of each picture is written off as follows: at the end of 12 weeks, 44.1 per cent instead of 44.8 as formerly; 24 weeks, 67.7, instead of

TEXAS COMPO SEES GOV'T AIDED BY REPEAL OF US ADMISSION TAX

DALLAS, July 20.—If the 20 per cent Federal admission tax is removed, the government would receive 50 per cent of it back in personal income, excess profits and corporate taxes, whereas if the tax is allowed to stay, in effect there will be much less revenue with hundreds of theatres closing as a direct result of the admission levy, the Council of Motion Picture Organizations Texas Showmen has pointed out in anti-tax literature sent to members.

This argument is one of a dozen or more which the Texas COMPO unit has marshalled as ammunition for its part in the campaign spearheaded by the national COMPO office and the COMPO tax repeal committee headed by Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee.

"It is our opinion that the program will bring results in our efforts to convince Texas Congressmen of the necessity of removing this confiscatory tax," it was stated by a committee of Texas exhibitor leaders including

Brandt Sends Plea to Lehman and Celler

Brandt's plea in the form of a telegram was sent to Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Congressman Emanuel Celler, New York members of the platform committee of the Democratic National Convention, which will open today in Chicago.

Declared Brandt: "Many of the Federal excise taxes are presently stifling American industry and have reached the point where the adverse effect of these levies is threatening the nation's economy. In many cases

Anti-Tax Plea

the presence of these discriminatory excise taxes in an industry represents the difference between a prosperous industry and one that is destroying small businessmen under the oppressive yoke of such taxation."

Excise taxes in many instances today, Brandt stated, "act as an industry subsidy to government at a time when the affected industries are fighting for survival."

In this Presidential election year, Brandt pointed out, "removal of many of these excise taxes would be extremely popular with the people since they hit the pocketbooks of more Americans than the income tax.

"We are confident that labor will join with industry in recommending this proposal. At the same time, elimination of these excise taxes will create a healthy spur to the affected industries and provide greater employment for more people at better wages and result in higher income and corporate tax returns which will more than offset the revenue losses involved," Brandt stated.

plications," the brief contended. Curtis B. Plummer, chief, and Joseph M. Kittner, assistant chief of the broadcast bureau, presented the brief, along with hearing division chief Frederick W. Ford and counsel Max Paglin.

ABC, UPT, CBS and Paramount asked not only that the anti-trust issue be deleted and that hearing examiner Leo Resnick's initial decision be dispensed with, but also that parties file proposed findings of fact within 20 days of law directly with the commission for its final decision, and that the Commission enter any orders necessary to sever parties as a result of deleting the anti-trust issues.

The broadcast bureau contended that Paramount's petition, separate from the one presented jointly by ABC, UPT and CBS, restated and paraphrased "the issues specified by the Commission with respect to them, and request that the Commission adopt such restatement." This, the bureau also opposed strongly.

The brief called the request for elimination of anti-trust issues an effort to modify basic Commission policy, and denied that granting of radio licenses to Westinghouse without hearings despite a history of anti-trust violations was a precedent. There was no similiarity between the cases, the brief argued, because Westinghouse was a pioneer in radio. The public interest demanded the licensing, and in any event Commission policy is to consider past anti-trust violations on a case-by-case basis.

The broadcast bureau similarly denied that other cases cited by the petitions had any bearing on the present case. The court decision in the Oregon Medical Society, the brief held, was to the effect that an injunction could not be issued against practices which have already ceased. Not, as Paramount contended, that "ancient history" is inadmissable as evidence.

When setting up the issues for the present case, the brief continued, the Commission heard all the arguments against inclusion of the anti-trust phase, rejected them, and should not now overrule itself.

dustry in the "Pinky" and "Miracle" actions.

Twentieth-Fox too was aware of the consequences that threatened, but, like Smith, made itself vulnerable so that there could be created a case through which the industry could press its attack on the Ohio statute.

Smith was not required to post bond on Friday, the court having taken his word that he would appear Saturday as ordered. Paxton & Seasongood, Cincinnati law firm representing the Motion Picture Association of America, has retained Donald Melhorn of the Toledo legal firm of Marshall, Melhorn, Block & Belt to defend Smith.

The warrant for Smith's arrest read as follows:

"One Martin G. Smith, owner of the Westwood Theatre, 1602 Sylvania St., Toledo, did purposely exhibit a certain motion picture—to wit, a newsreel titled 'The American Newsreel' and including precede stating in effect that the newsreel had not been submitted to the Department of Education for censorship as required by Ohio statutes—without same having been submitted to the Department of Education for passage and approval and without having been passed and approved by the Department of Education, contrary to the statutes of Ohio made and provided therein."

One of the other arguments used here is that that part of the tax money theatremen will retain is needed to make improvements in order to improve service to the public. "Estimate how much you should spend on such items as new carpets, curtains, sound and projection equipment, seats, rest room equipment, air conditioning, etc., to make your theatre more comfortable and inviting for your people," recipients of the campaign plans are advised.

New fabrics made of Fiberglas reinforcing cloth and adaptable for stage curtains and drapes have been announced by Duracote Corp., Ravenna, Ohio. The Fiberglas cloth is coated by a special process with a synthetic plastic resin. This makes the fabric fire-resistant, according to the manufacturer, and prevents cracking or breaking. Called "Dura-Decor," the fabric comes in nine colors that are opaque for room darkening without the need of lining cloth.

Injunction Against 'Treason' Is Denied

Justice Thomas L. J. Corcoran of the New York State Supreme Court has rejected the claim of one Albert E. Kahn, the author of a political book entitled "High Treason: The Plot Against the People," that he has exclusive rights to the phrase "High Treason" as the title of any literary work, including motion pictures. Kahn sought a temporary injunction restraining Pacemaker Pictures, Inc., J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc., and Arthur Mayer-Edward Kingsley, Inc., from using the title "High Treason" in connection with the fictional spy thriller directed by Roy Boulting now showing at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux Theatre here, and scheduled to be released thoughout the United States.

Justice Corcoran stressed that the title of the plaintiff's book and the defendant's film "are not the same," and the respective contents are "entirely different." He further ruled: "Even if the title of the plaintiff's book were 'High Treason,' which it is not, he would have great difficulty in showing any exclusive right to the use of those two words. 'High Treason' has been used as the title of five moving pictures, one play, and at least five books in recent years. The word 'Treason' has been used alone as the title of six moving pictures. It has been used with other words, as in the case of the plaintiff's book, as the title of 30 other moving pictures, short stories, or books. The motion is denied."

The defendants were represented by Louis Nizer and Seymour Shainswit of the firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin & Krim.

70.7; 36 weeks, 77.5, instead of 85.1; 52 weeks, 87.7, instead of 95 per cent, and 78 weeks, 100 per cent, the same as formerly.

It was pointed out that if the amortization table had continued unchanged, the company's net profit after taxes for both the 12-week and 40-week period ended June 5 would have been $117,082 less.

The statement contains these comparative figures for the 40-week periods ended June 5, 1952, and June 7, 1951, respectively: Estimated gross sales and operating revenues, $135,646,000 and $132,883,000; operating profit, including wholly and partly owned subsidiaries, $10,016,233 and $11,608,043; net operating profit before taxes, $5,302,538 and $6,829,984; reserved for taxes, $1,288,236 and $2,503,794; adjustments for prior years' depreciation and Federal taxes, $605,442 and $1,537,814.

These are the comparative figures for the 12-week periods ended June 5, 1952, and June 7, 1951, respectively: Estimated gross sales and operating revenues, $39,953,000 and $38,933,000; operating profit including wholly and partly owned subsidiaries, $1,868,839 and $3,028,507; net operating profit before taxes, $425,878 and $1,480,292; reserved for Federal taxes, $240,487 and $387,294; adjustments for prior years' depreciation and Federal taxes, $90,166 and $290,781.

Pay to Directors For Film Telecasts

HOLLYWOOD, July 20.—Screen directors over the weekend became the second talent group to obtain an agreement from television film producers for an additional payment for their services when subsequent runs of their films reach a stipulated point. This type of extra compensation, long and unsuccessfully sought in the theatrical film field with a view to gaining participation in reissue revenues, was obtained from television film producers by the SAG several weeks ago.

Meanwhile, the Screen Directors Guild announced an agreement with the Alliance of Television Film Producers on terms of a contract which will provide for the director of a television film to receive a flat $275, in addition to his original salary, when and if a film he has made is run for the fourth time, this payment to cover all subsequent runs as well. An SAG pact, previously reported, differs in terms and amounts but is the same in principle.

The SDG-ATFP contract, which runs to April 4, 1958, sets $550 per week as a minimum for free-lance directors, $325 for first assistants, and $185 for second assistants. With minor details still to be worked out, the contract becomes effective on ratification by the SDG, which is considered a formality.

In announcing the agreement with Thomas, Henry Souvaine, president of Souvaine, said: "Naturally, Mr. Thomas and I have complete confidence in the ability of the motion picture industry to adjust itself successfully to the vastly changing conditions of today and tomorrow. The superior motion picture still remains a most powerful magnet for all the millions in this country—lowbrows, mediumbrows, and highbrows—who periodically must escape from the confines of their living rooms.

Souvaine will distribute at least 16 theatrical features during its new season, against 10 last year, in addition to approximately 50 non-competitive features for the television market under the trade name Cinema TV Features.

In addition to its American representation of the French governmental film combine, L'Union Generale Cinematographique, Souvaine distributes the bulk of releases of British producers Romulus, Independent Film Distributors and Sydney Box Productions.

Souvaine is also negotiating with Joseph Burstyn for the co-release with Burstyn of two of his latest features, "The Girl of the Marshes" and "St. Francis."

Thomas succeeds Charles Amory who last week became West Coast vice-president of Pathe Laboratories.

Legal Battle Against Ohio Censors Begins

Smith's Arrest Initiates Industry's Test of Law

TOLEDO, July 20. — Martin G. Smith, past president of both Allied States Association and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, was arrested here Friday for exhibiting at his Westwood Theatre a newsreel that had not been submitted for the approval of the Ohio State Censorship Division. The film was seized and Smith was ordered to appear Saturday in municipal court to answer charges.

Smith deliberately exposed himself to arrest as his contribution to the industry's campaign to have declared unconstitutional the Ohio film censorship laws. Thus he and 20th Century-Fox, distributor of the uncensored newsreel, become defendants in a "test case" founded on the U. S. Supreme Court decisions favoring the in-

Very High Rentals Hit Community Dollar, NCA's Berger Charges

Minneapolis, July 20.—Ben Berger, North Central Allied president, charged here that when a film company walks off with 70 per cent of the gross receipts in film rentals "it dries up the community entertainment dollar for a month to come."

Berger added a new phase to the argument against advanced admission price pictures, declaring that such runs served also to reduce the candy counter and refreshment bar receipts "for when a patron is required to spend more to see the show he has less to spend on popcorn, candy and drinks." Adding that the profits made at the refreshment stand is an important part of a theatre's operation, the NCA head said "the refreshment stand has become more than an additional source of revenue for the exhibitor; frequently it is the only phase of his operation that shows a profit."

Loew's Reports a 40-Week Profit of $4,478,133

Loew's net profit for the 40 weeks ended June 5 was $4,478,133, compared with $5,567,619 for the corresponding period last year, Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president and treasurer, disclosed here at the weekend. The latest figure is equal to 87 cents per share of common stock, whereas the earlier one was the equivalent of $1.08 per share.

Moskowitz reported also a profit of $740,817 for the 12 weeks ended June 5, against $1,341,754 for the corresponding period of the previous year. These figures, respectively, were equal to 14 cents and 26 cents per share of stock.

The financial statement gave effect to revision of the company's film amortization table, effective March 13, 1952, as to pictures released after that date, Moskowitz indicated.

He explained that the revision is based upon the company's most recent film income experience. The revised table allocates 66⅔ per cent of the cost to domestic and 33⅓ per cent to foreign instead of 75 and 25 per cent respectively, as heretofore.

Total cost of each picture is written off as follows: at the end of 12 weeks, 44.1 per cent instead of 44.8 as formerly; 24 weeks, 67.7, instead of

TEXAS COMPO SEES GOV'T AIDED BY REPEAL OF US ADMISSION TAX

DALLAS, July 20.—If the 20 per cent Federal admission tax is removed, the government would receive 50 per cent of it back in personal income, excess profits and corporate taxes, whereas if the tax is allowed to stay, in effect there will be much less revenue with hundreds of theatres closing as a direct result of the admission levy, the Council of Motion Picture Organizations Texas Showmen has pointed out in anti-tax literature sent to members.

This argument is one of a dozen or more which the Texas COMPO unit has marshalled as ammunition for its part in the campaign spearheaded by the national COMPO office and the COMPO tax repeal committee headed by Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee.

"It is our opinion that the program will bring results in our efforts to convince Texas Congressmen of the necessity of removing this confiscatory tax," it was stated by a committee of Texas exhibitor leaders including

Brandt Sends Plea to Lehman and Celler

Brandt's plea in the form of a telegram was sent to Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Congressman Emanuel Celler, New York members of the platform committee of the Democratic National Convention, which will open today in Chicago.

Declared Brandt: "Many of the Federal excise taxes are presently stifling American industry and have reached the point where the adverse effect of these levies is threatening the nation's economy. In many cases the presence of these discriminatory excise taxes in an industry represents the difference between a prosperous industry and one that is destroying small businessmen under the oppressive yoke of such taxation."

Excise taxes in many instances today, Brandt stated, "act as an industry subsidy to government at a time when the affected industries are fighting for survival."

In this Presidential election year, Brandt pointed out, "removal of many of these excise taxes would be extremely popular with the people since they hit the pocketbooks of more Americans than the income tax.

"We are confident that labor will join with industry in recommending this proposal. At the same time, elimination of these excise taxes will create a healthy spur to the affected industries and provide greater employment for more people at better wages and result in higher income and corporate tax returns which will more than offset the revenue losses involved," Brandt stated.

plications," the brief contended. Curtis B. Plummer, chief, and Joseph M. Kittner, assistant chief of the broadcast bureau, presented the brief, along with hearing division chief Frederick W. Ford and counsel Max Paglin.

ABC, UPT, CBS and Paramount asked not only that the anti-trust issue be deleted and that hearing examiner Leo Resnick's initial decision be dispensed with, but also that parties file proposed findings of fact within 20 days of law directly with the commission for its final decision, and that the Commission enter any orders necessary to sever parties as a result of deleting the anti-trust issues.

The broadcast bureau contended that Paramount's petition, separate from the one presented jointly by ABC, UPT and CBS, restated and paraphrased "the issues specified by the Commission with respect to them, and request that the Commission adopt such restatement." This, the bureau also opposed strongly.

The brief called the request for elimination of anti-trust issues an effort to modify basic Commission policy, and denied that granting of radio licenses to Westinghouse without hearings despite a history of anti-trust violations was a precedent. There was no similiarity between the cases, the brief argued, because Westinghouse was a pioneer in radio. The public interest demanded the licensing, and in any event Commission policy is to consider past anti-trust violations on a case-by-case basis.

The broadcast bureau similarly denied that other cases cited by the petitions had any bearing on the present case. The court decision in the Oregon Medical Society, the brief held, was to the effect that an injunction could not be issued against practices which have already ceased. Not, as Paramount contended, that "ancient history" is inadmissable as evidence.

When setting up the issues for the present case, the brief continued, the Commission heard all the arguments against inclusion of the anti-trust phase, rejected them, and should not now overrule itself.

Rogers at Youth Rally

HOLLYWOOD, July 20.—En route East for their September 24-October 19 appearance at the Madison Square Garden Rodeo in New York: Roy Rogers and Dale Evans will swing down to Memphis to participate in a youth rally there September 16. The rally is part of the city's drive to construct interdenominational recreational facilities for its young people, with the project to be named after Rogers.

dustry in the "Pinky" and "Miracle" actions.

Twentieth-Fox too was aware of the consequences that threatened, but, like Smith, made itself vulnerable so that there could be created a case through which the industry could press its attack on the Ohio statute.

Smith was not required to post bond on Friday, the court having taken his word that he would appear Saturday as ordered. Paxton & Seasongood, Cincinnati law firm representing the Motion Picture Association of America, has retained Donald Melhorn of the Toledo legal firm of Marshall, Melhorn, Block & Belt to defend Smith.

The warrant for Smith's arrest read as follows:

"One Martin G. Smith, owner of the Westwood Theatre, 1602 Sylvania St., Toledo, did purposely exhibit a certain motion picture—to wit, a newsreel titled 'The American Newsreel' and including precede stating in effect that the newsreel had not been submitted to the Department of Education for censorship as required by Ohio statutes—without same having been submitted to the Department of Education for passage and approval and without having been passed and approved by the Department of Education, contrary to the statutes of Ohio made and provided therein."

One of the other arguments used here is that that part of the tax money theatremen will retain is needed to make improvements in order to improve service to the public. "Estimate how much you should spend on such items as new carpets, curtains, sound and projection equipment, seats, rest room equipment, air conditioning, etc., to make your theatre more comfortable and inviting for your people," recipients of the campaign plans are advised.

New fabrics made of Fiberglas reinforcing cloth and adaptable for stage curtains and drapes have been announced by Duracote Corp., Ravenna, Ohio. The Fiberglas cloth is coated by a special process with a synthetic plastic resin. This makes the fabric fire-resistant, according to the manufacturer, and prevents cracking or breaking. Called "Dura-Decor," the fabric comes in nine colors that are opaque for room darkening without the need of lining cloth.

Injunction Against 'Treason' Is Denied

Justice Thomas L. J. Corcoran of the New York State Supreme Court has rejected the claim of one Albert E. Kahn, the author of a political book entitled "High Treason: The Plot Against the People," that he has exclusive rights to the phrase "High Treason" as the title of any literary work, including motion pictures. Kahn sought a temporary injunction restraining Pacemaker Pictures, Inc., J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc., and Arthur Mayer-Edward Kingsley, Inc., from using the title "High Treason" in connection with the fictional spy thriller directed by Roy Boulting now showing at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux Theatre here, and scheduled to be released thoughout the United States.

Justice Corcoran stressed that the title of the plaintiff's book and the defendant's film "are not the same," and the respective contents are "entirely different." He further ruled: "Even if the title of the plaintiff's book were 'High Treason,' which it is not, he would have great difficulty in showing any exclusive right to the use of those two words. 'High Treason' has been used as the title of five moving pictures, one play, and at least five books in recent years. The word 'Treason' has been used alone as the title of six moving pictures. It has been used with other words, as in the case of the plaintiff's book, as the title of 30 other moving pictures, short stories, or books. The motion is denied."

The defendants were represented by Louis Nizer and Seymour Shainswit of the firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin & Krim.

It was pointed out that if the amortization table had continued unchanged, the company's net profit after taxes for both the 12-week and 40-week period ended June 5 would have been $117,082 less.

The statement contains these comparative figures for the 40-week periods ended June 5, 1952, and June 7, 1951, respectively: Estimated gross sales and operating revenues, $135,646,000 and $132,883,000; operating profit, including wholly and partly owned subsidiaries, $10,016,233 and $11,608,043; net operating profit before taxes, $5,302,538 and $6,829,984; reserved for taxes, $1,288,236 and $2,503,794; adjustments for prior years' depreciation and Federal taxes, $605,442 and $1,537,814.

These are the comparative figures for the 12-week periods ended June 5, 1952, and June 7, 1951, respectively: Estimated gross sales and operating revenues, $39,953,000 and $38,933,000; operating profit including wholly and partly owned subsidiaries, $1,868,839 and $3,028,507; net operating profit before taxes, $425,878 and $1,480,292; reserved for Federal taxes, $240,487 and $387,294; adjustments for prior years' depreciation and Federal taxes, $90,166 and $290,781.

Pay to Directors For Film Telecasts

HOLLYWOOD, July 20.—Screen directors over the weekend became the second talent group to obtain an agreement from television film producers for an additional payment for their services when subsequent runs of their films reach a stipulated point. This type of extra compensation, long and unsuccessfully sought in the theatrical film field with a view to gaining participation in reissue revenues, was obtained from television film producers by the SAG several weeks ago.

Meanwhile, the Screen Directors Guild announced an agreement with the Alliance of Television Film Producers on terms of a contract which will provide for the director of a television film to receive a flat $275, in addition to his original salary, when and if a film he has made is run for the fourth time, this payment to cover all subsequent runs as well. An SAG pact, previously reported, differs in terms and amounts but is the same in principle.

The SDG-ATFP contract, which runs to April 4, 1958, sets $550 per week as a minimum for free-lance directors, $325 for first assistants, and $185 for second assistants. With minor details still to be worked out, the contract becomes effective on ratification by the SDG, which is considered a formality.

In announcing the agreement with Thomas, Henry Souvaine, president of Souvaine, said: "Naturally, Mr. Thomas and I have complete confidence in the ability of the motion picture industry to adjust itself successfully to the vastly changing conditions of today and tomorrow. The superior motion picture still remains a most powerful magnet for all the millions in this country—lowbrows, mediumbrows, and highbrows—who periodically must escape from the confines of their living rooms.

Souvaine will distribute at least 16 theatrical features during its new season, against 10 last year, in addition to approximately 50 non-competitive features for the television market under the trade name Cinema TV Features.

In addition to its American representation of the French governmental film combine, L'Union Generale Cinematographique, Souvaine distributes the bulk of releases of British producers Romulus, Independent Film Distributors and Sydney Box Productions.

Souvaine is also negotiating with Joseph Burstyn for the co-release with Burstyn of two of his latest features, "The Girl of the Marshes" and "St. Francis."

Thomas succeeds Charles Amory who last week became West Coast vice-president of Pathe Laboratories.

Ohio Censor Case Hearing Set for Aug. 8

Judge Begins Reading Supreme Court Decisions

TOLEDO, O., July 21.—Municipal Court Judge Frank W. Wiley has set August 8 for hearing charges and the defense in the violation by Martin G. Smith of the Ohio State censorship laws last week when his Westwood Theatre here exhibited Fox Movietone Newsreel's issue of "The American Newsreel" without its having been submitted to the State Censorship Division for a seal of approval.

The Motion Picture Association of America and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio arranged for the violation of the law to test the legality of prior censorship. The U. S. Supreme Court decisions favoring the industry in the "Pinky" and "Miracle" cases inspired the Ohio test.

A 30-day continuance of the Smith case had been sought, but Judge Wiley, who already has started reading the "Pinky" and "Miracle" deci-

Nashville Box-office Receipts Increase

Nashville, July 21.—All uptown theatres are having better patronage than prevailed during May and June. Local drive-ins are doing about the same business as this time last year. Product used is about as varied as for uptown houses. "Patrons are looking for a good show regardless of the type of picture," insisted one manager.

Most managers estimate income from refreshments at about 25 per cent of their total.

Sturdy Bows Send Gross Figures at NY 1st-runs High

A number of sturdy openings highlighted Broadway grosses this week, while strong hold-over product at many first-run situations continued to draw the customers.

Opinion was divided on the box-office effect of the present heat wave. However, most showmen were in agreement that the Democratic National Convention, which opened yesterday in Chicago, would not hurt the box-office. This sentiment, however, was expressed with the provision that the Democratic National Convention is not expected to offer a greater drama than the recent home televised Republican convention.

UPT Notes Upward Business Trend

A seasonal upturn at the box-office currently is being experienced by United Paramount Theatres, Robert H. O'Brien, UPT secretary-treasurer, disclosed here yesterday.

Business since July 1, O'Brien stated, has been better and compares favorably with last year. The UPT executive declined to make a prediction on the affects of the current home televised Democratic National Convention on the box-office. However, he was of the opinion that, to some degree, the televising of the Republican convention aided theatre attendance.

Sees Two-a-Week Off-Hour Theatre TV Programming

Theatre television executives of United Paramount Theatres are working toward a "non-entertainment," off-hour programming schedule of two performances a week, Robert H. O'Brien, UPT secretary-treasurer, disclosed here yesterday.

O'Brien, who expressed hope that one or two off-hour commercial closed circuit deals could be consummated for September, said attempts are currently underway to key programming towards "regularity." He saw the possibility that negotiations with commercial users would be tremendously accelerated following a "successful first" performance in this field.

Asked if the commercial field was wide enough to offer TV-equipped theatres sufficient users for regular twice-a-week programming, O'Brien answered in the affirmative. He pointed out the "vast" possible market in trade associations, government and business.

The UPT executive said that negotiations are now underway with eight leading national concerns who have expressed a desire to be first, if possible, in using the medium.

Lightman recently assumed full control of Malco, buying out the 33 per cent interest of M. S. McCord and M. J. Prunisky. It was also announced that Jack W. Tunstill, former manager of the Malco-owned Crosstown Theatre in Memphis, has retired from the industry.

HARTFORD, July 21. — Harry F. Shaw, division manager of Loew's Poli New England Theatres, has set plans for a Loew's Poli "Film Festival" at circuit houses in Connecticut and Massachusetts featuring top quality films.

Films slated for extensive promotion include "Lovely to Look At," "We're Not Married," "Robin Hood," "The Merry Widow" and "The World in His Arms."

Heller Earnings Are Up Substantially

CHICAGO, July 21.—Walter E. Heller and Co. reports consolidated net earnings of $714,768, or $1.36 per common share, for the six months ended June 30, up substantially from the $660,666, or $1.23 per share for the first half of 1951.

No 'Quake Harm to Films

HOLLYWOOD, July 21. — Second greatest earthquake in California history shook up the production branch thoroughly but caused neither injury nor more than trifling damage to studios or theatres.

UK's Views on Eady Plan Due July 29

LONDON, July 21. — The government's views on the Eady plan are expected to be made known on July 29.

Peter Thorneycroft, president of the Board of Trade, will then be questioned by Conservative member of Parliament, William Shepherd on what steps he proposes to take to secure an extension of the plan, in view of the vital need for long term program planning to secure continuity of U. K. productions. This will probably be the last opportunity for any government statement on film affairs before Parliament adjourns for a summer recess which is expected to last until October.

As previously reported, the feeling grows here that the Eady Plan or some refinement of it will become permanent in the pattern of the industry's set-up. Leading producers have recently warned of the necessity for the continuance of the plan and last week Associated British Pictures' chairman, Sir Philip Wartner, also head of Britain's largest circuit, advocated that it be put on a permanent and statutory basis.

Although it has been inferred that Cinematograph Exhibitors Association leaders have already agreed to an extension, rank-and-file exhibitors are by no means convinced that this subsidy is really necessary. The CEA General Council will meet again on September 10 and the Eady Plan will again figure prominently on the agenda.

Feature in 'Parade' On 20th-Fox Films

The July 27 issue of "Parade" has a cover featuring Anne Baxter, Anne Francis and Jean Peters along with an inside feature story telling how 20th Century-Fox has invested $16,000,000 on 10 1952 films in which they are starred or co-starred.

Pictures listed include "Viva Zapata," "Wait 'Till the Sun Shines, Nellie," "The Outcasts of Poker Flat," "My Wife's Best Friend," "Lydia Bailey," and others.

Home Offices Hold Meetings for JDA

The home office of Universal-International will hold a meeting of employes today to mobilize support in behalf of the current motion picture industry drive for the Joint Defense Appeal, it was announced by Harry M. Kalmine, chairman of the home office division for the JDA drive.

Kalmine said that United Artists will hold a JDA meeting on Friday.

Owners Push Quota Fight

LONDON, July 21. — The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association is preparing documentary evidence to prove the impossibility of meeting the 25 per cent supporting quota, following recent attacks on exhibitors in Parliament and the decision of the Films Council that there should be no relief from that quota.

The CEA will distribute the document to government ministers, members of Parliament and the press this week. It points out that to meet a 25 per cent supporting quota, the three major circuits alone need 39 second features every year. This number is not produced.

One suggestion, says the CEA, would be the re-introduction of a renters' quota. Otherwise, relief from the supporting program quota on similar lines to that granted for first feature quota would lessen defaults.

The document continues:

"Whenever exhibitors suggest that fewer and better films be produced, the reply comes that producers cannot avoid making poor films. Comparison with American films does not arise because there is no compulsion to show a poor American film. An exhibitor does not book it. It is useless booking films the public is not prepared to pay to see."

It is pointed out that no British films of any length between 3,000 feet and 7,000 feet were offered by five major American distributors, Paramount, Warner, RKO Pictures, Columbia and M-G-M, during the period from October, 1950 to April, 1952.

Hofheimer Stung by Failure of Censorship Test in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., July 21.—L. J. Hofheimer of the Little here stated he wants "to be counted out when you need any more scapegoats" in a letter addressed to Sidney Schreiber of the Motion Picture Association of America. The letter followed the failure to show the uncensored newsreel as scheduled in the test of the Ohio censorship law. The newsreel, distributed here by Warner Brothers, was not shown because of a dispute between Dr. Clyde Hissong, state director of education and chief Ohio film censor, and legal representatives of Warner Brothers.

Hofheimer said he "was placed in a most embarrassing position" with press and public because of the failure to show the film. "I lent my name and my theatre," he said, "in good faith for the purpose of testing the Ohio censorship law. In doing so, I thought that both were in competent hands, legally and otherwise. Through no fault of mine, I have broken faith with the public and the press and have been placed in a most embarrassing position. I had a contract with Warner Brothers which you requested and which for some unfathomable reason was breached. In the future when you need any more scapegoats, count me out."

Columbus Paper Defends Ohio's "Mild Variety" of Film Censorship

COLUMBUS, O., July 21.—Ohio's "mild variety" of state film censorship might be preferable to no censorship in which the film industry "might be obliged to deal with pressure groups of all shades of opinion seeking to impose restrictions of varying severity," the Columbus Dispatch has declared editorially.

Said the Dispatch: "It seems not impossible that the elimination of all censorship—the movie industry's apparent goal—might bring excesses that would eventually result in the clamping on of bans more irksome than any yet imposed, and at the Federal level.

"No one can blame the film people for seeking a re-definition of the legal status of government censorship. In some states this has been capricious and inconsistent. In some states it is rigid, in others completely non-existent. A test of the legality of censoring newsreels, most of which are kept pretty innocuous to avoid conflict with varying censorship standards, would certainly seem to be in order.

"But on behalf of the general censorship of movies as it has operated in Ohio for nearly 40 years, it ought to be said that it has been, in the main, moderate, intelligent and aimed at preventing nothing except the showing of scenes obviously unsuited for general patronage, particularly that of juveniles," said the newspaper.

Reviews

"Dreamboat"

(20th Century-Fox)

WHEN A PRODUCTION IS SET capably around the performances of troupers like Clifton Webb and Ginger Rogers, the marketable value of the product is quite high. And, showmen, so you should sell "Dreamboat" for all it's worth. Your box-office intake will not be disappointing under normal conditions.

"Dreamboat" is different. Decidedly so. And it is timely, pitting the comparative values of oldtime film fare on home TV screens versus the modern motion picture of today. It is done uniquely, by flashbacks. Old pictures of Webb as "the grand old screen lover" of yesteryear are resurrected for juke boxes, barroom and home video sets and plague Webb who now is a respectable and respected professor of English literature at the staid old Underhill College where the students discover that their Professor Thornton Sayre is none other than silent scren star Bruce Blair. His old reissued films are being used on a TV program starring Gloria Marlowe (Ginger Rogers), his onetime leading lady who is making a comeback in a series sponsored by the Exotic Perfume Company.

Webb's determined efforts to have the reissues withdrawn, the embarrassment which the pictures cause him and Miss Rogers' attempts to block Webb's insistence that the films be cancelled develop much merriment, frequently unfavorable to the telecasting of antique film subjects now so widely prevalent. A hilarity highlight is reached when the jolted professor attempts to secure an injunction against the showing of the films of his flamboyant past. All in all "Dreamboat" (Webb's moniker as the silent screen lover) is enjoyable, although there are slow spots in the telling. Co-starred are the lovely Anne Francis as the mild-mannered, conservative daughter of the professor who likewise is the co-victim of campus gags and stunts—and the handsome Jeffrey Hunter. The support is fine, headed by Elsa Lancaster, Fred Clark, Paul Harvey, Ray Collins, Helene Stanley and Richard Garrick. Sol C Siegel produced and Claude Binyon directed, from the screenplay by Binyon, based on a story by John D. Weaver.

Running time, 83 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

THE KOREAN WAR affords the timely background of this Howard Hughes presentation which features Robert Mitchum and Ann Blyth. Compounded of conventional plot elements, the picture has plenty of lively action and enough romantic touches to keep the fans satisfied.

Mitchum plays a U. S. infantry colonel who is in Seoul, along with his buddy, William Talman, another colonel at the time Korea is invaded. Miss Blyth, a member of the UN commission, is also in Korea at the time. When orders come in to evacuate all Americans, Miss Blyth is stubborn about leaving, so Mitchum lifts here into a plane to get her out of the country. From these disagreeable beginnings tender love grows, as time and again Miss Blyth crosses Mitchum's path. For the most part the picture outlines various combat maneuvers against the enemy, both on land and in the air. Most of them are excitingly portrayed under Tay Garnett's direction. There is a lot of grim realism to the battle scenes. Often the weight of decision on Mitchum's shoulders is a heavy one, but he finally acquits himself heroically.

The weight of decision also weighs heavily on Miss Blyth's graceful shoulders. Already the widow of an Army man, the question is whether she should marry another one. After some struggles within and some doubt about him, she decides in the affirmative.

An Edmund Grainger production, it was made from a screenplay by Milton Krims and William Wister Haines.

Running time, 105 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Denver Now Part of Nationwide Network

DENVER, July 21.—This city suddenly got on a nationwide radio hookup today with the opening of the Democratic convention in Chicago. KFEL-TV, which had secured a temporary operating permit from the Federal Communications Commission, went on the air this morning, tying into the NBC chain. The station had been operating experimentally for two days previous. It will use the NBC convention coverage this week, filling in with other NBC shows, and next Monday will go on its own part of the time. It will probably use the NBC hookup, and possibly some selections from other chains.

Studios Ready

Beside the temporary transmitter on Lookout Mountain, KFEL has complete studios ready in Denver for the production of dramatic and television shows.

KVOD, which has been given channel No. 9, will ask the FCC for a temporary operating permit such as was accorded KFEL, and if this is granted, KVOD will be on the air within two weeks, also from a Lookout Mountain location.

Empire Coil, of New Rochelle, N.Y., the other successful applicant for a channel, has not indicated when it will be on the air. Empire has been given channel 26 (UHF).

Applicants for channels four and seven will have to fight it out, since two companies are asking for each channel. Theatre men are involved in the fight for channel seven. Asking for seven are the Aladdin Radio and Television (KLZ), and Denver Television. Partners in Aladdin include Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., president of Fox Intermountain Theatres, and Harry Huffman, retired district manager. Organizing Denver Television are Harris and John Wolfberg, father and son, who entered the Denver theatre field in 1944 when they leased the Broadway from Fox Intermountain, and later did the same with the Paramount.

Vying for channel four are the KMYR Broadcasting Co., and Metropolitan Television, the latter recently organized by Bob Hope, who bought KOA from NBC, which deal is awaiting sanction by the FCC.

OTTAWA, July 21.—Revenue Minister McCann stated here that the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. will spend about $800,000 to establish a TV station in this capital but it has been decided to defer construction of six other planned TV stations in Canada, Quebec, Winnipeg, Vancouver and other cities in Western Ontario.

An all-Canadian network comprising Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa will be in operation by the start of 1953, McCann said.

Televiewers Drop In Cincinnati Area

Cincinnati, July 21.—An unofficial territorial survey reveals that, despite a greater number of television sets in use, the number of televiewers is considerably less than during the corresponding period of last year.

Investigation to determine the cause of the televiewing decline points up the weather factor as being responsible. Excessively hot weather and unusually high humidity have caused families to seek relief out-of-doors or in air-conditioned theatres. The latter has raised box-office receipts. Moreover, the quality of summer TV programs is, for the most part, not such as to induce constant viewing, even under more comfortable weather conditions.

Talks on New TV Contract Underway

Representatives of the Film Producers Association of New York, an organization composed mainly of commercial and industrial film producers, met here last night with Kenneth Thompson, Screen Actors Guild television administrator, of Hollywood.

The session was the first in a projected series scheduled before a new contract is agreed upon. The SAG is seeking a contract similar to the one consummated recently with the Alliance of Television Film Producers on the Coast.

CBS-TV to Handle Crosby Film Sales

CBS-TV and Bing Crosby Enterprises jointly announced here the completion of arrangements whereby CBS-TV film sales will represent Crosby Enterprises in the sale of television films for both national and syndication service.

The contract becomes effective immediately and CBS-TV will offer several news program series now in the final stages of completion by Enterprises. Among these are "Crown Theatre," "The Hank McCune Show," "Rebound" and "The Chair on the Boulevard."

Singer to Sponsor Show

Singer Sewing Machine Co. will sponsor "Four Star Playhouse," a half-hour TV film series featuring such Hollywood stars as Charles Bover, Dick Powell and Joel McCrea, Official Films, in association with Don Sharpe, disclosed here. The program will appear over the CBS-TV network bi-monthly starting Sept. 25. Official Films stated that for the first 26 weeks of alternate weekly sponsorship, Singer's cost for time and talent will approximate $1,400,000.

French Deal

the Motion Picture Export Association board, which includes member companies' presidents and foreign managers, to discuss French negotiation possibilities in light of France's import reduction. Further meetings on the subject will be held, it was reported.

Under the expired Franco-American agreement, 121 U. S. films were imported into France last year, out of the 186 allowed for all countries. The pact expired June 30, and in the absence of a new one the French government felt compelled to take unilateral action, it was said. It was emphasized that no quotas for the various nations have been fixed. Negotiations with the Americans will resume shortly.

Golden met yesterday with John G. McCarthy, MPAA vice-president in charge of international affairs. The Commerce Department film chief "sat in" on the Franco-American negotiations which adjourned recently in Paris. He left here for Washington yesterday afternoon.

Elsewhere in his address, Schary said television's effect is greatly overestimated, predicting that 10 years from now both TV and theatres will be flourishing, and said intelligent handling of costs in relation to grosses will meet the situation.

Talks on Arbitration

personally with officials of exhibitor organizations on the establishment of an arbitration system for the entire industry.

It was not indicated following yesterday's meeting whether Johnston met with any success in this connection, but it was pointed out that all or much of the disagreement among the distributors on arbitrable matters has meanwhile been resolved. This means that the exhibitors' five representatives on the Continuations Committee now at least would confront a distribution delegation carrying some semblance of unanimity of opinion instead of apparently hopelessly divergent outlooks.

Bidding Gets Attention

Among the subjects which received particular attention at Johnston's meeting with the sales managers was the position to be taken by distributor representatives on competitive bidding matters. It was not immediately determinable whether the position paralleled the exhibitors'.

Expressed Confidence

Johnston, however, expressed confidence that agreement could be developed between the exhibitors and distributors on arbitration and emphasized that the distributors hoped for an early establishment of a mutually agreeable arbitration system.

Attending the meeting, in addition to Johnston, were: Theodore R. Black, Charles J. Feldman, Monroe R. Goodman, Bernard G. Kranze, Nathan Levinson, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague, Ed Morey, Robert W. Perkins, Charles M. Reagan, Henderson M. Richey, William F. Rodgers, Adolph Schimel, A. W. Schwalberg, Richard Yates and William Zimmerman. MPAA executives on hand included Joyce O'Hara, Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., and Sidney Schreiber.

Ohio Censor Case Hearing Set for Aug. 8

Judge Begins Reading Supreme Court Decisions

TOLEDO, O., July 21.—Municipal Court Judge Frank W. Wiley has set August 8 for hearing charges and the defense in the violation by Martin G. Smith of the Ohio State censorship laws last week when his Westwood Theatre here exhibited Fox Movietone Newsreel's issue of "The American Newsreel" without its having been submitted to the State Censorship Division for a seal of approval.

The Motion Picture Association of America and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio arranged for the violation of the law to test the legality of prior censorship. The U. S. Supreme Court decisions favoring the industry in the "Pinky" and "Miracle" cases inspired the Ohio test.

A 30-day continuance of the Smith case had been sought, but Judge Wiley, who already has started reading the "Pinky" and "Miracle" deci-

Nashville Box-office Receipts Increase

Nashville, July 21.—All uptown theatres are having better patronage than prevailed during May and June. Local drive-ins are doing about the same business as this time last year. Product used is about as varied as for uptown houses. "Patrons are looking for a good show regardless of the type of picture," insisted one manager.

Most managers estimate income from refreshments at about 25 per cent of their total.

Sturdy Bows Send Gross Figures at NY 1st-runs High

A number of sturdy openings highlighted Broadway grosses this week, while strong hold-over product at many first-run situations continued to draw the customers.

Opinion was divided on the box-office effect of the present heat wave. However, most showmen were in agreement that the Democratic National Convention, which opened yesterday in Chicago, would not hurt the box-office. This sentiment, however, was expressed with the provision that the Democratic National Convention is not expected to offer a greater drama than the recent home televised Republican convention.

MPAA SEEKS TALKS ON ARBITRATION

UPT Notes Upward Business Trend

A seasonal upturn at the box-office currently is being experienced by United Paramount Theatres, Robert H. O'Brien, UPT secretary-treasurer, disclosed here yesterday.

Business since July 1, O'Brien stated, has been better and compares favorably with last year. The UPT executive declined to make a prediction on the affects of the current home televised Democratic National Convention on the box-office. However, he was of the opinion that, to some degree, the televising of the Republican convention aided theatre attendance.

Sales Managers Want to Resume '10' Meetings; Seeking a Date, and Place

At a meeting here yesterday among the Motion Picture Association of America member companies' sales managers and counsel and Eric A. Johnston, MPAA president, it was agreed that steps should be taken immediately to arrange for resumption of the arbitration negotiations with exhibitor representatives.

The distributor delegation was authorized to work out as soon as possible a date and place for resumption of the meetings of the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee of 10 which adjourned summarily on July 2 after four days of ineffective meetings.

Some two weeks ago, following the suggestion by exhibitor representatives, Johnston indicated he would explore the possibility of having distribution company presidents negotiate

Sees Two-a-Week Off-Hour Theatre TV Programming

Theatre television executives of United Paramount Theatres are working toward a "non-entertainment," off-hour programming schedule of two performances a week, Robert H. O'Brien, UPT secretary-treasurer, disclosed here yesterday.

O'Brien, who expressed hope that one or two off-hour commercial closed circuit deals could be consummated for September, said attempts are currently underway to key programming towards "regularity." He saw the possibility that negotiations with commercial users would be tremendously accelerated following a "successful first" performance in this field.

Asked if the commercial field was wide enough to offer TV-equipped theatres sufficient users for regular twice-a-week programming, O'Brien answered in the affirmative. He pointed out the "vast" possible market in trade associations, government and business.

The UPT executive said that negotiations are now underway with eight leading national concerns who have expressed a desire to be first, if possible, in using the medium.

UK's Views on Eady Plan Due July 29

LONDON, July 21. — The government's views on the Eady plan are expected to be made known on July 29.

Peter Thorneycroft, president of the Board of Trade, will then be questioned by Conservative member of Parliament, William Shepherd on what steps he proposes to take to secure an extension of the plan, in view of the vital need for long term program planning to secure continuity of U. K. productions. This will probably be the last opportunity for any government statement on film affairs before Parliament adjourns for a summer recess which is expected to last until October.

As previously reported, the feeling grows here that the Eady Plan or some refinement of it will become permanent in the pattern of the industry's set-up. Leading producers have recently warned of the necessity for the continuance of the plan and last week Associated British Pictures' chairman, Sir Philip Wartner, also head of Britain's largest circuit, advocated that it be put on a permanent and statutory basis.

Although it has been inferred that Cinematograph Exhibitors Association leaders have already agreed to an extension, rank-and-file exhibitors are by no means convinced that this subsidy is really necessary. The CEA General Council will meet again on September 10 and the Eady Plan will again figure prominently on the agenda.

Feature in 'Parade' On 20th-Fox Films

The July 27 issue of "Parade" has a cover featuring Anne Baxter, Anne Francis and Jean Peters along with an inside feature story telling how 20th Century-Fox has invested $16,000,000 on 10 1952 films in which they are starred or co-starred.

Pictures listed include "Viva Zapata," "Wait 'Till the Sun Shines, Nellie," "The Outcasts of Poker Flat," "My Wife's Best Friend," "Lydia Bailey," and others.

Home Offices Hold Meetings for JDA

The home office of Universal-International will hold a meeting of employes today to mobilize support in behalf of the current motion picture industry drive for the Joint Defense Appeal, it was announced by Harry M. Kalmine, chairman of the home office division for the JDA drive.

Kalmine said that United Artists will hold a JDA meeting on Friday.

Owners Push Quota Fight

LONDON, July 21. — The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association is preparing documentary evidence to prove the impossibility of meeting the 25 per cent supporting quota, following recent attacks on exhibitors in Parliament and the decision of the Films Council that there should be no relief from that quota.

The CEA will distribute the document to government ministers, members of Parliament and the press this week. It points out that to meet a 25 per cent supporting quota, the three major circuits alone need 39 second features every year. This number is not produced.

One suggestion, says the CEA, would be the re-introduction of a renters' quota. Otherwise, relief from the supporting program quota on similar lines to that granted for first feature quota would lessen defaults.

The document continues:

"Whenever exhibitors suggest that fewer and better films be produced, the reply comes that producers cannot avoid making poor films. Comparison with American films does not arise because there is no compulsion to show a poor American film. An exhibitor does not book it. It is useless booking films the public is not prepared to pay to see."

It is pointed out that no British films of any length between 3,000 feet and 7,000 feet were offered by five major American distributors, Paramount, Warner, RKO Pictures, Columbia and M-G-M, during the period from October, 1950 to April, 1952.

Knoxville Censors Are Cracking Down

Knoxville, Tenn., July 21.—The Knoxville Censor Board is preparing new city legislation "to tighten censorship control over underclad human figures on movie films or in magazines or books." Knoxville is the only city of its size in Tennessee without Sunday films.

Hofheimer Stung by Failure of Censorship Test in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., July 21.—L. J. Hofheimer of the Little here stated he wants "to be counted out when you need any more scapegoats" in a letter addressed to Sidney Schreiber of the Motion Picture Association of America. The letter followed the failure to show the uncensored newsreel as scheduled in the test of the Ohio censorship law. The newsreel, distributed here by Warner Brothers, was not shown because of a dispute between Dr. Clyde Hissong, state director of education and chief Ohio film censor, and legal representatives of Warner Brothers.

Hofheimer said he "was placed in a most embarrassing position" with press and public because of the failure to show the film. "I lent my name and my theatre," he said, "in good faith for the purpose of testing the Ohio censorship law. In doing so, I thought that both were in competent hands, legally and otherwise. Through no fault of mine, I have broken faith with the public and the press and have been placed in a most embarrassing position. I had a contract with Warner Brothers which you requested and which for some unfathomable reason was breached. In the future when you need any more scapegoats, count me out."

COLUMBUS, O., July 21.—Ohio's "mild variety" of state film censorship might be preferable to no censorship in which the film industry "might be obliged to deal with pressure groups of all shades of opinion seeking to impose restrictions of varying severity," the Columbus Dispatch has declared editorially.

Said the Dispatch: "It seems not impossible that the elimination of all censorship—the movie industry's apparent goal—might bring excesses that would eventually result in the clamping on of bans more irksome than any yet imposed, and at the Federal level.

"No one can blame the film people for seeking a re-definition of the legal status of government censorship. In some states this has been capricious and inconsistent. In some states it is rigid, in others completely non-existent. A test of the legality of censoring newsreels, most of which are kept pretty innocuous to avoid conflict with varying censorship standards, would certainly seem to be in order.

"But on behalf of the general censorship of movies as it has operated in Ohio for nearly 40 years, it ought to be said that it has been, in the main, moderate, intelligent and aimed at preventing nothing except the showing of scenes obviously unsuited for general patronage, particularly that of juveniles," said the newspaper.

Reviews

"Dreamboat"

(20th Century-Fox)

WHEN A PRODUCTION IS SET capably around the performances of troupers like Clifton Webb and Ginger Rogers, the marketable value of the product is quite high. And, showmen, so you should sell "Dreamboat" for all it's worth. Your box-office intake will not be disappointing under normal conditions.

"Dreamboat" is different. Decidedly so. And it is timely, pitting the comparative values of oldtime film fare on home TV screens versus the modern motion picture of today. It is done uniquely, by flashbacks. Old pictures of Webb as "the grand old screen lover" of yesteryear are resurrected for juke boxes, barroom and home video sets and plague Webb who now is a respectable and respected professor of English literature at the staid old Underhill College where the students discover that their Professor Thornton Sayre is none other than silent scren star Bruce Blair. His old reissued films are being used on a TV program starring Gloria Marlowe (Ginger Rogers), his onetime leading lady who is making a comeback in a series sponsored by the Exotic Perfume Company.

Webb's determined efforts to have the reissues withdrawn, the embarrassment which the pictures cause him and Miss Rogers' attempts to block Webb's insistence that the films be cancelled develop much merriment, frequently unfavorable to the telecasting of antique film subjects now so widely prevalent. A hilarity highlight is reached when the jolted professor attempts to secure an injunction against the showing of the films of his flamboyant past. All in all "Dreamboat" (Webb's moniker as the silent screen lover) is enjoyable, although there are slow spots in the telling. Co-starred are the lovely Anne Francis as the mild-mannered, conservative daughter of the professor who likewise is the co-victim of campus gags and stunts—and the handsome Jeffrey Hunter. The support is fine, headed by Elsa Lancaster, Fred Clark, Paul Harvey, Ray Collins, Helene Stanley and Richard Garrick. Sol C Siegel produced and Claude Binyon directed, from the screenplay by Binyon, based on a story by John D. Weaver.

Running time, 83 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

"One Minute to Zero"

(Grainger-RKO Radio)

THE KOREAN WAR affords the timely background of this Howard Hughes presentation which features Robert Mitchum and Ann Blyth. Compounded of conventional plot elements, the picture has plenty of lively action and enough romantic touches to keep the fans satisfied.

Mitchum plays a U. S. infantry colonel who is in Seoul, along with his buddy, William Talman, another colonel at the time Korea is invaded. Miss Blyth, a member of the UN commission, is also in Korea at the time. When orders come in to evacuate all Americans, Miss Blyth is stubborn about leaving, so Mitchum lifts here into a plane to get her out of the country. From these disagreeable beginnings tender love grows, as time and again Miss Blyth crosses Mitchum's path. For the most part the picture outlines various combat maneuvers against the enemy, both on land and in the air. Most of them are excitingly portrayed under Tay Garnett's direction. There is a lot of grim realism to the battle scenes. Often the weight of decision on Mitchum's shoulders is a heavy one, but he finally acquits himself heroically.

The weight of decision also weighs heavily on Miss Blyth's graceful shoulders. Already the widow of an Army man, the question is whether she should marry another one. After some struggles within and some doubt about him, she decides in the affirmative.

An Edmund Grainger production, it was made from a screenplay by Milton Krims and William Wister Haines.

Running time, 105 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Denver Now Part of Nationwide Network

DENVER, July 21.—This city suddenly got on a nationwide radio hookup today with the opening of the Democratic convention in Chicago. KFEL-TV, which had secured a temporary operating permit from the Federal Communications Commission, went on the air this morning, tying into the NBC chain. The station had been operating experimentally for two days previous. It will use the NBC convention coverage this week, filling in with other NBC shows, and next Monday will go on its own part of the time. It will probably use the NBC hookup, and possibly some selections from other chains.

Studios Ready

Beside the temporary transmitter on Lookout Mountain, KFEL has complete studios ready in Denver for the production of dramatic and television shows.

KVOD, which has been given channel No. 9, will ask the FCC for a temporary operating permit such as was accorded KFEL, and if this is granted, KVOD will be on the air within two weeks, also from a Lookout Mountain location.

Empire Coil, of New Rochelle, N.Y., the other successful applicant for a channel, has not indicated when it will be on the air. Empire has been given channel 26 (UHF).

Applicants for channels four and seven will have to fight it out, since two companies are asking for each channel. Theatre men are involved in the fight for channel seven. Asking for seven are the Aladdin Radio and Television (KLZ), and Denver Television. Partners in Aladdin include Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., president of Fox Intermountain Theatres, and Harry Huffman, retired district manager. Organizing Denver Television are Harris and John Wolfberg, father and son, who entered the Denver theatre field in 1944 when they leased the Broadway from Fox Intermountain, and later did the same with the Paramount.

Vying for channel four are the KMYR Broadcasting Co., and Metropolitan Television, the latter recently organized by Bob Hope, who bought KOA from NBC, which deal is awaiting sanction by the FCC.

Televiewers Drop In Cincinnati Area

Cincinnati, July 21.—An unofficial territorial survey reveals that, despite a greater number of television sets in use, the number of televiewers is considerably less than during the corresponding period of last year.

Investigation to determine the cause of the televiewing decline points up the weather factor as being responsible. Excessively hot weather and unusually high humidity have caused families to seek relief out-of-doors or in air-conditioned theatres. The latter has raised box-office receipts. Moreover, the quality of summer TV programs is, for the most part, not such as to induce constant viewing, even under more comfortable weather conditions.

French Deal

the Motion Picture Export Association board, which includes member companies' presidents and foreign managers, to discuss French negotiation possibilities in light of France's import reduction. Further meetings on the subject will be held, it was reported.

Under the expired Franco-American agreement, 121 U. S. films were imported into France last year, out of the 186 allowed for all countries. The pact expired June 30, and in the absence of a new one the French government felt compelled to take unilateral action, it was said. It was emphasized that no quotas for the various nations have been fixed. Negotiations with the Americans will resume shortly.

Golden met yesterday with John G. McCarthy, MPAA vice-president in charge of international affairs. The Commerce Department film chief "sat in" on the Franco-American negotiations which adjourned recently in Paris. He left here for Washington yesterday afternoon.

think the industry has cleaned house, as have other industries."

Elsewhere in his address, Schary said television's effect is greatly overestimated, predicting that 10 years from now both TV and theatres will be flourishing, and said intelligent handling of costs in relation to grosses will meet the situation.

Talks on Arbitration

personally with officials of exhibitor organizations on the establishment of an arbitration system for the entire industry.

It was not indicated following yesterday's meeting whether Johnston met with any success in this connection, but it was pointed out that all or much of the disagreement among the distributors on arbitrable matters has meanwhile been resolved. This means that the exhibitors' five representatives on the Continuations Committee now at least would confront a distribution delegation carrying some semblance of unanimity of opinion instead of apparently hopelessly divergent outlooks.

Bidding Gets Attention

Among the subjects which received particular attention at Johnston's meeting with the sales managers was the position to be taken by distributor representatives on competitive bidding matters. It was not immediately determinable whether the position paralleled the exhibitors'.

Expressed Confidence

Johnston, however, expressed confidence that agreement could be developed between the exhibitors and distributors on arbitration and emphasized that the distributors hoped for an early establishment of a mutually agreeable arbitration system.

Attending the meeting, in addition to Johnston, were: Theodore R. Black, Charles J. Feldman, Monroe R. Goodman, Bernard G. Kranze, Nathan Levinson, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague, Ed Morey, Robert W. Perkins, Charles M. Reagan, Henderson M. Richey, William F. Rodgers, Adolph Schimel, A. W. Schwalberg, Richard Yates and William Zimmerman. MPAA executives on hand included Joyce O'Hara, Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., and Sidney Schreiber.

KMTA Joins Compo's Anti-Tax Campaign

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 22.—Full support of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' drive to repeal the 20 per cent admission tax was pledged here today by the board of directors of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association.

Meanwhile, a survey of exhibition opinion in the Kansas City area finds many theatremen divided on whether the possible tax cut should be passed onto the public. There was unanimity of opinion, however, on the need of repealing the tax.

Seeks as Well to Amplify Competition to Theatres in Club, Hotel, Other Showings; 12 Companies Named; Says TOA 'Conspired'

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Justice Department today filed an anti-trust suit against six major producers, their 16mm. distributing subsidiaries and two independent 16mm. distributors on charges of conspiring with exhibitors to restrict the showing of 16mm. films, especially on television.

The Theatre Owners of America was named as a co-conspirator, but not a defendant, in the civil action entered by the Government in the Federal District Court in Los Angeles.

Named as defendants were: 20th Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, RKO Pictures, Republic, Columbia and Universal, Warner Brothers Distributing Corp., Republic Productions, Screen Gems (Columbia), United World Films (Universal), Films, Inc. and Pictorial Films, Inc.

The complaint charges that the defendants and TOA have conspired continuously since 1945, and for some years prior to that time, to prevent the exhibition of 16mm. feature films in competition with established motion picture theatres.

Principal complaint is that they have refused to license television stations to show 16mm. feature films. Virtually all TV stations are equipped to show 16mm. films.

Other restrictions charged by the Government are:

1. Refusing to license the exhibition of 16mm. feature films within a 10-mile radius of any

TV of 'Dems' Fails To Hurt Grosses

As forecast, the televising of the Democratic National Convention has had little or no effect so far on theatre attendance, according to reports yesterday from top circuit executives.

Despite the fact that the opening day of the convention in Chicago proved highly dramatic in many spots, people by the droves deserted their television sets to view motion pictures in air conditioned theatres, it was said. One Eastern circuit executive said the heat is still a factor in beating home television competition.

United Paramount Theatres across the country have "more than held their own during the first days of the Demo-

Film Percentage Income Up, Consumer Spending Down

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The motion picture industry's share of national income increased almost four per cent in 1951, although a more direct reflection of box-office, consumer spending for film entertainment, showed a drop.

These facts highlighted the wealth of statistics presented in the Department of Commerce annual national income survey released here today.

National income of the film industry reached $882,000,000 in 1951, only $1,000,000 less than in 1949 and a full $30,000,000 over 1950.

The actual take at the nation's film theatre box-offices, ignoring various costs and other factors to arrive at an accurate gross picture, is more nearly represented by the figures on consumer spending for film entertainment.

The 1951 figure in this category was $1,166,000,000 in 1951, compared with $1,235,000,000 in 1950 and $1,342,000,000 in 1949, carrying out a slow but steady drop.

During the past few years, the fall in spending for film entertainment was taking place at the same time U.S. consumers were actually spending more for recreation. But this year's figures show that overall recreational spending in 1951 was $11,308,000,000, down slightly from the $11,330,000,000 of 1950.

The film industry paid out $668,000,000 in wages and salaries in 1951, compared to $652,000,000 the year before; $35,000,000 in supplements to salaries in 1951, compared to $30,000,000 in 1950. Unincorporated enterprises in the industry had $43,000,000 of income in 1951, $1,000,000 more than the year before.

Corporate income in the industry before taxes reached $131,000,000 in 1951, $6,000,000 over the year before. But taxes in the same period rose $17,000,000 to $77,000,000 in 1951. Industry income after taxes was $54,000,000 in 1951 down from the $65,000,000 in 1950. Corporate dividend payments fell from $56,000,000 in 1950 to $54,000,000 in 1951. Undistributed corporate income was only $1,000,000 in 1951, compared to $9,000,000 the year before.

Employment in the industry in 1951 was 219,000 "full-time equivalent employees," compared to 224,000 the year before. Actual number of full-time and part-time employes was 243,000 in 1951, against 248,000 the year before. Average annual earnings of these employes in 1951 stood at $3,050, compared to $2,911 the year before. There were 13,000 active proprietors and 232,000 persons engaged in the industry in 1951, compared to 12,000 and 236,000 the year before.

Corporate sales rose to $1,813,000,000 in 1951 from $1,764,000,000 in 1950.

Await Burstyn Word On Ohio Appeal

No decision has been reached as yet on whether Joseph Burstyn, distributor of "The Ways of Love," will appeal the decision of the Ohio censor board barring the film in that state, Ephraim London, Burstyn's attorney, said here yesterday.

London, who successfully argued "The Miracle" case before the U. S. Supreme Court, said he is awaiting further word from Burstyn. "The Miracle" is part of the triology which makes up "Ways of Love." Burstyn's attorney also said that he had not been informed on what steps the distributor will take to lift the police ban on the film in Chicago.

Classic Pictures Files Suit In Ohio on 'Native Son' Ban

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—Classic Pictures, Inc., New York, has filed suit in Ohio Supreme Court to compel the Ohio Censor Board to approve "Native Son" for showing in Ohio. The company said the Board refused a certificate for the picture last November 11 on the grounds that it is not of a moral, educational, amusing or harmless character, and contributes to racial misunderstanding.

Republic's Budget

prepared to back up this expenditure with an advertising appropriation of at least $2,500,000 for national and local newspapers, trade papers, magazines, world premieres and star personal appearance tours.

"I have never believed in whistling in the dark and making investments I didn't think would pay off," Yates was quoted as saying. "It is my opinion, after a most exhaustive 'grass roots' study of conditions, that there is great hope for our industry. There have been enough indications in recent weeks from the results achieved by our pictures to convince me that the theatre business, while depleted, is certainly not in the critical state many observers would lead us to believe."

Story, cast and color, Yates declared, are the three factors that are vital to the success of a picture.

The Republic president announced that the following titles are included in the company's production plans for the immediate future: "Jubilee Trail," "Flight Nurse," "The Alamo," "Sea of Lost Ships," "Santa Fe Passage," "The Woman They Almost Lynched," "One for the Road," "The Man from Texas," "Brother Van," "The Golden Tide," "Red Horizon," "Where Are We Going?' and "City That Never Sleeps."

Says Fewer US Films Would Bankrupt British Industry

By PETER BURNUP

LONDON, July 22.—Pointing out that there is agitation for a greater British embargo on American films as renegotiation of the Anglo-American film pact looms on the horizon, Lord Lucas said in a House of Lords debate yesterday that such further restriction would be the best way to bring the British industry to bankrupcy.

Lucas agreed that the British industry must remain subsidized. "I don't think that for as long as we can foresee the industry will attract finance through normal channels," he said. "The National Film Finance Corporation is a necessity for all time. I have no faith that banking circles can discipline the industry as it should be disciplined."

His lordship declared that the industry faces a revolution in the next few years. As he sees it, British production would concentrate largely on making television films, with the majority of theatres offering large-screen television of big sporting events.

The House of Lords debated the film industry on a motion by Lord Archibald, formerly of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, drawing attention to the operations of NFFC. Political meterologists, seeking therein portents of the government's intentions regarding forthcoming discusions regarding the monetary agreement, were disappointed. It seems that the only definite circumstance emerging is the cabinet's determination permanently to integrate in the industry some form or other of the Eady plan.

Opening the debate, Archibald launched into an attack on the £3,000,000 loan by NFFC to British Lion.

He said the industry would always need two props: (1) a quota, and (2) the Eady plan. He felt that the third prop, NFFC, would become unnecessary in a few years. Unless continuance of the Eady plan is announced shortly, he said, a big drop in production planning would be inevitable from March, 1953, onward.

Archibald urged that the government announce that it will make the Eady plan permanent and statutory, and claimed that £3,000,000 annually is not a high price for a stable industry which now produces £40,000,000 annually in entertainment taxes.

Labor peers demanded that it is essential not only to maintain production here but to increase it so that the majority of films screened in Britain be British. They also asked for a tightening up of the definition of British films—which currently permits quota ticket films "when money, scripts, producers, directors and stars all are American."

Lord Drogheda, chairman of the Films Council, rebutted defaulter allegations of unfairness, declaring that the Council could not consider defaults without exhibitor members who are the only people cognizant of the full facts. He regarded the present quota as "about right." He said some defaults were inevitable, but he pointed out that defaults were reduced in 1951 to 771 from 2,300 in the previous year.

Winding up the debate, the Earl of Selkirk, government spokesman in Lords, said discussions of the forthcoming America agreement will take place between now and the end of September. He said the incumbent Conservative government considered the predecessor Labor government wise in having initiated the Eady plan, but that it is for the industry itself to decide whether it should be continued. He said the government would welcome continuation.

Additional exhibitors have notified Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the industry's tax repeal campaign, that they will serve on anti-tax campaign committees in their states, it was revealed yesterday by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations. All 48 states, except South Dakota, are now represented in the 148 acceptances received to date.

Newest additions follow: New York, Spyros S. Skouras and Robert Weitman; Virginia, Carlton Duffus; Mississippi, Arthur LeMan; Arizona, George M. Aurelius; New Mexico, Boyd F. Scott; Wisconsin, Ben Marcus; Washington, Will J. Conner; Pennsylvania, Sidney E. Samuelson.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 22.—The opening gun in the fight of the Albany exchange territory to mobolize support for the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' drive to eliminate the 20 per cent admission tax will be fired at a meeting here in the 20th Century Fox building Friday morning.

They are Harry Lamont, chairman of the Albany Theatre Owners of America; Saul J. Ullman, Fabian drive-in manager, and Charles A. Smakwitz, Warner zone manager.

Louella Parsons, in the August Cosmopolitan, gives top position to "The Story of Will Rogers" and in conferring this citation, headlines "Like Father, Like Son"—"A picture of deep emotional impact." . . . Neatest trick of the week is the simulated envelope of proofs from the "Movie Memo Photo Shop" at 1540 Broadway, in which "Elizabeth Wilding" encloses "a few extra snapshots" with a note signed "Liz" addressed to movie editors. It exactly duplicates the style of Eastman's package delivery. Each print is backed-up in Elizabeth Taylor's own handwriting.

The article also outlined 44 other national and 40 local tieins engineered by Paramount's staff. Tide quotes Sid Mesibov, Paramount exploitation manager, as saying, "For a movie publicity man to dream up something better than colossal is quite a chore." And Libbey ad manager Carl U. Fauster said, "Of all the promotions ever done by Libbey Glass, "Circus" has been far and away the most successful."

The VFW magazine gives the picture editorial praise for the authenticity of the material and is sending a bulletin for posting to more than 10,000 posts at the local level. Advertising for the picture will reach a total readership of 45,000,000, beginning with Time for July 14 and becoming heavy in August. In addition American Weekly and This Week will be used in line with local playdates.

cratic conclave, a UPT spokesman declared. Similar sentiments were expressed by Loews, RKO Theatres and Shea Enterprises.

The possibility that convention competition may prove tougher when a highly dramatic conflict, or count develops was not ruled out, however. The probability of that happening at peak theatre hours was another factor to consider, some circuit executives pointed out.

In the main, circuit executives felt that on the basis of initial days' results the Democratic convention most likely will be as negligible in its affect on the box-office as the recent Republican convention.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Theatre attendance here for the first day of the Democratic convention paralleled the experience of the opening of the Republican conclave, with business better than normal as intense heat drove pedestrians off the streets to seek refuge in air-conditioned theatres.

As the heat wave stretched out to record length, local exhibitors found their business considerably improved over the pre-Fourth of July period and many were doing better than they had in July of last year.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Leading figures attending the Democratic National Convention here, along with more than 1,000 local exhibitors and others, were the guests of Bob Hope and Jane Russell last night at a special screening of Paramount's "Son of Paleface" at the Esquire Theatre.

Among the celebrities present were presidential candidate Richard Russell, Pearl Mesta, William Randolph Hearst, Jr., Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Frank Coniff, Inez Robb, Joan Bennett, Happy Chandler, Irving Kupcinet and Gertrude Niesen.

Set A Budget for 'IA' Convention

MINNEAPOLIS, July 22.—The local arrangements committee for the 41st IATSE biennial convention, which will be held at the Hotel Nicollet here the week of August 4, will operate with a budget of $20,000, while the International itself will spend additional sums for auditorium space, hotel accommodations, banquets and other expenses. Some 500 delegates are scheduled to attend.

The week preceding the convention will be devoted to meetings of the International's executive board. Richard F. Walsh, IATSE president, and the entire staff at New York headquarters will leave there Thursday for the board conferences which will open here Monday. "IA" vice-presidents from all parts of the country also will arrive for the board parleys.

William (Bill) Donnelly, financial secretary and business agent of Minneapolis Stage Employes Local No. 13, is chairman of the local arrangements committee. Other host locals include Projectionists Local No. 219, Theatrical Wardrobe Attendants Local No. 781, Film Exchange Employes Local No. B-31, Exchange Employes Local No. F-31, and Theatre Employes Local No. B-32.

will leave for Washington Thursday or Friday, today described the local situation as the "worst trade relationship I ever saw in any industry."

Amis said many exhibitors have told him they feel they are not being properly represented in arbitration discussions now in progress in the East, some even stating their intention of withdrawing from Theatre Owners of America membership. It was a Southern California Theatre Owners Association complaint to the SSBC that resulted in Amis' coming here to investigate conditions.

Amis spent the morning with a San Diego exhibitor delegation headed by Bert I. Jones, who told him they have had to maintain a buyer in Los Angeles permanently for protection.

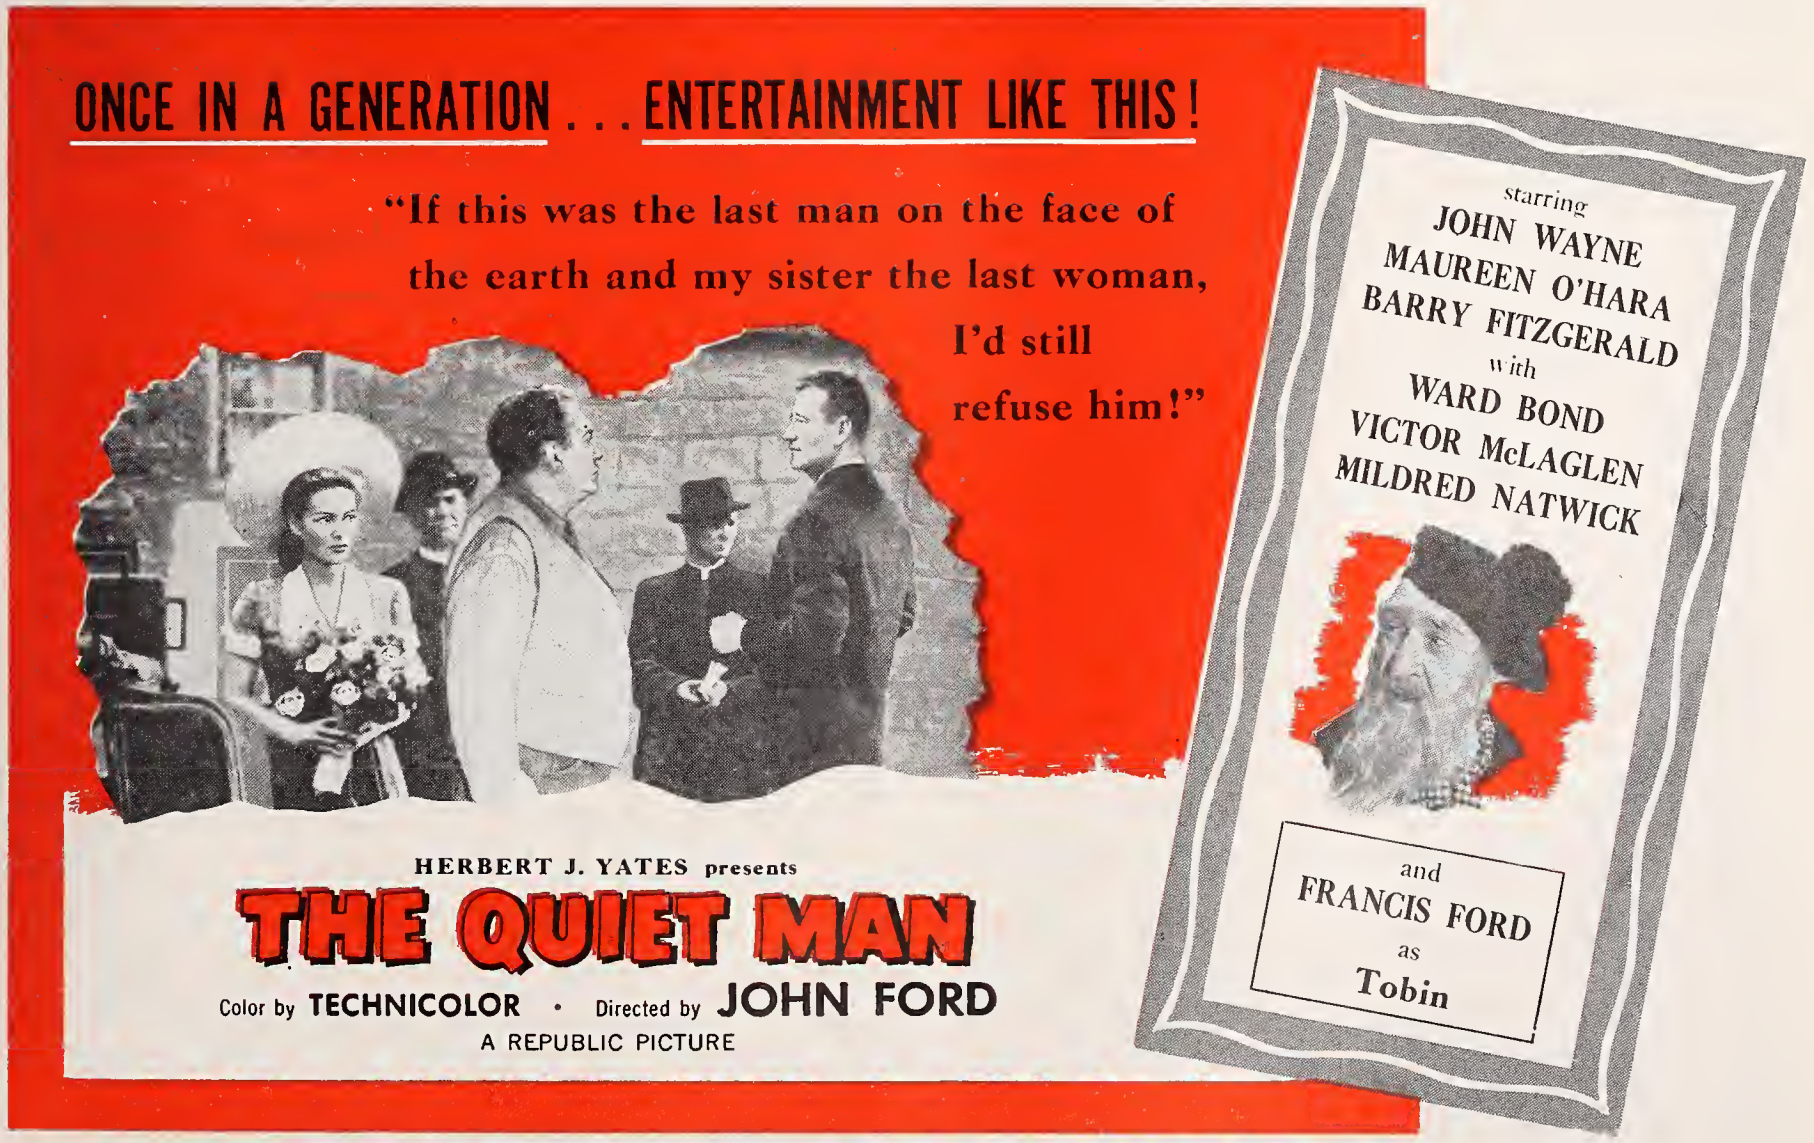
The delegation cited instances, Amis said, in which declining grosses and rising costs, unrelieved by revisions in rentals, have forced closings, although San Diego, due to the activity of military installations there, have had fewer shutdowns, proportionately than most California areas.

TV Censorship in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, July 22.—Pictures are being censored here for TV by Miguel A. Pereyra, tele-communications director of the Ministry of Communications and Public Works, controller of radio and video. The censoring is to eliminate pictures unsuitable for minors. However, pictures that may be regarded as unsuitable for children but which are passed for adults may be telecast after 9:30 P.M.

Speculate Over US, UK Pact Confabs

LONDON, July 22. — With news of the French government cutting film imports, and Winston Churchill warning the country of further economic measures, industry executives are concerned over their effect on the coming Anglo-U. S. motion picture agreement talks.



Announcing a two-day debate on the economic situation before the House of Commons adjourns for the summer, Churchill added: "Grave and far-reaching matters affecting every branch of our national life, both domestic and defensive, will have to be brought into a new survey and presentation of our present position."

As long ago as last January Chancellor of the Exchequer Richard Butler said consideration was being given to the possibility of reducing dollar payments to American film distributors. Since then Butler has indicated that there may be further import cuts.

Expected Next Week

The government statement and two-day debate are expected next week. Parliament adjourns for the summer recess on August 2, until October.

The first year of the film remittance agreement will end September 30 but no date has yet been fixed for the reopening of the talks. Both parties feel it advisable to defer negotiations until some time in August and it is understood that the Motion Picture Association of America is anxious to conclude the talks with the French government before embarking on the British confabs.

Gov't Suit

established theatre.

2. Limiting the conditions for licensing 16mm feature films to drive-ins, churches, schools, clubs and hotels.

3. Imposing arbitrary and excessive clearances between the first regular theatre release of a feature motion picture and its release on 16mm. film.

4. Refusing to license the exhibition of 16mm. feature films at free merchants' shows, taverns, or in coin-operated machines and refusing to license roadshow men (defined as itinerant exhibitors of motion pictures who make a profit from showing motion pictures to the general public for admission charges).

5. Reserving individually and jointly the right to approve or disapprove each location for the exhibition of 16mm. feature films produced or distributed by the defendants, before or after the licensing of the particular location, coupled with the right to arbitrarily abrogate any license granted pursuant to a given location approval.

6. Granting or withholding licensing to exhibit 16mm. feature films in conformity with lists of locatons "approved" or "disapproved" by the defendants.

In addition, the complaint alleges that the defendants "have maintained an intricate system to police and enforce, and with the assistance of Theatre Owners of America, Inc., have policed and enforced, the license restrictions imposed upon exhibitors of 16mm. feature films, and have blacklisted or boycotted exhibitors who disregard such restrictions."

Chief effect of this alleged conspiracy and combination in restraint of trade has been to suppress the telecasting of the "finer feature films," the complaint stated.

In addition, competition in the distribution and exhibition of feature films has been "unreasonably restrained"; exhibitors and potential exhibitors of 16mm. feature films have been blocked from significant portions of the U. S. market; and persons living in theatreless towns, hospitals or other institutions have been prevented from seeing any but outdated feature films, the complaint charged.

The Government asked the court to enjoin the defendants from entering into any agreemets protecting theatre owners from competition from exhibitions of 16mm. feature films except that reasonable clearance periods may be granted between runs of a particular feature film on 35mm. film in a theatre and exhibitions, including telecasts, of the same film on 16mm. film, when such exhibitions on 16mm. film are shown to the general public in an area that makes them substantially competitive with the theatre.

The court was also requested to order the defendants to grant unrestricted leases and licenses for the exhibition, including telecasting, of those of the feature films they control which the court feels necessary to "dissipate fully the consequences of the aforesaid illegal combination and conspiracy."

Victor H. Kramer, chief of the General Litigation Section of the Antitrust Division, pointed out that, although from the standpoint of mass appeal and audience, television would benefit most from successful completion of the suit, the effects of the alleged conspiracy have been severe on theatreless towns and other users of 16mm. feature films.

The complaint itself stated that the actual or potential market for such films includes: armed forces, veterans' hospitals and various other government agencies, Red Cross, USO, theatreless towns, hotels, clubs, camps, roadshow men, drive-in theatres, merchants' free shows, coin-operated machines, and private homes; schools, churches and charitable organizations; hospitals, sanatoria, homes of the aged or disabled and convents, and ships, trains and planes.

Furthermore, said the complaint, "There is a large demand for 16mm. feature films by the telecasting industry for purposes of television programs, since a large majority of telecasting stations in this country are equipped with apparatus for the telecasting of 16mm. films and not of 35mm. films."

The case was prepared by attorneys George H. Schueller and Leonard R. Posner, under Kramer's direction, with William C. Dixon, special assistant to the Attorney General, handling the Los Angeles end of the action.

Commenting on the case, Attorney General James P. McGranery stated: "This suit is filed as part of the continuing program of the Anti-trust Division to prevent businessmen and others from combining to place restrictions upon what members of the general public may see on their television sets."

Newell A. Clapp, Acting Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division, said: "Since World War II, 16mm. films have gained great significance for education and entertainment, especially for telecasting by television stations. They are less costly than standard 35mm. films and do not require expensive equipment or special safety precautions. According to the complaint, defendants have imposed arbitrary and unreasonable conditions upon the exhibitions of 16mm. feature films in hospitals, schools, churches and USO centers, and have prevented the use of these films on television. This suit seeks to prevent defendants from continuing their restrictive system of distributing these films."

"Sudden Fear"

(Kaufman Productions-RKO Radio)

A HIGH-POWERED MELODRAMA of love and evil design serves as the vehicle for Joan Crawford's latest screen appearance. Considerable cleverness and ingenuity went into the fashioning of the story and it beats upon the emotions relentlessly. Showmen can be sure it is the type of melodrama that will bring to the theatre those patrons who go only when the product is strong.

The persuasive performance of Miss Crawford as a successful playwright who falls in love with, and marries Jack Palance, a scheming actor, is fully matched by his characterization. He masters completely a role that ranges from the urbane to the monstrous. Gloria Grahame rounds out the romantic triangle as a girl friend of Palance who maps out with him an intricate plan to kill Miss Crawford so that he would inherit her fortune.

It is with sudden and heart-tearing fear that Miss Crawford learns from a dictaphone about Palance's relations with Miss Grahame and their ruthless conspiracy. Terror changes her from a loving wife to a retribution-bent creature.

Action and development in the screenplay by Lenore Coffee and Robert Smith is emphasized by pounding music and soundtrack devices. At times the screenplay resorts to obvious artifice in the interest of tension and excitement.

Miss Crawford devises a plan of counterattack whereby she would kill Palance and have the circumstantial evidence point to Miss Grahame as the murderess. At the last moment she realizes the senselessness of her plans and backs out. But by this time Palance turns upon her in full murderous pursuit to make a nerve-tingling climax. He pursues her violently in an automobile through twisting, desolate streets. The ending is ironic. Miss Grahame happens on the street, and thinking her to be Miss Crawford Palance runs her down in a hysterical rage and is himself killed in the accident.

Based on the story of the same name by Edna Sherry, it was produced by Joseph Kaufman and directed by David Miller.

Running time, 110 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

"You for Me"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A LOT OF HUMOROUS COMPLICATIONS of a formula nature are churned up in "You for Me." The picture moves along breezily and is pleasant to behold provided one is not too concerned with credulity.

Peter Lawford plays a wealthy young philanderer who is rushed to a hospital with buckshot wounds in an embarrassing place, the result of a hunting mishap. At the hospital there is introduced Gig Young, a surgeon, and Jane Greer, a nurse. Thus the foundation is set for the romantic triangle that ensues rather carefreely.

Lawford annually makes a heavy financial contribution to the support of the hospital and when he feels that he received indelicate treatment from Miss Greer, he proceeds to get her fired. When later he learns to know Miss Greer better he forthwith has her reinstated.

Presently Lawford decides to withdraw his contribution to the hospital in the light of the financial demands which his wife, who he is about to divorce, is making on him. And so at this point in the screenplay by William Roberts, Miss Greer finds herself in an unusual role, that of sweetening Lawford into continuing his contributions to the hospital. Since Miss Greer's boy friend, Young, is behind this strategy, a lot of embarrassing moments ensue.

All the frothy humor inherent in the situation is brought out under Don Weis' direction. As an added element of drama, there is an angle about Miss Greer's sister who gives birth to a baby who has a respiratory ailment, thus necessitating quick, emergency action.

The story ends as it begins, in a jocular vein. Lawford proves very noble and paves the way for Miss Greer to marry Young. Henry Berman produced.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

lease issued in the East and in the brief filed with the court, due to the fact that the Government's case was prepared entirely in the East and merely sent here for filing. McGrath said he believed this was done to avert delay due to congested court calendars in the East. Although the offices of all but one defendant company are headquartered in New York, McGrath said companies were servable either there or here.

Asked if he had information as to the inception of the suit, and whether agitation for it might have been started by television interests, McGrath said he was completely uninformed but that it is invariable Justice Department policy to check thoroughly into all such matters, independently, before launching action.

Neither could McGrath explain why Paramount and Loew's were not among the defendants, again referring the question to Washington.

far as American distributors are concerned.

Of the amount unfrozen, $5,100,000 represents the yen that piled up to the credit of the companies during the 10-year operation in Japan of the MPEA. The other $1,400,000 is the remittance of "curent earnings," for the period from Jan. 1, 1952, to March 31, 1952. Since the first of this year, when MPEA discontinued operations in Japan, the distributors have been operating independently there.

Negotiations for the unfreezing of the $6,500,000 were conducted many months without fanfare. Since the MPEA began operations in Japan, the American companies spent large sums for operating costs and out-of-pocket expenses and for construction of exchange offices and other buildings.

The Theatre Owners of America was named as a co-conspirator, but not a defendant, in the civil action entered by the Government in the Federal District Court in Los Angeles.

Named as defendants were: 20th Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, RKO Pictures, Republic, Columbia and Universal, Warner Brothers Distributing Corp., Republic Productions, Screen Gems (Columbia), United World Films (Universal), Films, Inc. and Pictorial Films, Inc.

The complaint charges that the defendants and TOA have conspired continuously since 1945, and for some years prior to that time, to prevent the exhibition of 16mm. feature films in competition with established motion picture theatres.

Principal complaint is that they have refused to license television stations to show 16mm. feature films. Virtually all TV stations are equipped to show 16mm. films.

Other restrictions charged by the Government are:

1. Refusing to license the exhibition of 16mm. feature films within a 10-mile radius of any

TV of 'Dems' Fails To Hurt Grosses

As forecast, the televising of the Democratic National Convention has had little or no effect so far on theatre attendance, according to reports yesterday from top circuit executives.

Despite the fact that the opening day of the convention in Chicago proved highly dramatic in many spots, people by the droves deserted their television sets to view motion pictures in air conditioned theatres, it was said. One Eastern circuit executive said the heat is still a factor in beating home television competition.

United Paramount Theatres across the country have "more than held their own during the first days of the Demo-

Film Percentage Income Up, Consumer Spending Down

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The motion picture industry's share of national income increased almost four per cent in 1951, although a more direct reflection of box-office, consumer spending for film entertainment, showed a drop.

These facts highlighted the wealth of statistics presented in the Department of Commerce annual national income survey released here today.

National income of the film industry reached $882,000,000 in 1951, only $1,000,000 less than in 1949 and a full $30,000,000 over 1950.

The actual take at the nation's film theatre box-offices, ignoring various costs and other factors to arrive at an accurate gross picture, is more nearly represented by the figures on consumer spending for film entertainment.

The 1951 figure in this category was $1,166,000,000 in 1951, compared with $1,235,000,000 in 1950 and $1,342,000,000 in 1949, carrying out a slow but steady drop.

During the past few years, the fall in spending for film entertainment was taking place at the same time U.S. consumers were actually spending more for recreation. But this year's figures show that overall recreational spending in 1951 was $11,308,000,000, down slightly from the $11,330,000,000 of 1950.

The film industry paid out $668,000,000 in wages and salaries in 1951, compared to $652,000,000 the year before; $35,000,000 in supplements to salaries in 1951, compared to $30,000,000 in 1950. Unincorporated enterprises in the industry had $43,000,000 of income in 1951, $1,000,000 more than the year before.

Corporate income in the industry before taxes reached $131,000,000 in 1951, $6,000,000 over the year before. But taxes in the same period rose $17,000,000 to $77,000,000 in 1951. Industry income after taxes was $54,000,000 in 1951 down from the $65,000,000 in 1950. Corporate dividend payments fell from $56,000,000 in 1950 to $54,000,000 in 1951. Undistributed corporate income was only $1,000,000 in 1951, compared to $9,000,000 the year before.

Employment in the industry in 1951 was 219,000 "full-time equivalent employees," compared to 224,000 the year before. Actual number of full-time and part-time employes was 243,000 in 1951, against 248,000 the year before. Average annual earnings of these employes in 1951 stood at $3,050, compared to $2,911 the year before. There were 13,000 active proprietors and 232,000 persons engaged in the industry in 1951, compared to 12,000 and 236,000 the year before.

Corporate sales rose to $1,813,000,000 in 1951 from $1,764,000,000 in 1950.

Await Burstyn Word On Ohio Appeal

No decision has been reached as yet on whether Joseph Burstyn, distributor of "The Ways of Love," will appeal the decision of the Ohio censor board barring the film in that state, Ephraim London, Burstyn's attorney, said here yesterday.

London, who successfully argued "The Miracle" case before the U. S. Supreme Court, said he is awaiting further word from Burstyn. "The Miracle" is part of the triology which makes up "Ways of Love." Burstyn's attorney also said that he had not been informed on what steps the distributor will take to lift the police ban on the film in Chicago.

Classic Pictures Files Suit In Ohio on 'Native Son' Ban

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—Classic Pictures, Inc., New York, has filed suit in Ohio Supreme Court to compel the Ohio Censor Board to approve "Native Son" for showing in Ohio. The company said the Board refused a certificate for the picture last November 11 on the grounds that it is not of a moral, educational, amusing or harmless character, and contributes to racial misunderstanding.

Republic's Budget

prepared to back up this expenditure with an advertising appropriation of at least $2,500,000 for national and local newspapers, trade papers, magazines, world premieres and star personal appearance tours.

"I have never believed in whistling in the dark and making investments I didn't think would pay off," Yates was quoted as saying. "It is my opinion, after a most exhaustive 'grass roots' study of conditions, that there is great hope for our industry. There have been enough indications in recent weeks from the results achieved by our pictures to convince me that the theatre business, while depleted, is certainly not in the critical state many observers would lead us to believe."

Story, cast and color, Yates declared, are the three factors that are vital to the success of a picture.

The Republic president announced that the following titles are included in the company's production plans for the immediate future: "Jubilee Trail," "Flight Nurse," "The Alamo," "Sea of Lost Ships," "Santa Fe Passage," "The Woman They Almost Lynched," "One for the Road," "The Man from Texas," "Brother Van," "The Golden Tide," "Red Horizon," "Where Are We Going?' and "City That Never Sleeps."

Says Fewer US Films Would Bankrupt British Industry

By PETER BURNUP

LONDON, July 22.—Pointing out that there is agitation for a greater British embargo on American films as renegotiation of the Anglo-American film pact looms on the horizon, Lord Lucas said in a House of Lords debate yesterday that such further restriction would be the best way to bring the British industry to bankrupcy.

Lucas agreed that the British industry must remain subsidized. "I don't think that for as long as we can foresee the industry will attract finance through normal channels," he said. "The National Film Finance Corporation is a necessity for all time. I have no faith that banking circles can discipline the industry as it should be disciplined."

His lordship declared that the industry faces a revolution in the next few years. As he sees it, British production would concentrate largely on making television films, with the majority of theatres offering large-screen television of big sporting events.

The House of Lords debated the film industry on a motion by Lord Archibald, formerly of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, drawing attention to the operations of NFFC. Political meterologists, seeking therein portents of the government's intentions regarding forthcoming discusions regarding the monetary agreement, were disappointed. It seems that the only definite circumstance emerging is the cabinet's determination permanently to integrate in the industry some form or other of the Eady plan.

Opening the debate, Archibald launched into an attack on the £3,000,000 loan by NFFC to British Lion.

He said the industry would always need two props: (1) a quota, and (2) the Eady plan. He felt that the third prop, NFFC, would become unnecessary in a few years. Unless continuance of the Eady plan is announced shortly, he said, a big drop in production planning would be inevitable from March, 1953, onward.

Archibald urged that the government announce that it will make the Eady plan permanent and statutory, and claimed that £3,000,000 annually is not a high price for a stable industry which now produces £40,000,000 annually in entertainment taxes.

Labor peers demanded that it is essential not only to maintain production here but to increase it so that the majority of films screened in Britain be British. They also asked for a tightening up of the definition of British films—which currently permits quota ticket films "when money, scripts, producers, directors and stars all are American."

Lord Drogheda, chairman of the Films Council, rebutted defaulter allegations of unfairness, declaring that the Council could not consider defaults without exhibitor members who are the only people cognizant of the full facts. He regarded the present quota as "about right." He said some defaults were inevitable, but he pointed out that defaults were reduced in 1951 to 771 from 2,300 in the previous year.

Winding up the debate, the Earl of Selkirk, government spokesman in Lords, said discussions of the forthcoming America agreement will take place between now and the end of September. He said the incumbent Conservative government considered the predecessor Labor government wise in having initiated the Eady plan, but that it is for the industry itself to decide whether it should be continued. He said the government would welcome continuation.

148 Committeemen To Fight 20% Tax

Additional exhibitors have notified Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the industry's tax repeal campaign, that they will serve on anti-tax campaign committees in their states, it was revealed yesterday by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations. All 48 states, except South Dakota, are now represented in the 148 acceptances received to date.

Newest additions follow: New York, Spyros S. Skouras and Robert Weitman; Virginia, Carlton Duffus; Mississippi, Arthur LeMan; Arizona, George M. Aurelius; New Mexico, Boyd F. Scott; Wisconsin, Ben Marcus; Washington, Will J. Conner; Pennsylvania, Sidney E. Samuelson.

Albany Area Plans Anti-Tax Battle

ALBANY, N. Y., July 22.—The opening gun in the fight of the Albany exchange territory to mobolize support for the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' drive to eliminate the 20 per cent admission tax will be fired at a meeting here in the 20th Century Fox building Friday morning.

Leo Greenfield, Universal-International manager, called the conclave after his appointment as distributor chairman. Greenfield named three exhibitor chairmen. They are Harry Lamont, chairman of the Albany Theatre Owners of America; Saul J. Ullman, Fabian drive-in manager, and Charles A. Smakwitz, Warner zone manager.

The article also outlined 44 other national and 40 local tieins engineered by Paramount's staff. Tide quotes Sid Mesibov, Paramount exploitation manager, as saying, "For a movie publicity man to dream up something better than colossal is quite a chore." The VFW magazine gives the picture editorial praise for the authenticity of the material and is sending a bulletin for posting to more than 10,000 posts at the local level. 'Dems' Fail cratic conclave, a UPT spokesman declared. Similar sentiments were expressed by Loews, RKO Theatres and Shea Enterprises.

The possibility that convention competition may prove tougher when a highly dramatic conflict, or count develops was not ruled out, however. The probability of that happening at peak theatre hours was another factor to consider, some circuit executives pointed out.

In the main, circuit executives felt that on the basis of initial days' results the Democratic convention most likely will be as negligible in its affect on the box-office as the recent Republican convention.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Theatre attendance here for the first day of the Democratic convention paralleled the experience of the opening of the Republican conclave, with business better than normal as intense heat drove pedestrians off the streets to seek refuge in air-conditioned theatres.

As the heat wave stretched out to record length, local exhibitors found their business considerably improved over the pre-Fourth of July period and many were doing better than they had in July of last year.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Leading figures attending the Democratic National Convention here, along with more than 1,000 local exhibitors and others, were the guests of Bob Hope and Jane Russell last night at a special screening of Paramount's "Son of Paleface" at the Esquire Theatre.

Among the celebrities present were presidential candidate Richard Russell, Pearl Mesta, William Randolph Hearst, Jr., Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Frank Coniff, Inez Robb, Joan Bennett, Happy Chandler, Irving Kupcinet and Gertrude Niesen.

Set A Budget for 'IA' Convention

MINNEAPOLIS, July 22.—The local arrangements committee for the 41st IATSE biennial convention, which will be held at the Hotel Nicollet here the week of August 4, will operate with a budget of $20,000, while the International itself will spend additional sums for auditorium space, hotel accommodations, banquets and other expenses. Some 500 delegates are scheduled to attend.

The week preceding the convention will be devoted to meetings of the International's executive board. Richard F. Walsh, IATSE president, and the entire staff at New York headquarters will leave there Thursday for the board conferences which will open here Monday. "IA" vice-presidents from all parts of the country also will arrive for the board parleys.

William (Bill) Donnelly, financial secretary and business agent of Minneapolis Stage Employes Local No. 13, is chairman of the local arrangements committee. Other host locals include Projectionists Local No. 219, Theatrical Wardrobe Attendants Local No. 781, Film Exchange Employes Local No. B-31, Exchange Employes Local No. F-31, and Theatre Employes Local No. B-32.

will leave for Washington Thursday or Friday, today described the local situation as the "worst trade relationship I ever saw in any industry."

Amis said many exhibitors have told him they feel they are not being properly represented in arbitration discussions now in progress in the East, some even stating their intention of withdrawing from Theatre Owners of America membership. It was a Southern California Theatre Owners Association complaint to the SSBC that resulted in Amis' coming here to investigate conditions.

Amis spent the morning with a San Diego exhibitor delegation headed by Bert I. Jones, who told him they have had to maintain a buyer in Los Angeles permanently for protection.

The delegation cited instances, Amis said, in which declining grosses and rising costs, unrelieved by revisions in rentals, have forced closings, although San Diego, due to the activity of military installations there, have had fewer shutdowns, proportionately than most California areas.

TV Censorship in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, July 22.—Pictures are being censored here for TV by Miguel A. Pereyra, tele-communications director of the Ministry of Communications and Public Works, controller of radio and video. The censoring is to eliminate pictures unsuitable for minors. However, pictures that may be regarded as unsuitable for children but which are passed for adults may be telecast after 9:30 P.M.

Speculate Over US, UK Pact Confabs

LONDON, July 22. — With news of the French government cutting film imports, and Winston Churchill warning the country of further economic measures, industry executives are concerned over their effect on the coming Anglo-U. S. motion picture agreement talks.

Announcing a two-day debate on the economic situation before the House of Commons adjourns for the summer, Churchill added: "Grave and far-reaching matters affecting every branch of our national life, both domestic and defensive, will have to be brought into a new survey and presentation of our present position."

As long ago as last January Chancellor of the Exchequer Richard Butler said consideration was being given to the possibility of reducing dollar payments to American film distributors. Since then Butler has indicated that there may be further import cuts.

Expected Next Week

The government statement and two-day debate are expected next week. Parliament adjourns for the summer recess on August 2, until October.

The first year of the film remittance agreement will end September 30 but no date has yet been fixed for the reopening of the talks. Both parties feel it advisable to defer negotiations until some time in August and it is understood that the Motion Picture Association of America is anxious to conclude the talks with the French government before embarking on the British confabs.

Gov't Suit

established theatre.

2. Limiting the conditions for licensing 16mm feature films to drive-ins, churches, schools, clubs and hotels.

3. Imposing arbitrary and excessive clearances between the first regular theatre release of a feature motion picture and its release on 16mm. film.

4. Refusing to license the exhibition of 16mm. feature films at free merchants' shows, taverns, or in coin-operated machines and refusing to license roadshow men (defined as itinerant exhibitors of motion pictures who make a profit from showing motion pictures to the general public for admission charges).

5. Reserving individually and jointly the right to approve or disapprove each location for the exhibition of 16mm. feature films produced or distributed by the defendants, before or after the licensing of the particular location, coupled with the right to arbitrarily abrogate any license granted pursuant to a given location approval.

6. Granting or withholding licensing to exhibit 16mm. feature films in conformity with lists of locatons "approved"' or "disapproved" by the defendants.

In addition, the complaint alleges that the defendants "have maintained an intricate system to police and enforce, and with the assistance of Theatre Owners of America, Inc., have policed and enforced, the license restrictions imposed upon exhibitors of 16mm. feature films, and have blacklisted or boycotted exhibitors who disregard such restrictions."

Chief effect of this alleged conspiracy and combination in restraint of trade has been to suppress the telecasting of the "finer feature films," the complaint stated.

In addition, competition in the distribution and exhibition of feature films has been "unreasonably restrained"; exhibitors and potential exhibitors of 16mm. feature films have been blocked from significant portions of the U. S. market; and persons living in theatreless towns, hospitals or other institutions have been prevented from seeing any but outdated feature films, the complaint charged.

The Government asked the court to enjoin the defendants from entering into any agreemets protecting theatre owners from competition from exhibitions of 16mm. feature films except that reasonable clearance periods may be granted between runs of a particular feature film on 35mm. film in a theatre and exhibitions, including telecasts, of the same film on 16mm. film, when such exhibitions on 16mm. film are shown to the general public in an area that makes them substantially competitive with the theatre.

The court was also requested to order the defendants to grant unrestricted leases and licenses for the exhibition, including telecasting, of those of the feature films they control which the court feels necessary to "dissipate fully the consequences of the aforesaid illegal combination and conspiracy."

Victor H. Kramer, chief of the General Litigation Section of the Antitrust Division, pointed out that, although from the standpoint of mass appeal and audience, television would benefit most from successful completion of the suit, the effects of the alleged conspiracy have been severe on theatreless towns and other users of 16mm. feature films.

The complaint itself stated that the actual or potential market for such films includes: armed forces, veterans' hospitals and various other government agencies, Red Cross, USO, theatreless towns, hotels, clubs, camps, roadshow men, drive-in theatres, merchants' free shows, coin-operated machines, and private homes; schools, churches and charitable organizations; hospitals, sanatoria, homes of the aged or disabled and convents, and ships, trains and planes.

Furthermore, said the complaint, "There is a large demand for 16mm. feature films by the telecasting industry for purposes of television programs, since a large majority of telecasting stations in this country are equipped with apparatus for the telecasting of 16mm. films and not of 35mm. films."

The case was prepared by attorneys George H. Schueller and Leonard R. Posner, under Kramer's direction, with William C. Dixon, special assistant to the Attorney General, handling the Los Angeles end of the action.

Commenting on the case, Attorney General James P. McGranery stated: "This suit is filed as part of the continuing program of the Anti-trust Division to prevent businessmen and others from combining to place restrictions upon what members of the general public may see on their television sets."

Newell A. Clapp, Acting Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division, said: "Since World War II, 16mm. films have gained great significance for education and entertainment, especially for telecasting by television stations. They are less costly than standard 35mm. films and do not require expensive equipment or special safety precautions. According to the complaint, defendants have imposed arbitrary and unreasonable conditions upon the exhibitions of 16mm. feature films in hospitals, schools, churches and USO centers, and have prevented the use of these films on television. This suit seeks to prevent defendants from continuing their restrictive system of distributing these films."

"Sudden Fear"

(Kaufman Productions-RKO Radio)

A HIGH-POWERED MELODRAMA of love and evil design serves as the vehicle for Joan Crawford's latest screen appearance. Considerable cleverness and ingenuity went into the fashioning of the story and it beats upon the emotions relentlessly. Showmen can be sure it is the type of melodrama that will bring to the theatre those patrons who go only when the product is strong.

The persuasive performance of Miss Crawford as a successful playwright who falls in love with, and marries Jack Palance, a scheming actor, is fully matched by his characterization. He masters completely a role that ranges from the urbane to the monstrous. Gloria Grahame rounds out the romantic triangle as a girl friend of Palance who maps out with him an intricate plan to kill Miss Crawford so that he would inherit her fortune.

It is with sudden and heart-tearing fear that Miss Crawford learns from a dictaphone about Palance's relations with Miss Grahame and their ruthless conspiracy. Terror changes her from a loving wife to a retribution-bent creature.

Action and development in the screenplay by Lenore Coffee and Robert Smith is emphasized by pounding music and soundtrack devices. At times the screenplay resorts to obvious artifice in the interest of tension and excitement.

Miss Crawford devises a plan of counterattack whereby she would kill Palance and have the circumstantial evidence point to Miss Grahame as the murderess. At the last moment she realizes the senselessness of her plans and backs out. But by this time Palance turns upon her in full murderous pursuit to make a nerve-tingling climax. He pursues her violently in an automobile through twisting, desolate streets. The ending is ironic. Miss Grahame happens on the street, and thinking her to be Miss Crawford Palance runs her down in a hysterical rage and is himself killed in the accident.

Based on the story of the same name by Edna Sherry, it was produced by Joseph Kaufman and directed by David Miller.

Running time, 110 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

"You for Me"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A LOT OF HUMOROUS COMPLICATIONS of a formula nature are churned up in "You for Me." The picture moves along breezily and is pleasant to behold provided one is not too concerned with credulity.

Peter Lawford plays a wealthy young philanderer who is rushed to a hospital with buckshot wounds in an embarrassing place, the result of a hunting mishap. At the hospital there is introduced Gig Young, a surgeon, and Jane Greer, a nurse. Thus the foundation is set for the romantic triangle that ensues rather carefreely.

Lawford annually makes a heavy financial contribution to the support of the hospital and when he feels that he received indelicate treatment from Miss Greer, he proceeds to get her fired. When later he learns to know Miss Greer better he forthwith has her reinstated.

Presently Lawford decides to withdraw his contribution to the hospital in the light of the financial demands which his wife, who he is about to divorce, is making on him. And so at this point in the screenplay by William Roberts, Miss Greer finds herself in an unusual role, that of sweetening Lawford into continuing his contributions to the hospital. Since Miss Greer's boy friend, Young, is behind this strategy, a lot of embarrassing moments ensue.

All the frothy humor inherent in the situation is brought out under Don Weis' direction. As an added element of drama, there is an angle about Miss Greer's sister who gives birth to a baby who has a respiratory ailment, thus necessitating quick, emergency action.

The story ends as it begins, in a jocular vein. Lawford proves very noble and paves the way for Miss Greer to marry Young. Henry Berman produced.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

McGrath said he believed this was done to avert delay due to congested court calendars in the East. Although the offices of all but one defendant company are headquartered in New York, McGrath said companies were servable either there or here.

Asked if he had information as to the inception of the suit, and whether agitation for it might have been started by television interests, McGrath said he was completely uninformed but that it is invariable Justice Department policy to check thoroughly into all such matters, independently, before launching action.

Neither could McGrath explain why Paramount and Loew's were not among the defendants, again referring the question to Washington.

far as American distributors are concerned.

Of the amount unfrozen, $5,100,000 represents the yen that piled up to the credit of the companies during the 10-year operation in Japan of the MPEA. The other $1,400,000 is the remittance of "curent earnings," for the period from Jan. 1, 1952, to March 31, 1952. Since the first of this year, when MPEA discontinued operations in Japan, the distributors have been operating independently there.

Negotiations for the unfreezing of the $6,500,000 were conducted many months without fanfare. Since the MPEA began operations in Japan, the American companies spent large sums for operating costs and out-of-pocket expenses and for construction of exchange offices and other buildings.

TO PERSONS VERSED in the American tradition of government, which is based on respect for both individual rights and property rights, the new so-called "anti-trust" action brought by the prosecuting arm of the federal administration is a development of shocking import.

This action in which numerous of the industry's producing and distributing companies, together with one of the principal exhibitor associations, are made defendants is a piece of blatant and transparent injustice. Its political coloring is luminous.

The action is claimed to be based on the existence of an illegal conspiracy of the owners of copyrighted motion picture film under which, jointly with exhibitors, these owners have refused—believe it or not!—to make their films available for exhibition to "free merchant's shows, taverns, coin-operated machines and roadshowmen."

The fact that any such exhibitions involve the giving away of shows to which the established theatres charge an admission price has not deterred the Justice Department in this madcap adventure. The fact that any such exhibitions are designed to be merely come-ons in the sale to gullible members of a com-

US Trust Suit 'Outrages' Industry Here

Gov't Could Turn Up No Evidence Against Allied

The motion picture industry, "stunned and outraged" by the Government's anti-trust suit charging restrictions against the showing of 16mm. films on television and in other markets, wondered yesterday if the Department of Justice was attempting to lure it into economic disaster.

While attorneys for the individual defendants chose to reserve comment in their names until they had been served with the complaints—probably by today or tomorrow — their reaction to press reports of the suit was a mixture of amazement and anger that it was filed.

Meanwhile, the answer to why Theatre Owners of America was singled out as a co-conspirator turned up in Washington. Justice Depart-

DETROIT, July 23.—The controversial 10 per cent amusement tax proposed by Ann Arbor officials may legally be placed before the voters in the August 5 primary election, Circuit Judge Archie D. McDonald has ruled.

The theatre firm had filed suit against the city of Ann Arbor, asking an injunction to prevent the question from appearing on the ballot.

Butterfield had cited a state law prohibiting a municipality from submitting the same proposition on the ballot within two years of its defeat at the polls.

available, through Hollywood Television Service, a wholly-owned subsidiary, its pictures for television for the past 12 months. We now have 75 contracts with television stations, and we are serving approximately 40 markets out of the existing 63.

"We are making every effort to sell to the other 23. These 40 markets serve approximately 85 per cent of the present potential television audience. We cannot understand our being included in such purported conspiracy. No representative of the Department of Justice has visited Republic or made any effort to learn the facts from us in this matter."

Southern California Theatre Owners Association officers withheld formal comment pending their regular meeting next Monday, when the matter is expected to come up.

Off-the-record comment throughout the trade here varied somewhat, depending on individual interests, but was in substantial agreement that the Department of Justice did not initiate an investigation of this long-standing, marginal phase of industry operation without prompting by one or another individual or concern powerful in the television field.

George Schaefer, business agent of IATSE Projectionists Local No. 150, on being asked whether union operators would protest use of 16mm. prints in TV stations and by itinerent tent-show outfits, etc., said: "Sixteen or thirty-five—TV stations or theatre—all projection comes under our jurisdiction."

Indiana Allied

theatres would be ruined." They say experience has shown that stars regularly appearing on free TV cannot be sold successfully at theatre box-offices. The Indiana exhibitors ask, "How can justice and anti-trust laws of this country be served properly if an action is taken that builds up one industry, television, and destroys another, motion picture exhibitions?"

It will also be suggested to the Indiana Allied board of directors that the resources of the Indiana organization be offered to production to intercede in its behalf in the anti-trust case filed by the Department of Justice.

There is no doubt that a protest will be lodged by the Indiana Allied group with Attorney General McGranery protesting the Department of Justice action, and that follow-ups will be made to Senators Capehart and Jenner and the Indiana representatives. "It is the private feeling of exhibition in this traditionally Republican state that the Justice Department's action smacks of politics between television and the present Democratic Administration," said Rembusch.

ment officials there said they had "evidence" to support the naming of TOA but had none against Allied States Association. TOA was not included in the complaint as a defendant, however.

Neither were Paramount and Loew's included among the defendants, and for the same reason—"no evidence." Named as defendants were 20th Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, RKO Pictures, Republic, Columbia, Universal, Warner Brothers Distributing Corp., Republic Productions, Screen Gems, United World Films, Films, Inc., and Pictorial Films, Inc.

It was pointed out in the industry here that Paramount and Loew's did not operate 16mm. departments in the U. S. because they apparently did not regard the commodity as sufficiently profitable. On the other hand those of the defendants whose principle business is to service theatres with product also carried on 16mm. sales because they could find therein some measure of profit. Now, it was observed, the Department of Justice seems to be desirous of dictating to the defendant companies as to how they shall function and as to who their customers shall be.

Would Die Quickly

The nature of motion pictures is such that if television were supplied with film on equal terms with theatres the theatre business as the industry now knows it would die a quick death, some industry observers agreed. And if the producers are given only television and clubs and hotels to supply with film, the production industry will die quickly too since video advertisers cannot afford to pay enough for the product to keep producers going, it was stated.

The national TV market for a "top" feature film is only $25,000 currently, it was pointed out. On the other hand, theatre exhibition of a picture costing $1,000,000 can earn this cost and substantial profits for exhibitors and distributor.

Herman M. Levy, TOA general counsel, who was in New York yesterday, refused comment on the suit pending receipt of the government's complaint. He conferred on the action by telephone with Mitchell Wolfson, TOA president, in Miami.

from ignorance of the past and current practices of the industry, one distribution official contended.

It was pointed out that under current practices virtually all companies offer their films for sale to Army Post theatres, for instance, at the time of their general release, or even before general release. Although these films are on 35mm., 16mm. prints of the same films for showing to the Armed Services abroad are made and shipped as soon as possible, it was pointed out.

Added indignation was expressed by distribution executives when they recalled the industry's role during the war. They called attention to the fact that 43,000 prints of feature pictures and 33,000 prints of short subjects, were given away by the industry, without cost to the American taxpayer. These films, in addition to talent donated by stars, were used to entertain American Armed Forces throughout the world, it was pointed out.

cerning the status competitive bidding should hold in any system of arbitration that is agreed upon.

It was indicated that the exhibitor delegates were unanimous on the issue in question and that "some" of the distributor representatives agreed with them. The issue was said to be whether bidding should not be included among arbitrable matters (the exhibitors' position), or whether it should (the position taken by a number of the film companies).

Better Prospects

The new meetings face better prospects of success than did all previous exhibitor-distributor conferences on arbitration, it was reported by one representative of distribution, and this was interpreted to mean that the distributors have arrived at a unanimous viewpoint on bidding that coincides with that of exhibition.

Scheduled to be on hand when the meetings open August 4 are the following: From exhibition, Abram F. Myers, Wilbur Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution, Robert Perkins, Adolph Schimel, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers. Previous meetings were attended also by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., vice-president of the MPAA, and Henderson M. Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference.

The Continuations Committee adjourned abruptly on July 2 after four days of meetings marked by little progress. The group had been set up by the Arbitration Conference proper when the latter's delegates agreed after several days of meetings in June that such a committee could more effectively complete the analysis which was being made of the blueprint for a system.

"Les Miserables"

VICTOR HUGO'S immortal "Les Miserables" is again brought to the screen in this 20th Century-Fox production. It is obvious that a lot of tender care went into the recreation of this famous tale of social injustice, for the backgrounds appear to be authentic and the atmosphere convincing.

The cast is a competent one. Michael Rennie plays Jean Valjean who is sentenced to 10 years on a convict galley for the theft of a loaf of bread, while Robert Newton portrays police officer Javert who hounds the latter with inflexible persistence. Others in the cast are Debra Paget, a young girl whom Rennie subsequently adopts, Sylvia Sidney, her dissolute mother, and Cameron Mitchell, young revolutionist lover of Miss Paget.

Naturally the picture has strong popular appeal in the light of the story's literary reputation, its slashing action and the forceful, dramatic elements inherent in it. However, in terms of modern screen technique, there are times when the narrative seems touched with outmoded qualities.

The screenplay by Richard Murphy sticks pretty much to the outline of the original, with all the stormy chapters in Valjean's life portrayed, including his release from prison and his subsequent failure to report to the police. Valjean goes on to become a successful and loved citizen until his past, in the form of Javert, catches up with him. The consequences are pregnant with excitement, culminating in the famous flight through the sewers and the eventual suicide of Javert.

Fred Kohlmar as producer and Lewis Milestone as director combined their talents to make a highly interesting film. Running time, 104 minutes. General audience classification. For August release. MANDEL HERBSTMAN at least eight days of hearings in that month direct testimony on engineering and accounting phases of the hearings could be gotten out of the way.

A $3,000,000 suit was filed by Charles Chaplin here yesterday against National Broadcasting and columnist-radio commentator Hy Gardner in New York Federal Court. It was charged that the conversation pertaining to Chaplin was defamatory.

The last previous postponement of the hearings had brought the scheduled opening of the theatre television hearings to January 12, 1953.

The FCC order yesterday set October 20 as an opening date for hearing direct testimony only, and only on engineering and accounting phases. FCC further provided that these preliminary hearings could continue for as long as necessary to clear up direct testimony on the two phases, following which, the hearings would adjourn until January 12, the previously scheduled opening date, at which time all other designated matters and all cross-examination could be presented.

munity of merchandise and services, which usually are of low and tawdry quality, is also ignored.

Then there is that essential element of the complaint which has about it an odor of both mine-run politics and something that is politics at its very worst. This is the portion which asserts that as result of the alleged conspiracy of industry units, "the telecasting of the finer feature films to television audiences in the United States has been suppressed."

ALL OF this adds up, obviously, to such a sorry mess that its perpetrators needed some kind of a gimmick to make it even half-way palatable to the American public. This gimmick was hit upon in the scheme of tying up the whole complaint in a package labeled "Sixteen Millemeter Films." The Justice Department does not attack, at least not at this point, the right of the owners of thirty-five millemeter prints to refuse to license them to television, barrooms, juke box joints and the like. Its precious sense of justice has not yet seen fit to demand that producers of theatrical films cut both their own throats and that of their customers at one fell swoop.

Instead it just centers its complaint on the gimmick which some genius in the department must have discovered; namely, the sixteen millemeter film.

In its ignorance, or in its malice, the governmental agency has chosen to ignore the simple physical fact that a 16mm. print of a motion picture is nothing more or less than a narrower gauge print of the subject which usually, but not invariably, is made in the film width of 35mm. In justice and equity the producer of a film has exactly the same rights with respect to a 16mm. print of the subject he owns as he has in the case of a 35mm. print. A 16mm. print of a motion picture is capable of being just as destructive to the business of an established theatre, if run in random competition, as a 35mm. print.

The introduction of the 16mm. gimmick in this unhappy adventure is a perfect example of a red herring—an obvious attempt to divert and confuse a public which believes in fair play and common justice.

In this new adventure of the Department of Justice in which it is attempting to throw up for grabs the rights of the organized industry the voice of Jacob is heard. But a close look discloses the hands of Esau.

Act in Showings Of 'Free Movies'

DETROIT, July 23.—Action has been started here against the showing of "free movies" in the Northern Michigan resort area. Joseph Deebs, U. S. District Attorney in Grand Rapids, has referred the matter to Harry Sunball, special agent in charge of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau in Detroit.

Exhibitors have complained of unscrupulous "free movie" operators who "pass the hat" to people attending the shows, stating that donations will help keep the "free movies" in operation. The U. S. is losing a substantial amount of tax revenue since these operators do not keep records of collections for income tax and do not collect Federal admission taxes, it was said.

Allied Theatres of Michigan started the movement to fight and correct the situation.

Transfer US Media Setup on Aug. 15

The transfer of the Federal Government's Information Media Guarantee Program from the Mutual Security Agency to the State Department will be completed on August 15, Gilbert Simon, who is in charge of the program, reported here.

Simon explained that the program, which guarantees American film producers revenue on pictures sent to Europe for the ideological war with Soviet Russia, was transferred to State on July 1 under a Presidential order signed June 15. However, he added, the program was re-delegated meanwhile to MSA for administrative purposes pending the completion of transfer details.

By August 1, Simon said, the program will have $500,000 to cover distribution of films in Yugoslavia principally. The industry's contract with that country will terminate on that date and will be subject to renewal. A maximum of $10,000,000 was allocated to the program, which also covers distribution of books, magazines, etc., at the beginning of this year.

TO PERSONS VERSED in the American tradition of government, which is based on respect for both individual rights and property rights, the new so-called "anti-trust" action brought by the prosecuting arm of the federal administration is a development of shocking import.

This action in which numerous of the industry's producing and distributing companies, together with one of the principal exhibitor associations, are made defendants is a piece of blatant and transparent injustice. Its political coloring is luminous.

The action is claimed to be based on the existence of an illegal conspiracy of the owners of copyrighted motion picture film under which, jointly with exhibitors, these owners have refused—believe it or not!—to make their films available for exhibition to "free merchant's shows, taverns, coin-operated machines and roadshowmen."

The fact that any such exhibitions involve the giving away of shows to which the established theatres charge an admission price has not deterred the Justice Department in this madcap adventure. The fact that any such exhibitions are designed to be merely come-ons in the sale to gullible members of a com-

US Trust Suit 'Outrages' Industry Here

Gov't Could Turn Up No Evidence Against Allied

The motion picture industry, "stunned and outraged" by the Government's anti-trust suit charging restrictions against the showing of 16mm. films on television and in other markets, wondered yesterday if the Department of Justice was attempting to lure it into economic disaster.

While attorneys for the individual defendants chose to reserve comment in their names until they had been served with the complaints—probably by today or tomorrow — their reaction to press reports of the suit was a mixture of amazement and anger that it was filed.

Meanwhile, the answer to why Theatre Owners of America was singled out as a co-conspirator turned up in Washington. Justice Depart-

DETROIT, July 23.—The controversial 10 per cent amusement tax proposed by Ann Arbor officials may legally be placed before the voters in the August 5 primary election, Circuit Judge Archie D. McDonald has ruled.

available, through Hollywood Television Service, a wholly-owned subsidiary, its pictures for television for the past 12 months. We now have 75 contracts with television stations, and we are serving approximately 40 markets out of the existing 63.

"We are making every effort to sell to the other 23. These 40 markets serve approximately 85 per cent of the present potential television audience. We cannot understand our being included in such purported conspiracy. No representative of the Department of Justice has visited Republic or made any effort to learn the facts from us in this matter."

Southern California Theatre Owners Association officers withheld formal comment pending their regular meeting next Monday, when the matter is expected to come up.

Off-the-record comment throughout the trade here varied somewhat, depending on individual interests, but was in substantial agreement that the Department of Justice did not initiate an investigation of this long-standing, marginal phase of industry operation without prompting by one or another individual or concern powerful in the television field.

George Schaefer, business agent of IATSE Projectionists Local No. 150, on being asked whether union operators would protest use of 16mm. prints in TV stations and by itinerent tent-show outfits, etc., said: "Sixteen or thirty-five—TV stations or theatre—all projection comes under our jurisdiction."

Indiana Allied

theatres would be ruined." They say experience has shown that stars regularly appearing on free TV cannot be sold successfully at theatre box-offices. The Indiana exhibitors ask, "How can justice and anti-trust laws of this country be served properly if an action is taken that builds up one industry, television, and destroys another, motion picture exhibitions?"

It will also be suggested to the Indiana Allied board of directors that the resources of the Indiana organization be offered to production to intercede in its behalf in the anti-trust case filed by the Department of Justice.

There is no doubt that a protest will be lodged by the Indiana Allied group with Attorney General McGranery protesting the Department of Justice action, and that follow-ups will be made to Senators Capehart and Jenner and the Indiana representatives. "It is the private feeling of exhibition in this traditionally Republican state that the Justice Department's action smacks of politics between television and the present Democratic Administration," said Rembusch.

ment officials there said they had "evidence" to support the naming of TOA but had none against Allied States Association. TOA was not included in the complaint as a defendant, however.

Neither were Paramount and Loew's included among the defendants, and for the same reason—"no evidence." Named as defendants were 20th Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, RKO Pictures, Republic, Columbia, Universal, Warner Brothers Distributing Corp., Republic Productions, Screen Gems, United World Films, Films, Inc., and Pictorial Films, Inc.

It was pointed out in the industry here that Paramount and Loew's did not operate 16mm. departments in the U. S. because they apparently did not regard the commodity as sufficiently profitable. On the other hand those of the defendants whose principle business is to service theatres with product also carried on 16mm. sales because they could find therein some measure of profit. Now, it was observed, the Department of Justice seems to be desirous of dictating to the defendant companies as to how they shall function and as to who their customers shall be.

Would Die Quickly

The nature of motion pictures is such that if television were supplied with film on equal terms with theatres the theatre business as the industry now knows it would die a quick death, some industry observers agreed. And if the producers are given only television and clubs and hotels to supply with film, the production industry will die quickly too since video advertisers cannot afford to pay enough for the product to keep producers going, it was stated.

The national TV market for a "top" feature film is only $25,000 currently, it was pointed out. On the other hand, theatre exhibition of a picture costing $1,000,000 can earn this cost and substantial profits for exhibitors and distributor.

Herman M. Levy, TOA general counsel, who was in New York yesterday, refused comment on the suit pending receipt of the government's complaint. He conferred on the action by telephone with Mitchell Wolfson, TOA president, in Miami.

Army, Navy Needs

from ignorance of the past and current practices of the industry, one distribution official contended.

It was pointed out that under current practices virtually all companies offer their films for sale to Army Post theatres, for instance, at the time of their general release, or even before general release. Although these films are on 35mm., 16mm. prints of the same films for showing to the Armed Services abroad are made and shipped as soon as possible, it was pointed out.

Added indignation was expressed by distribution executives when they recalled the industry's role during the war. They called attention to the fact that 43,000 prints of feature pictures and 33,000 prints of short subjects, were given away by the industry, without cost to the American taxpayer. These films, in addition to talent donated by stars, were used to entertain American Armed Forces throughout the world, it was pointed out.

cerning the status competitive bidding should hold in any system of arbitration that is agreed upon.

It was indicated that the exhibitor delegates were unanimous on the issue in question and that "some" of the distributor representatives agreed with them. The issue was said to be whether bidding should not be included among arbitrable matters (the exhibitors' position), or whether it should (the position taken by a number of the film companies).

Better Prospects

The new meetings face better prospects of success than did all previous exhibitor-distributor conferences on arbitration, it was reported by one representative of distribution, and this was interpreted to mean that the distributors have arrived at a unanimous viewpoint on bidding that coincides with that of exhibition.

Scheduled to be on hand when the meetings open August 4 are the following: From exhibition, Abram F. Myers, Wilbur Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution, Robert Perkins, Adolph Schimel, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers. Previous meetings were attended also by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., vice-president of the MPAA, and Henderson M. Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference.

The Continuations Committee adjourned abruptly on July 2 after four days of meetings marked by little progress. The group had been set up by the Arbitration Conference proper when the latter's delegates agreed after several days of meetings in June that such a committee could more effectively complete the analysis which was being made of the blueprint for a system.

"Les Miserables"

VICTOR HUGO'S immortal "Les Miserables" is again brought to the screen in this 20th Century-Fox production. It is obvious that a lot of tender care went into the recreation of this famous tale of social injustice, for the backgrounds appear to be authentic and the atmosphere convincing.

The cast is a competent one. Michael Rennie plays Jean Valjean who is sentenced to 10 years on a convict galley for the theft of a loaf of bread, while Robert Newton portrays police officer Javert who hounds the latter with inflexible persistence. Others in the cast are Debra Paget, a young girl whom Rennie subsequently adopts, Sylvia Sidney, her dissolute mother, and Cameron Mitchell, young revolutionist lover of Miss Paget.

Naturally the picture has strong popular appeal in the light of the story's literary reputation, its slashing action and the forceful, dramatic elements inherent in it. However, in terms of modern screen technique, there are times when the narrative seems touched with outmoded qualities.

The screenplay by Richard Murphy sticks pretty much to the outline of the original, with all the stormy chapters in Valjean's life portrayed, including his release from prison and his subsequent failure to report to the police. Valjean goes on to become a successful and loved citizen until his past, in the form of Javert, catches up with him. The consequences are pregnant with excitement, culminating in the famous flight through the sewers and the eventual suicide of Javert.

Fred Kohlmar as producer and Lewis Milestone as director combined their talents to make a highly interesting film. Running time, 104 minutes. General audience classification. For August release. MANDEL HERBSTMAN

Chaplin Files Suit

A $3,000,000 suit was filed by Charles Chaplin here yesterday against National Broadcasting and columnist-radio commentator Hy Gardner in New York Federal Court. The suit, in addition to seeking damages, also asks the court to enjoin the defendants from using a tape recorded conversation between Gardner and Chaplin's butler over the air. It was charged that the conversation pertaining to Chaplin was defamatory.

The last previous postponement of the hearings had brought the scheduled opening of the theatre television hearings to January 12, 1953.

The FCC order yesterday set October 20 as an opening date for hearing direct testimony only, and only on engineering and accounting phases. FCC further provided that these preliminary hearings could continue for as long as necessary to clear up direct testimony on the two phases, following which, the hearings would adjourn until January 12, the previously scheduled opening date, at which time all other designated matters and all cross-examination could be presented.

munity of merchandise and services, which usually are of low and tawdry quality, is also ignored.

Then there is that essential element of the complaint which has about it an odor of both mine-run politics and something that is politics at its very worst. This is the portion which asserts that as result of the alleged conspiracy of industry units, "the telecasting of the finer feature films to television audiences in the United States has been suppressed."

ALL OF this adds up, obviously, to such a sorry mess that its perpetrators needed some kind of a gimmick to make it even half-way palatable to the American public. This gimmick was hit upon in the scheme of tying up the whole complaint in a package labeled "Sixteen Millemeter Films." The Justice Department does not attack, at least not at this point, the right of the owners of thirty-five millemeter prints to refuse to license them to television, barrooms, juke box joints and the like. Its precious sense of justice has not yet seen fit to demand that producers of theatrical films cut both their own throats and that of their customers at one fell swoop.

Instead it just centers its complaint on the gimmick which some genius in the department must have discovered; namely, the sixteen millemeter film.

In its ignorance, or in its malice, the governmental agency has chosen to ignore the simple physical fact that a 16mm. print of a motion picture is nothing more or less than a narrower gauge print of the subject which usually, but not invariably, is made in the film width of 35mm. In justice and equity the producer of a film has exactly the same rights with respect to a 16mm. print of the subject he owns as he has in the case of a 35mm. print. A 16mm. print of a motion picture is capable of being just as destructive to the business of an established theatre, if run in random competition, as a 35mm. print.

The introduction of the 16mm. gimmick in this unhappy adventure is a perfect example of a red herring—an obvious attempt to divert and confuse a public which believes in fair play and common justice.

In this new adventure of the Department of Justice in which it is attempting to throw up for grabs the rights of the organized industry the voice of Jacob is heard. But a close look discloses the hands of Esau.

Act in Showings Of 'Free Movies'

DETROIT, July 23.—Action has been started here against the showing of "free movies" in the Northern Michigan resort area. Joseph Deebs, U. S. District Attorney in Grand Rapids, has referred the matter to Harry Sunball, special agent in charge of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau in Detroit.

Exhibitors have complained of unscrupulous "free movie" operators who "pass the hat" to people attending the shows, stating that donations will help keep the "free movies" in operation. The U. S. is losing a substantial amount of tax revenue since these operators do not keep records of collections for income tax and do not collect Federal admission taxes, it was said.

Allied Theatres of Michigan started the movement to fight and correct the situation.

Transfer US Media Setup on Aug. 15

The transfer of the Federal Government's Information Media Guarantee Program from the Mutual Security Agency to the State Department will be completed on August 15, Gilbert Simon, who is in charge of the program, reported here.

Simon explained that the program, which guarantees American film producers revenue on pictures sent to Europe for the ideological war with Soviet Russia, was transferred to State on July 1 under a Presidential order signed June 15. However, he added, the program was re-delegated meanwhile to MSA for administrative purposes pending the completion of transfer details.

By August 1, Simon said, the program will have $500,000 to cover distribution of films in Yugoslavia principally. The industry's contract with that country will terminate on that date and will be subject to renewal. A maximum of $10,000,000 was allocated to the program, which also covers distribution of books, magazines, etc., at the beginning of this year.

Plea on Taxes To Democrats Not Heeded

Platform Does Not Call For Review of 20% Tax

The Democratic Party has failed to include a plank in its platform calling for a review of the 20 per cent Federal admission tax as requested by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York.

The tax plank adopted at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago made no mention of Federal excise taxes. The plank, under the heading of taxes, however, stated in part, "We believe in fair and equitable taxation. . . . As rapidly as defense requirements permit we favor reducing taxes. . . . But we will not imperil our nation's security by making reckless promises to reduce taxes."

Brandt's plea was addressed to Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Representative Emanuel Celler, both of

'Unfair' 16mm. Competition Scored by TOA In Report

The 16mm. committee of the Theatre Owners of America, reported to the organiation's convention in New York last September that there were certain parts of the country "where the problem of unfair competition from 16mm. film continues to grow, and, in some instances, is entirely out of control."

This was brought out yesterday following the filing of the Department of Justice suit naming TOA a co-conspirator in the anti-trust action against 12 distributors of 16mm. product because it had "evidence" against the exhibitor organization.

The TOA committee report continued: "A few of the distributors have exercised some supervision and control. Much more supervision and control, however, by all companies are Defendants in the government's anti-trust suit to force the sales of 16mm. films to television and other outlets in competition to theatres yesterday arrived at the conclusion that the action stemmed from an extensive examination of distributor 16mm. contracts conducted last fall by the Department of Justice.

The investigation, unattended by publicity, gave no hint to the companies that the government was interested in the extent to which pictures were sold for telecasting. In fact, according to one sales executive, the investigators made no inquiry whatever into 16mm., TV contracts.

That TV was "overlooked" in the Justice Department investigation was

Myers, O'Donnell, Cole Hit Government's 16mm. Action

Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, in Washington, and Robert J. O'Donnell and Col. H. A. Cole, Texas Council of Motion Picture Organizations leaders, in Dallas, have blasted the Department of Justice's anti-trust suit to force the sale of 16mm. films to TV and other outlets in competition to theatres.

O'Donnell, in a telegram to Attorney-General James McGranery, assailed the suit as "the most preposterous, vicious, insidious, and rank discriminatory action ever instigated against free enterprise."

A special meeting in Dallas among leaders of distribution and exhibition in the Texas territory to plan further action in behalf of the defendant film companies has been scheduled by O'Donnell for the first of next week.

"What have we done to deserve a movement of this kind?" Cole asked McGranery in a wire. "It is tough enough on our industry, just now fighting for survival from decreasing box-office, increasing expenses of operation and a 20 per cent gross admission tax, without having our government take sides against us, moving to show for free the only stock we have on our shelves."

"Shocked and indignant" over the suit, Myers had this also to say: "Unless the defendant companies make a spirited defense to the action and take steps to neutralize the influence of the TV representatives in Washington, exhibitors will certainly take to the warpath and exhaust all remedies available, including appeals to committees of Congress. Eighteen thousand theatres are not going to be destroyed at the whim of any bureaucrat."

testified to on Wednesday by Herbert J. Yates, Republic president, who, as the first to issue formal comment on the suit, declared that "No representative of the Department of Justice has visited Republic or made any effort to learn the facts from us in this matter." Yates' statement assailing the suit made no reference to government complaints concerning the sale of 16 mm. product to other outlets. He cited the large number of TV film contracts held by Republic and the fact that the company was serving 40 TV markets.

The defendants were more or less certain that the charges relating to television were inspired by teleision interests.

The defendants were served with the complaints Wednesday and yesterday on the Coast. The civil action was filed Tuesday in Federal District Court in Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, the government's citation of the Theatre Owners of America as a co-conspirator, although not as a defendant, caused industry observers to recall that the report of the organization's 16mm. committee, headed by Walter Morris of Knoxville, Tenn., informed the annual TOA convention in New York last September that "The evil resulting from the unfair use of 16mm. is attacking the entire 35mm. industry."

'Unfair' 16mm.

needed and we hope that this coming year we will accomplish that progress.

"The evils resulting from the unfair use of 16mm. is attacking the entire 35mm. industry. In one particular area, during certain times of the year, there are as many as 5,000 persons a night furnished with free motion picture entertainment in hotels. Every one of these hotels is within easy walking distance of 35mm. theatres and those theatres, for the most part, are showing pictures under percentage terms. It is therefore obvious that the continued use of 16mm. prints in the area in question is adversely affecting the revenue not only of the exhibitors, but of distributors as well.

"We hope," the report concluded, "that the immediate future will approach the bringing to an end of the licensing of 16mm. film in unfair competition with 35mm. film. Exhibitors must be vigilant in reporting offenses, through documented reports, to the TOA 16mm. committee. These will be processed immediately and followed through to a conclusion with the respective offending companies."

Joins Fight

Brandt, ITOA president, described the purpose of the suit as destruction of a free market and the motion picture industry.

Brandt's wire stated: "The civil anti-trust suit instituted in Los Angeles against major film companies to compel them to sell their theatrical films to television is, in our opinion, ill-advised and contrary to the American principle of free enterprise because the televised showing of a theatrical feature film on television destroys its commercial value for theatrical exhibition—the normal market for which the film was originally produced.

"This suit furnishes tangible evidence of the misleading attitude that has been so ingeniously generated in important governmental circles and in the public mind

"Self-seeking forces are continually arousing the public to believe that it is being duped by subtly disseminating the false idea that anything and everything capable of being transmitted over the airwaves should fall within the public domain without regard to property rights.

"These interests are constantly appealing to the selfish instincts of many people to see or get valuable properties gratis in order to attain their own selfish ends.

"It is our firm conviction that the Department of Justice has been unwittingly hoodwinked into serving as a front for these interests. . . ."

Cut-Rate Transportation Promotion Benefits Kansas City Box-Offices

Kansas City, July 24.—All first-runs here, the Paramount, Midland, RKO Missouri and Fox Midwest first-runs have included in their display advertisements notice of a new weekend street car and bus fare privilege by which five persons pay only five cents per ride when one of the five holds a weekly permit card. The card costs $1.25 and the holder pays a nickel a ride by showing it.

With an eye toward a box-office business promotion, first-run managers Burkhardt of the Midland, Joffee of Fox Midwest's Tower and Lyon of Paramount worked with the transit company to secure the new privilege. The regular fare without a permit card is 20 cents.

From Saturday at 2:00 P.M. to Sunday midnight, five persons with one permit card pay a total of 50 cents to and from their destination, such as to theatres.

The weekend special family fare with the permit card provides that a person holding a card may take one adult and up to three minors at five cents each—not four adults in addition to himself. Fares for children under 12 continue to be five cents.

Exhibitors say patronage has definitely increased, with many parties of four and five over the wekend because of the transportation saving. The theatres run trailers telling of the special fares.

Review

"Captain Pirate"

(Columbia Pictures)

SUFFICIENT SWORDPLAY, hand-to-hand scuffling and sea battles are contained in this film to please action fans. The color by Technicolor adds to the entertainment of the picture, which is based upon Rafael Sabatini's novel, "Captain Blood Returns."

The plot situation, however, is rather contrived and runs along formula lines. Those who like their film-fare simple, yet action-packed and colorful, should be the logical patrons for "Captain Pirate."

The setting of the film is in the year 1690, when Captain Blood, played by Louis Hayward, has retired to a plantation in the West Indies following his pardon for his daring feats of piracy against Spanish ships. Hayward is about to marry the beautiful Dona Isabela de Sotomayor, played by Patricia Medina, when trouble besets him.

Hayward is falsely accused of resuming his acts of piracy and imprisoned. His confinement ends when his former cohorts rescue him and all join under the banner of the Jolly Roger to find the real culprit. The action-laden scenes which ensue lead to the disclosure of the leader of the nefarious band, Captain Hilary Evans, played by John Sutton.

And, to be sure, the fair lady, Patricia Medina, is rescued from the clutches of Sutton. The fade-out is the impending marriage of the principals.

Harry Joe Brown produced, while Ralph Murphy directed, from the screenplay by Robert Libott, Frank Burt and John Meredyth Lucas. Others in the cast include Charles Irwin, George Givot, Rex Evans and Ted de Corsia.

Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Says Fans' Interest In Films Increases

HOLLYWOOD, July 24.—Public interest in pictures, as reflected in newsstand sales of fan magazines, has increased rather than declined in comparison with previous periods, Irving Manheimer, chairman of the executive committee of MacFadden Publications and president of MacFadden Publications International, declared here before returning to New York.

During his stay here, Manheimer visited with heads of all major studios and reported to them that what the film-going public wants most is new faces on the screen. He said, "Magazine publishers have an immediate and accurate index to the public's interest in this respect because they can see the newsstand sales fluctuate from month to month in accordance with the emphasis on new players."

Manheimer stated that he will return to Hollywood at frequent intervals to maintain a close liaison with studio heads on the relation of films and fan magazines to the public.

Attendance Normal Or Better in Many Places

National political conventions on home television, especially in the midst of hot weather, aids attendance in theatres in many areas and in most other sections has no effect on the box-office. Those are the conclusions of circuit executives here—conclusions bolstered by reports from the field—following the week-long activities of the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

United Paramount Theatres, which is currently collating statistical material on the effects of both the Republican and Democratic conventions, reported that business during the political conclaves was just as good or perhaps even better than usual. Similar experiences were reported by Loew's, RKO Theatres, Warners, and others.

Among the few areas in the country

Aid of Local Merchants Sought to Halt Free Shows

Detroit, July 27.—More than 40 Northern Michigan exhibitors held a meeting at Traverse City, in connection with the showings of "free movies" which have been plaguing independent exhibitors in the resort areas in Michigan, and a move was launched to obtain the aid of local merchants to halt the practice.

Among those present were Ed Stuckey, of Butterfield Theaters; Carl Waters, United World Films, Chicago; Clive Waxman, Waxman Circuit, Grand Rapids; Carl Buermele, General Theater Service, Detroit, and Ernest Conlon, executive secretary of Allied of Michigan. The meeting was held under the direction of L. O. Griffin of Manton and Lake City, Michigan.

Exhibitors planned to appeal to the civic mindedness of merchants in their respective towns stressing the importance of permanent motion picture houses to the town. Merchants will be asked to ignore operators who request donations to be able to show "free movies." In return the owners

"What Price Glory"

[Twentieth Century-Fox]

HAD HOLLYWOOD, during its prevailing tendency to remake some of the financially successful pictures of yore, overlooked "What Price Glory," a singular mistake would have been made. Any exhibitor with an eye for gilt-edged product will agree with this after he witnesses the performance of James Cagney and Dan Dailey in 20th Century-Fox's swaggering, boisterous, hilarious recreation of the blistering feud on which the now immortal Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirt rode through the horror and mire of the first World War.

When the original picture of this title, starring Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen, made its appearance in the late twenties, the filmgoing population was thoroughly convulsed over the cross-fire of wisecracks and dirty looks that mingled with flying shrapnel to make the silent screen sizzle. And box-office revenue soared in consequence.

A like performance, in terms of both audience enjoyment and earning prowess, is promised by the new "What Price Glory," which tells the same tale in the same setting, but with the added advantages of color by Technicolor and, of course, sound. This version of the Maxwell Anderson-Laurence Stallings play bids fair to topple many a theatre's existing record for grosses.

Industry May Ask Solons to Fight US Suit

Say Congressmen Would See 'Injustice' of It

The belief was more or less widespread in the industry here at the weekend that the defendants in the government's 16mm. anti-trust suit would attempt to persuade Congressmen and perhaps Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, and other Federal officials, of the "injustice" of the action before answers to it are filed in U. S. District Court in Los Angeles.

It was expected that the Federal officials would be contacted personally. Confidence was expressed that it probably would not be too difficult to convince them that the suit would ruin the industry and hence was unjust. It was hoped that these officials then might intercede with the Justice Department on the industry's behalf.

Meanwhile, attorneys for most of

Rule Tallahassee Tax Legal, Valid

TALLAHASSEE, July 27.—Pensacola's amusement tax is legal and valid security for a $700,000 municipal bond issue, the Florida State Supreme Court has ruled, reversing itself.

The high tribunal said that on a rehearing it had decided to affirm validation of the bond issue to finance construction of a city auditorium. Paramount-Gulf Theatres challenged the validity of the bond issue, contending that the amusement tax which was pledged to pay off the bonds was illegal.

Quota Defaulters Are Hit Again in U.K. Commons

By PETER BURNUP

LONDON, July 27.—Debating in the House of Commons, Laborite Stephen T. Swingler reiterated previous arguments that improper "interested parties" participate in the Films Council discussions of alleged quota violations. He also criticized the Board of Trade for not prosecuting Metro's Empire Theatre for quota violations.

Labor member Tom O'Brien of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes, however, seized the opportunity to declare that criticism of the Empire is part of a Communist engineered attack on the American company designed to promote Communist attacks on the United States.

O'Brien continued that Swingler and his associates were "advised by malicious sources." O'Brien said that he objected to suggestions that the Film Council, of which he and other M. P.'s were members, was a body of conspirators out to break the law.

Peter Thorneycroft, BOT president, after taking the Council's advice, took the view that prosecution of the Empire was unjustified. He said he was looking into other quota cases and where he thought prosecution was likely to succeed it was launched.

1st Educational TV Permits to States

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The Federal Communications Commission, despite dissent by Commissioners Hyde and Jones, awarded the first four educational television permits to State-supported institutions.

The dissent was based on the argument that since these institutions would have to go to their legislatures for appropriations, they did not at present meet the financial requirements. Licenses went to Kansas State College of Agriculture at Manhattan, and to the New York State Board of Regents for three educational TV stations to be located in Albany, Buffalo and Rochester.

'Kong' Opens Here at 132 Houses Aug. 8-15

"King Kong" will play simultaneously in 132 theatres of greater New York in mid-August, RKO Radio reported here at the weekend.

Preceded by an intensive campaign over TV stations WNBT and WPIX, "King Kong" will bow into RKO's Palace and Albee theatres on August 8. Between August 12 and 15 130 other theatres in the Metropolitan area will feature the production.

RKO to Reissue Duals

RKO Radio will re-release two dual combinations in August and September. The first set is "Look Who's Laughing" and "Too Many Girls." The second is "Annie Oakley" and "Allegheny Uprising."

20,000 and a comparatively small engineering concern, Gerrard Industries, another 53,800 shares.

Over the last eight years British Technicolor's profits have climbed from around £100,000 to £522,000, the latter figure exceeding the company's nominal capital. Dividends have risen from five per cent in 1944 to the current 22½ per cent.

Plans in Early Stages

Refinancing plans are in their early stages and it is understood that the final form of the operation has yet to be decided. It is reliably learned however that under consideration is a plan whereby present shareholders will receive one "ploughshare" for every two shares held and all of the then £1 shares will be split into five-shilling units. A further proposal is that a considerable volume of the British-held five-shilling "plough-shares" be placed on the London Stock Exchange at around 10 shillings per share. The American parent company, it is stated, will retain its controlling shares in the British concern.

160 Lined Up to Aid Tax Campaign

Exhibitors willing to serve on state committees in the industry's campaign for the repeal of the 20 per cent admission tax reached a total of 160 at the weekend when two more acceptances were received by Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the national tax repeal campaign committee.

Latest to join are Morris Loewenstein of Oklahoma City and Joe Floyd of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

CHICAGO, July 27.—The government has filed tax liens against Abraham Teitelbaum; his ex-partner, Paul R. Simons, and their wives, in the sale of the Fine Arts Building, sold to Arnold Schwartz at auction last week, to insure satisfaction of $406,666 in income taxes owed by the Teitelbaums and Simons's for the years 1942 through 1947.

The liens must be satisfied before the title is transferred to Schwartz. The Fine Arts Building houses the Studebaker, now a television audience studio, and the World Playhouse, a first-run art theatre.

* Pictures featured in M. P. Daily advertising during past 6 weeks.

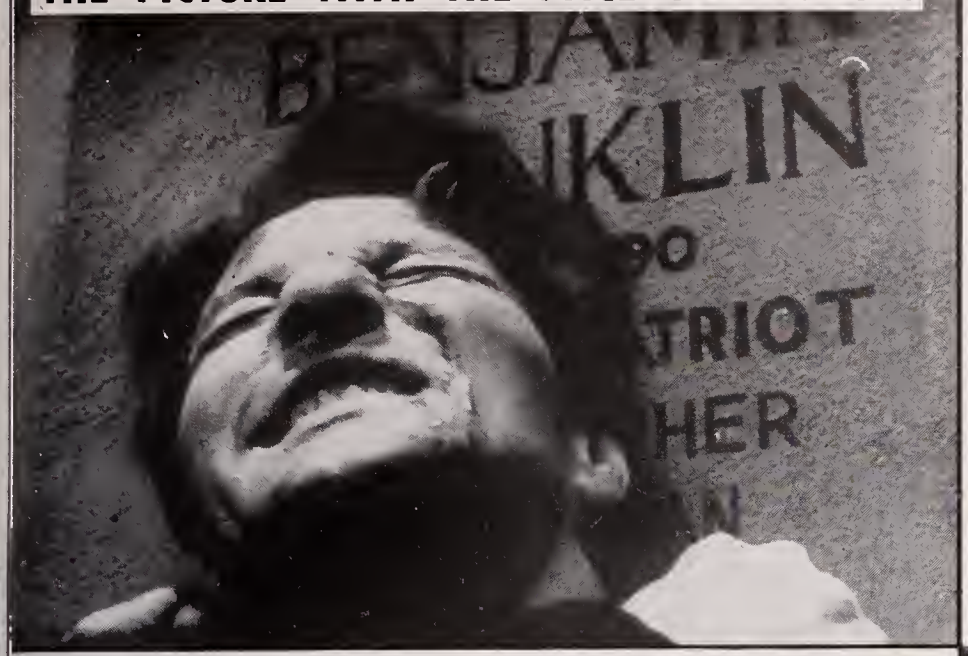
The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.



Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

that reported its box-office off because of the competition of the Democratic convention on home TV was Kansas City. Favorable box-office field reports were received from Boston, Baltimore, Cincinnati, New Orleans, and many other places.

Boston theatre business on the whole was said to be better during the Democratic convention than the Republican's. That situation was even true of districts which were heavily Democratic. Theatremen are of the opinion that when home television offers such very limited and often monotonous programming, people go out of their homes to a motion picture and an air-conditioned theatre.

Credit Cooling Systems

In Baltimore, cooling systems in theatres are credited with thumping the competition of the Democratic convention on home TV. Many theatremen minimized the influence of conventions on the box-office.

In Kansas City, a reduction in theatre attendance in the first few days of the Democratic convention, was observed.

Cincinnati reported that televising the Democratic convention appeared to help rather than hinder theatre business. Hot, humid weather, plus the cancellation of regular television shows and the monotony of some convention proceedings caused many television viewers to seek recreation in theatres.

Most New Orleans theatremen not only reported that the convention did not hurt business, but rather that business was better.

A 30 per cent drop in theatre attendance was reported by half of Memphis' first run houses as a result of the convention. The other half reported business holding up as well as a week ago but they admitted they had better pictures this week. A survey showed that the loss was about the same as during the Republican convention.

$7,000 for 'High Noon'

Stanley Kramer's "High Noon," starring Gary Cooper, at the Mayfair Theater in New York, is understood to have racked up the biggest opening day gross for any United Artists picture to play the Brandt Broadway showcase, grossing $7,000.

'Dreamboat' Scores

The biggest opening day's gross—$15,000—in a year was recorded by 20th Century-Fox's "Dreamboat" on Friday at the Roxy Theatre here, David T. Katz, executive director, announced at the weekend. The comedy was said to have exceeded totals scored by "With a Song in My Heart," "5 Fingers," and "Phone Call from a Stranger," playing the New York showcase earlier this year.

"What Price Glory"

Henry Ephron's screenplay, "What Price Glory," while it can coax a tear as well as evoke roars of laughter, never defers to mawkishness in its eying of the effects of war on all makes of American men, whether battle-seasoned or not. But at the same time it is not a probing picture, preferring rather to dwell for the most part on the surface comic aspects of the fighting and the waiting in France experienced by the early-bird Marines. Yet Cagney, as the indestructible Captain Flagg, observes in the final sequence that fighting has come to be "a kind of religion" a duty from which the soldier cannot tear himself.

THE comedy department, which occupies about 80 per cent of the picture, is loaded with everything from slapstick to stinging repartee. It centers mainly around the rivalry between Cagney and Dailey for the love of Charmaine, the French innkeeper's daughter, whom Corinne Calvet portrays with wide-eyed charm and engaging sauciness. Plotless by common standards, the story puts the hard-drinking, frenetic pair of Marines in successive sequences of feuding over Charmaine, who loves them both, would gladly marry either one, plays one against the other, and almost has Dailey saying "I do" in a "shotgun" wedding only to see him wiggle out of it by answering a call to battle. All the time, Cagney and Dailey, who incidentally give their familiar histronic mannerisms full play throughout, exchange verbal and physical punishment that will keep the customers roaring with laughter. And contemptuous as they are of each other as men, Dailey's Sergeant Quirt and Cagney's Captain Flagg never fail when the need arises to express their admiration for each other as soldiers.

Supporting this welter of comedy and its undercurrents of pathos, but always overshadowed by the three stars, are capable performers William Demarest, Craig Hill, Robert Wagner, Marisa Pavan, Casey Adams, James Gleason, Wally Vernon, Henri Letondal and a long string of others.

Here and there Miss Calvet, Miss Pavan and soldier choruses break out in song, the numbers including "My Love, My Life," and "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary."

A television set isn't going to mean too much when "What Price Glory" is playing at an entertainment seeker's favorite theatre. You can bet on that!

Running time, 111 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

sions due to what is believed to be a high interest in the match. The contender to the title, held by Jersey Joe Walcott, will be the winner of tonight's scheduled Matthews-Marciano bout at the Yankee Stadium.

Guarantee at Issue

The chances of TNT getting the title bout, tentatively slated by the IBC for a date in September, is considered greater in some quarters if Marciano wins tonight's 10-round match. It was Jack Hurley, Matthews' manager, who virtually killed the attempt to televise tonight's bout in theatres. Hurley sought a greater guarantee from theatres than was procured for the Robinson-Maxim fight. It was the price that led TNT and TV-equipped theatres to shy away.

tween Einfeld and executives of the company's international division, as well as European theatremen. The chief topic under discussion was the setting of plans for the fall global premiere of Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," to be staged simultaneously in capital cities of Europe, South America and Africa.

Advertising - publicity - exploitation campaigns were also formulated for "What Price Glory," "Les Miserables," "Lure of the Wilderness," "Don't Bother to Knock," and "Way of a Gaucho."

Showmanship drives were charted by Einfeld with Fritz Micoucci, Manager for Italy, in Rome; Robert Krier, German manager, in Munich, and Karl Knust, Holland manager, in Amsterdam.

Conferences in Paris between the vice-president and Albert Cornfield, 20th Century-Fox's managing director for Europe; Giulio Ascarelli, publicity director for the Continent, and French exhibitors rounded out Einfeld's European visit.

"Lost in Alaska"

(Universal-International)

BUD ABBOTT AND LOU COSTELLO find themselves battling the icy elements away up North in "Lost in Alaska." The picture churns up a lot of comic energy and rates very well with predecessors in the series. It will easily please the team's fans.

The cast is rounded out by Mitzi Green, who, as a saloon entertainer, delivers some snappy vocal numbers, and Tom Ewell, as the lovelorn suitor of the former, who turns in a highly amusing characterization.

The boys get into difficulties when they rescue Ewell, a wealthy gold prospector, who attempts to drown himself after being spurned by Miss Green. Ewell's clothes are found on a dock and Abbott and Costello are suspected of murdering him. As a result they set out to bring Ewell back and prove their innocence. This entails going off to Alaska. There they get caught up in an assortment of complications.

The screenplay by Martin A. Ragaway and Leonard Stern has the boys getting lost in the icy wastes while trying to get gold out of the country. Also in trying to protect Ewell from those who would kill him for his wealth, they get tangled up with some of the toughest characters in the territory.

What really matters is that by the time the film runs its course, a lot of zany comedy has passed on the screen.

Howard Christie produced and Jean Yarbrough directed. Running time, 76 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Attendance Normal Or Better in Many Places

National political conventions on home television, especially in the midst of hot weather, aids attendance in theatres in many areas and in most other sections has no effect on the box-office. Those are the conclusions of circuit executives here—conclusions bolstered by reports from the field—following the week-long activities of the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

United Paramount Theatres, which is currently collating statistical material on the effects of both the Republican and Democratic conventions, reported that business during the political conclaves was just as good or perhaps even better than usual. Similar experiences were reported by Loew's, RKO Theatres, Warners, and others.

Aid of Local Merchants Sought to Halt Free Shows

DETROIT, July 27.—More than 40 Northern Michigan exhibitors held a meeting at Traverse City, in connection with the showings of "free movies" which have been plaguing independent exhibitors in the resort areas in Michigan, and a move was launched to obtain the aid of local merchants to halt the practice.

Among those present were Ed Stuckey, of Butterfield Theaters; Carl Waters, United World Films, Chicago; Clive Waxman, Waxman Circuit, Grand Rapids; Carl Buermele, General Theater Service, Detroit, and Ernest Conlon, executive secretary of Allied of Michigan. The meeting was held under the direction of L. O. Griffin of Manton and Lake City, Michigan.

Exhibitors planned to appeal to the civic mindedness of merchants in their respective towns stressing the importance of permanent motion picture houses to the town. Merchants will be asked to ignore operators who request donations to be able to show "free movies." In return the owners

[Twentieth Century-Fox]

HAD HOLLYWOOD, during its prevailing tendency to remake some of the financially successful pictures of yore, overlooked "What Price Glory," a singular mistake would have been made. Any exhibitor with an eye for gilt-edged product will agree with this after he witnesses the performance of James Cagney and Dan Dailey in 20th Century-Fox's swaggering, boisterous, hilarious recreation of the blistering feud on which the now immortal Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirt rode through the horror and mire of the first World War.

When the original picture of this title, starring Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen, made its appearance in the late twenties, the film-going population was thoroughly convulsed over the cross-fire of wise-cracks and dirty looks that mingled with flying shrapnel to make the silent screen sizzle. And box-office revenue soared in consequence.

A like performance, in terms of both audience enjoyment and earning prowess, is promised by the new "What Price Glory," which tells the same tale in the same setting, but with the added advantages of color by Technicolor and, of course, sound. This version of the Maxwell Anderson-Laurence Stallings play bids fair to topple many a theatre's existing record for grosses.

Industry May Ask Solons to Fight US Suit

Say Congressmen Would See 'Injustice' of It

The belief was more or less widespread in the industry here at the weekend that the defendants in the government's 16mm. anti-trust suit would attempt to persuade Congressmen and perhaps Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, and other Federal officials, of the "injustice" of the action before answers to it are filed in U. S. District Court in Los Angeles.

It was expected that the Federal officials would be contacted personally. Confidence was expressed that it probably would not be too difficult to convince them that the suit would ruin the industry and hence was unjust. It was hoped that these officials then might intercede with the Justice Department on the industry's behalf.

Meanwhile, attorneys for most of

Rule Tallahassee Tax Legal, Valid

TALLAHASSEE, July 27.—Pensacola's amusement tax is legal and valid security for a $700,000 municipal bond issue, the Florida State Supreme Court has ruled, reversing itself.

The high tribunal said that on a rehearing it had decided to affirm validation of the bond issue to finance construction of a city auditorium. Paramount-Gulf Theatres challenged the validity of the bond issue, contending that the amusement tax which was pledged to pay off the bonds was illegal.

Quota Defaulters Are Hit Again in U.K. Commons

By PETER BURNUP

LONDON, July 27.—Debating in the House of Commons, Laborite Stephen T. Swingler reiterated previous arguments that, improper "interested parties" participate in the Films Council discussions of alleged quota violations. He also criticized the Board of Trade for not prosecuting Metro's Empire Theatre for quota violations.

Labor member Tom O'Brien of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes, however, seized the opportunity to declare that criticism of the Empire is part of a Communist engineered attack on the American company designed to promote Communist attacks on the United States.

O'Brien continued that Swingler and his associates were "advised by malicious sources." O'Brien said that he objected to suggestions that the Film Council, of which he and other M. P.'s were members, was a body of conspirators out to break the law.

Peter Thorneycroft, BOT president, after taking the Council's advice, took the view that prosecution of the Empire was unjustified. He said he was looking into other quota cases and where he thought prosecution was likely to succeed it was launched.

1st Educational TV Permits to States

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The Federal Communications Commission, despite dissent by Commissioners Hyde and Jones, awarded the first four educational television permits to State-supported institutions.

The dissent was based on the argument that since these institutions would have to go to their legislatures for appropriations, they did not at present meet the financial requirements. Licenses went to Kansas State College of Agriculture at Manhattan, and to the New York State Board of Regents for three educational TV stations to be located in Albany, Buffalo and Rochester.

Plans in Early Stages

Refinancing plans are in their early stages and it is understood that the final form of the operation has yet to be decided. It is reliably learned however that under consideration is a plan whereby present shareholders will receive one "ploughshare" for every two shares held and all of the then £1 shares will be split into five-shilling units. A further proposal is that a considerable volume of the British-held five-shilling "plough-shares" be placed on the London Stock Exchange at around 10 shillings per share. The American parent company, it is stated, will retain its controlling shares in the British concern.

* Pictures featured in M. P. Daily advertising during past 6 weeks.

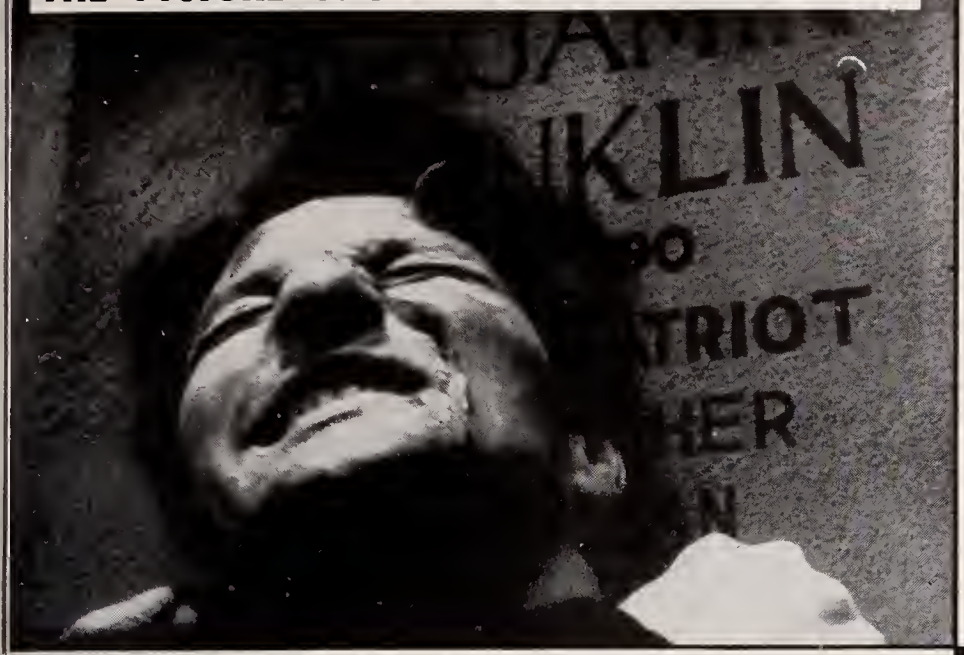
The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.



Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

that reported its box-office off because of the competition of the Democratic convention on home TV was Kansas City. Favorable box-office field reports were received from Boston, Baltimore, Cincinnati, New Orleans, and many other places.

Boston theatre business on the whole was said to be better during the Democratic convention than the Republican's. That situation was even true of districts which were heavily Democratic. Theatremen are of the opinion that when home television offers such very limited and often monotonous programming, people go out of their homes to a motion picture and an air-conditioned theatre.

Credit Cooling Systems

In Baltimore, cooling systems in theatres are credited with thumping the competition of the Democratic convention on home TV. Many theatremen minimized the influence of conventions on the box-office.

In Kansas City, a reduction in theatre attendance in the first few days of the Democratic convention, was observed.

Cincinnati reported that televising the Democratic convention appeared to help rather than hinder theatre business. Hot, humid weather, plus the cancellation of regular television shows and the monotony of some convention proceedings caused many television viewers to seek recreation in theatres.

Most New Orleans theatremen not only reported that the convention did not hurt business, but rather that business was better.

A 30 per cent drop in theatre attendance was reported by half of Memphis' first run houses as a result of the convention. The other half reported business holding up as well as a week ago but they admitted they had better pictures this week. A survey showed that the loss was about the same as during the Republican convention.

$7,000 for 'High Noon'

Stanley Kramer's "High Noon," starring Gary Cooper, at the Mayfair Theater in New York, is understood to have racked up the biggest opening day gross for any United Artists picture to play the Brandt Broadway showcase, grossing $7,000.

'Dreamboat' Scores

The biggest opening day's gross—$15,000—in a year was recorded by 20th Century-Fox's "Dreamboat" on Friday at the Roxy Theatre here, David T. Katz, executive director, announced at the weekend. The comedy was said to have exceeded totals scored by "With a Song in My Heart," "5 Fingers," and "Phone Call from a Stranger," playing the New York showcase earlier this year.

"What Price Glory"

Henry Ephron's screenplay, "What Price Glory," while it can coax a tear as well as evoke roars of laughter, never defers to mawkishness in its eying of the effects of war on all makes of American men, whether battle-seasoned or not. But at the same time it is not a probing picture, preferring rather to dwell for the most part on the surface comic aspects of the fighting and the waiting in France experienced by the early-bird Marines. Yet Cagney, as the indestructible Captain Flagg, observes in the final sequence that fighting has come to be "a kind of religion" a duty from which the soldier cannot tear himself.

THE comedy department, which occupies about 80 per cent of the picture, is loaded with everything from slapstick to stinging repartee. It centers mainly around the rivalry between Cagney and Dailey for the love of Charmaine, the French innkeeper's daughter, whom Corinne Calvet portrays with wide-eyed charm and engaging saucincss. Plotless by common standards, the story puts the hard-drinking, frenetic pair of Marines in successive sequences of feuding over Charmaine, who loves them both, would gladly marry either one, plays one against the other, and almost has Dailey saying "I do" in a "shotgun" wedding only to see him wiggle out of it by answering a call to battle. All the time, Cagney and Dailey, who incidentally give their familiar histronic mannerisms full play throughout, exchange verbal and physical punishment that will keep the customers roaring with laughter. And contemptuous as they are of each other as men, Dailey's Sergeant Quirt and Cagney's Captain Flagg never fail when the need arises to express their admiration for each other as soldiers.

Supporting this welter of comedy and its undercurrents of pathos, but always overshadowed by the three stars, are capable performers William Demarest, Craig Hill, Robert Wagner, Marisa Pavan, Casey Adams, James Gleason, Wally Vernon, Henri Letondal and a long string of others.

Here and there Miss Calvet, Miss Pavan and soldier choruses break out in song, the numbers including "My Love, My Life," and "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary."

A television set isn't going to mean too much when "What Price Glory" is playing at an entertainment seeker's favorite theatre. You can bet on that!

Running time, 111 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

sions due to what is believed to be a high interest in the match. The contender to the title, held by Jersey Joe Walcott, will be the winner of tonight's scheduled Matthews-Marciano bout at the Yankee Stadium.

Guarantee at Issue

The chances of TNT getting the title bout, tentatively slated by the IBC for a date in September, is considered greater in some quarters if Marciano wins tonight's 10-round match. It was Jack Hurley, Matthews' manager, who virtually killed the attempt to televise tonight's bout in theatres. Hurley sought a greater guarantee from theatres than was procured for the Robinson-Maxim fight. It was the price that led TNT and TV-equipped theatres to shy away.

The chief topic under discussion was the setting of plans for the fall global premiere of Darryl F. Advertising - publicity - exploitation campaigns were also formulated for "What Price Glory," "Les Miserables," "Lure of the Wilderness," "Don't Bother to Knock," and "Way of a Gaucho."

Showmanship drives were charted by Einfeld with Fritz Micoucci, Manager for Italy, in Rome; Robert Krier, German manager, in Munich, and Karl Knust, Holland manager, in Amsterdam.

Conferences in Paris between the vice-president and Albert Cornfield, 20th Century-Fox's managing director for Europe; Giulio Ascarelli, publicity director for the Continent, and French exhibitors rounded out Einfeld's European visit.

Review

"Lost in Alaska"

(Universal-International)

BUD ABBOTT AND LOU COSTELLO find themselves battling the icy elements away up North in "Lost in Alaska." The picture churns up a lot of comic energy and rates very well with predecessors in the series. It will easily please the team's fans.

The cast is rounded out by Mitzi Green, who, as a saloon entertainer, delivers some snappy vocal numbers, and Tom Ewell, as the lovelorn suitor of the former, who turns in a highly amusing characterization.

The boys get into difficulties when they rescue Ewell, a wealthy gold prospector, who attempts to drown himself after being spurned by Miss Green. Ewell's clothes are found on a dock and Abbott and Costello are suspected of murdering him. As a result they set out to bring Ewell back and prove their innocence. This entails going off to Alaska. There they get caught up in an assortment of complications.

The screenplay by Martin A. Ragaway and Leonard Stern has the boys getting lost in the icy wastes while trying to get gold out of the country. Also in trying to protect Ewell from those who would kill him for his wealth, they get tangled up with some of the toughest characters in the territory.

What really matters is that by the time the film runs its course, a lot of zany comedy has passed on the screen.

Howard Christie produced and Jean Yarbrough directed. Running time, 76 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Protests Rise Continually Vs. Gov't Suit

Wires Sent to Stevenson; Snaper, Harvey Also Act

Protests against the government's anti-trust suit to force the sale of 16mm. films to television and other outlets in competition to regular theatres are mounting steadily, the prospect being that soon virtually every segment of the industry will have raised its voice against the action of the Department of Justice.

Terming the suit a "political" move, exhibitors of Dallas, Texas, have retaliated by telegraphing Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic nominee for President, enlisting aid against the litigation. Last week these same exhibitors had telegraphed President Truman to the same effect.

Meanwhile, a strong letter of protest has been sent to Attorney-Gen-

Business Overseas Good, Says Balaban

Business abroad is very good, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, reported here yesterday on his return from a six-week trip to Rome, Paris, Venice and Montecatini. Balaban pointed out, however, that while the overseas market is encouraging, there has been a decline in actual earnings because of devaluation.

Balaban asserted that the company

Attendance abroad is very satisfactory, Charles Einfeld, 20th Century-Fox vice-president, declared here yesterday on his return on the S.S. Liberte from six weeks overseas.

Sullivan Returns to TOA Post Monday

Gael Sullivan, who served as manager of Senator Estes Kefauver's campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination, will return to his post as executive director of the Theatre Owners of America next Monday.

Sullivan is vacationing at Narragansett, R. I., this week. He had been given a leave of absence by TOA to accept the campaign assignment.

Roach Plans Six Films Next Year

Hal Roach declared here yesterday that in returning to theatrical production, as disclosed last week, he plans to make six films for theatres next year. He also plans to make a series of TV films.

His idea calls for the signing of stars to a 40-week contract involving their services for both theatrical features and TV films.

Among those Roach has conferred with regarding his project are Leo McCarey, George Stevens and Leonard Goldstein, but no deal has been closed with any of the trio.

While here Roach will confer with distributors on the six films and also negotiate with TV officials on his video shows. Two of the TV shows, running one hour each, are "Children's Hour" and "Actor's Hour."

Roach asserted he is unhappy about the high cost of distribution. Unless he can make a satisfactory distribution deal, he said, he would confer with a group of exhibitors and try to set up a special distribution deal with them where they would guarantee the costs in their respective areas.

Kaufman holds that the task of getting people out of their homes and into film houses can be solved if Hollywood will work in smaller units.

Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show on Earth" is proving one of the greatest small-town box-office attractions in the history of the industry, according to A. W. Schwalberg, president of Paramount Film Distributing Corp.

Schwalberg stated that "in a town in Iowa with a population of only 6,000, and in a theatre that seats less than 400, 'The Greatest Show on Earth' rolled up a $3,067 one-week gross. Figure for 'Samson and Delilah,' at the same theatre and the same playing time was $949.

2 Ladd Features to Be Made in Britain

LONDON, July 28.—The impending production in this country of two color in Technicolor features starring Alan Ladd was disclosed here by Columbia Pictures.

First, to start in September, will be "The Red Beret," a drama of the Commandos. The second, to be undertaken shortly afterwards, will be "The White South," a Hammond Innes adventure of the Antarctic whaling industry.

would give a reasonably good account of itself this year and has a "well-balanced production schedule for 1953."

Asked about possible retrenchments similar to those recently made at M-G-M, Balaban declared that "whenever we find an uneconomic situation we make necessary cuts. These are times that call for efficiency and productivity."

Asked about the possibility of the company making more pictures abroad, he said it would do so only if a picture's background called for it.

Responding to a question about the industry's outlook, Balaban remarked that "each company would prosper according to the number of box-office hits it can produce."

Intermission Policy At Cleveland Houses

Cleveland, July 28. — Theatres in this area are, like many theatres elsewhere, adopting an intermission policy between shows for the purpose of boosting concession sales, using an intermission trailer suggesting a visit to the concession stand.

Coast Projectionists Get Liberal Benefits

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—New agreements have been signed between the Motion Picture Projectionists Local No. 162 and North Coast United Paramount, Loew's Warfield and others in the San Francisco area calling for a 27-cent per hour increase for two years and a 12-cent an hour further increase commencing the third year of the agreement. Each theatre will pay two weeks' vacation per year to all regularly employed operators.

The local was also instrumental in putting into effect a health and welfare plan which is an innovation so far as the theatrical industry here is concerned. The welfare plan is based on $2.10 per week paid by the employer. This provides hospitalization care for the membership. Included therein also is a $2,500 life insurance policy with a double indemnity clause for $5,000 in the event of accidental death. Other fringe benefits in minor working conditions were secured under the new agreement.

The agreement was negotiated by a wage committee composed of five members of the local: business manager John A. Forde, president Thomas J. Kearney and projectionist John Finn of Loew's Warfield, Abe Lubfin of the Orpheum and Mervin Wagner of the New Mission.

Inside New York—50 years ago . . .

Re-creating a corner of old New York for the theater is a stage designer's problem.

But re-creating it so that the color camera will see it and the sound camera hear it as the eye saw it and the ear heard it 50 years ago is quite another story.

It is in reducing problems of this character that the Eastman Technical Service is of great service. Their representatives collaborate with studio technicians; they scrutinize the scenery, establish light and color balances; they help select type of film, color or black-and-white, best to use. Special laboratory procedures, too, may be worked out to ensure precise processing—all to make sure that every foot of film produces best results.

To maintain this service, the Eastman Kodak Company has branches at strategic centers . . . invites inquiry on all phases of film use from all members of the industry. Address:

tional Democratic Convention last week. Except for last Friday when the balloting for the party's Presidential nomination took on the appearance of a knock-down, drag-out fight, business flourished at most of theatres.

Each day and evening of the convention telecasts, marked by more dull roll-calls than fiery contests, the theatres enjoyed good patronage turnovers. On Friday, however, when the hot weather abated and the Stevenson-Kefauver struggle arrived at the point where television and radio could lay claim to offering something in the way of "entertainment," milder returns were being recorded by some, but by no means all of the first-runs.

More than one theatre manager, when asked if the convention left any scars on the box-office, replied gleefully: "What convention?"

'Robin Hood' Strong

Meanwhile, during both the Democratic and earlier Republican convention, Walt Disney's "Story of Robin Hood" was heading for a place among the long runners and better grossers at the Criterion. The picture's fifth week is bringing $21,000, and the management has expressed confidence that a total of at least eight weeks is in store for the film at the Times Square house.

"High Noon" at the Mayfair is proving to be a first-week high grosser, with $49,000 indicated. Still demonstrating plenty of vigor in its second week at the Capitol is "Carrie," the figure being a smart $38,000. "Where's Charley?" and a stage presentation is giving Radio City Music Hall a nice fifth and final stanza, with $70,000 for Thursday-through-Sunday pointing to a seven-day "take" of $108,000. "Ivanhoe" will open at the Hall on Thursday.

$11,000 for 'Beacon'

A more-than-adequate $11,000 for the ninth and final week of "Walk East on Beacon" is indicated for the Victoria which will bring in "Affair in Trinidad" tomorrow. At the Astor, the second week of "The Story of Will Rogers" is seen registering $18,000, a good figure, but a drop of $8,000 from the opening week. Still strong in its second week at the Globe is up a pleasing $6,200 for the 17th 500 indicated. A mild $7,000 was indicated for the second and final week of "Paula" at Loew's State which will open "Glory Alley" today.

The off-Broadway Sutton did a good $7,600 for the 17th week of "The Man in the White Suit," and the similarly identified Normandie is racking up a pleasing $6,200 fo rthe 17th stanza of "Encore."

Openings yesterday included "The Spider and the Fly" at the Little Carnegie, and "The Strange Ones" at the Paris. "What Price Glory" will move into the Roxy on August 8.

"Lure of the Wilderness"

(20th Century-Fox)

THE OKEFENOKEE swamp in Georgia forms the background of this unusual drama which features Jean Peters, Jeffrey Hunter and Walter Brennan. The picture has some intriguing, nature-in-the-raw settings, presented in color by Technicolor, and it moves at a brisk pace. The narrative is developed along formula lines. Filmgoers should find it attractive entertainment.

Hunter plays the part of a young man who ventures daringly into the swamp to find his lost dog and becomes the captive of Brennan and his tomboyish daughter, Miss Peters. It seems that Brennan took to the swamps with his daughter years back to hide from a murder he never committed. After some initial hostilities, Brennan and Miss Peters win Hunter over to their side and he agrees to return to civilization, hire a lawyer, and fight for the vindication of Brennan.

The task becomes an involved and treacherous one, especially since the real murderers resort to a variety of efforts to block the emergence of justice.

The screenplay, by Louis Lantz, provides romantic interest between Miss Peters and Hunter and introduces a rivalry in the form of Constance Smith, a jealous, easily-enraged young lady. By the time the story runs its course justice triumphs and Hunter wins the hand of Miss Peters. Robert L. Jacks produced and Jean Negulesco directed.

Running time, 92 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

Rackmil Plans 'U' Expansion

election to the Universal presidency July 15 that there will be no changes in the latter company's management. This time, he specifically included the studio in the statement. If Leo Spitz, studio executive, recovers from his current illness sufficiently to permit him to continue in an active capacity, he will do so, Rackmil said. He made it clear that the state of Spitz's health will be the deciding factor.

Nate J. Blumberg, new Universal board chairman who left here for the Coast over the past weekend, will also continue in an active capacity, Rackmil said. Blumberg's health, reportedly greatly improved in recent weeks, makes a genuinely active role for him in deciding production policy with William Goetz, Universal production head, and in other capacities, certain, it was indicated.

Rackmil said he would retain his post as president of Decca in addition to heading Universal and that he would work both here and at Universal City. He said he had no plans at present for adding to Decca's representation on the Universal board of directors, despite the fact that he is the only representative of Decca's 42 per cent interest in Universal. J. Arthur Rank, with no stock ownership in Universal now, has three representatives on the board and they will remain, Rackmil said. However, Rank himself and his financial aide, G. I. Woodham Smith, rarely attend Universal board meetings, having contented themselves in the past with the representation afforded by the third member of the Rank trio, Robert Benjamin.

"We have a winning team now," Rackmil said, referring to Universal's good earnings record and the stated determination not to make changes in the executive or directors' status. "When everything is going well it just doesn't make sense to shake things up."

Asserting that the Universal management under his presidency will "move slowly" in the direction of business expansion, Rackmil clearly indicated that he believes motion pictures have an important part to play in the future of television.

Financial instability has hurt TV film producers heretofore, he believes, but sees no problem in that area confronting Universal and Decca. Rackmil stated that TV programs on film will constitute the bulk of the eventual programming. Plans for distribution of the TV films by Decca's national outlets are now being discussed, he revealed.

Rackmil made it clear that he envisions the TV film future of his companies as entirely apart from the theatrical film operations. He said he is confident that the motion picture theatre will not be supplanted by television any more than the record business was supplanted by radio in the late 1920's. Just as radio strengthened the record business eventually, Rackmil feels that television will do much to help motion pictures.

"One medium of entertainment does not take the place of another," he said. "That has been demonstrated. There is a place for each of them."

Accompanying Rackmil to the luncheon were Al Daff, newly named executive vice-president of Universal; Maurice Bergman, public relations executive for "U," Phil Gerard, publicity manager, and Milton Livingston, trade press contact.

one shilling and above, A.B.C., Gaumont British, Granada Theatres and Odeon are reluctantly compelled for most of their theatres to make some small increases in the prices of admission with effect from and including Sunday, August 3."

A spot round-up of reactions reveals sharp division of opinion among independent exhibitors in regard to the circuit lead. Harry Mears, last year's Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association president, for example, feels that the circuits should have consulted CEA before coming to a decision.

Yorkshire's J. X. Prendergast will not accept the lead. Like other North-country theatremen he feels the pinch of the slump currently affecting the textile industries.

Hinge Approves

CEA's treasurer E. J. Hinge—accepted as one of the industry's elder statesmen—on the other hand takes count of rising costs. Hinge also operates in the North-country. He applauds the circuit decision. So does London's Theo Fligelstone.

Says Fligelstone: "The circuits have acted wisely, for this may be the last opportunity the industry will have of adjusting prices to the general cost-of-living level. Now that we have flexibility we should make the most of it."

It is regarded as significant that the joint statement from the circuits used the phrase "for most of their theatres." That, it is said, gives the circuits a useful escape-hatch in areas where independents embark on a price-cutting campaign.

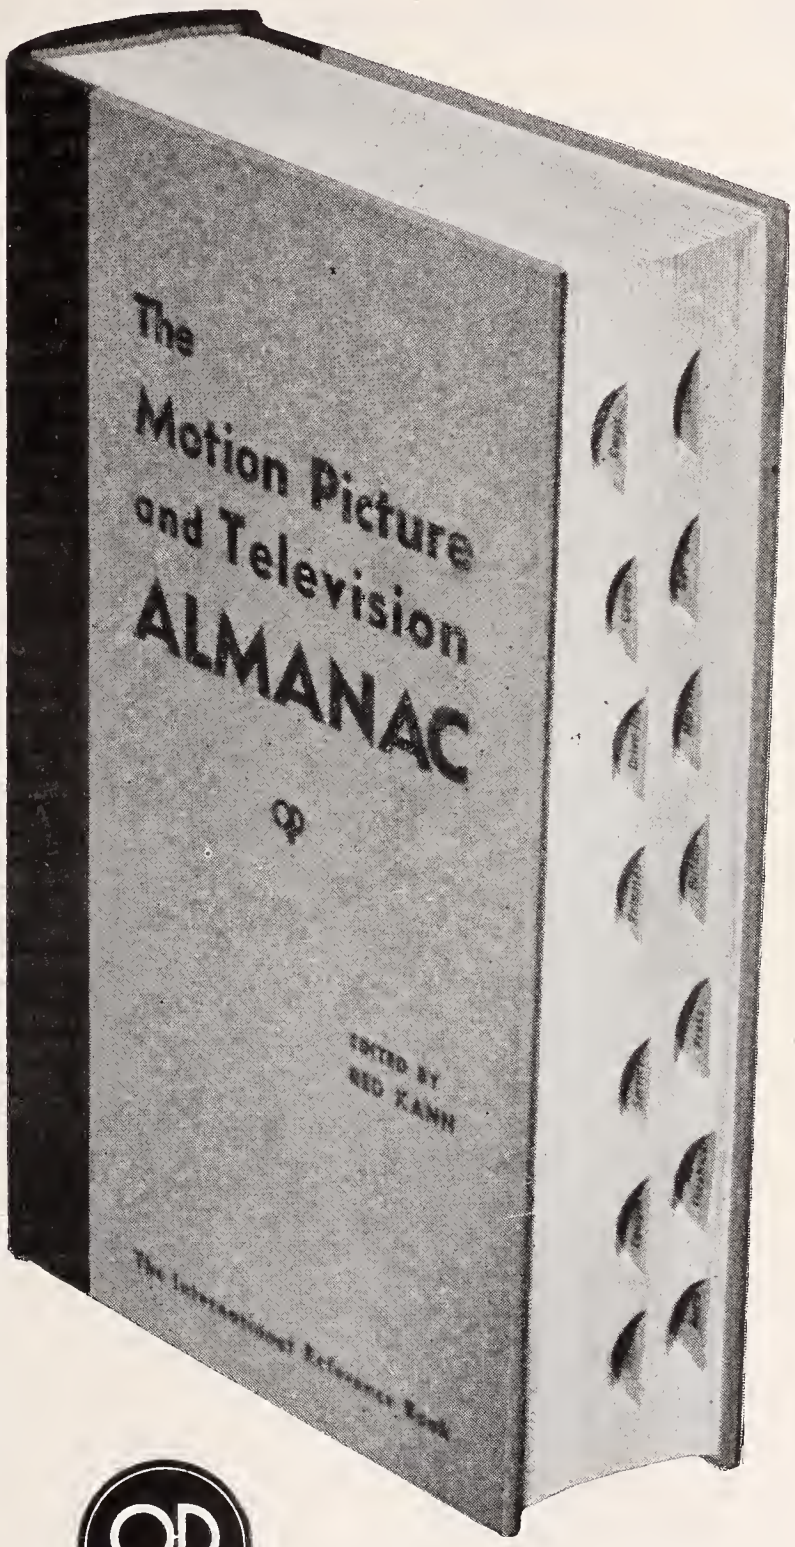
most advance penetration for a picture, Kaufman observed that coordination of publicity, advertising and exploitation demands that a picture be made at least one year before its release.

Turning to "Sudden Fear," which RKO Radio is distributing, Kaufman called it an example of integrating selling with production.

"Plans on selling 'Sudden Fear' started with the writing of the script," he says, "and that took place over a year ago. Many things in the script were geared for exploitation and selling."



Cites Example

As an example, he cites cooperation with Western Pacific Railroad. A sequence of "Sudden Fear" brings Joan Crawford and Jack Palance together on the line's San Francisco-bound Zephyr. The railroad furnished the equipment, and has worked out an extensive advertising campaign of its own through 24 sheets for its railroad stations, and window displays in every location in its territory, with agents to be brought to San Francisco for the picture's presentation.

Kaufman estimates that Don Prince, publicity director of RKO Radio, has so far secured the equivalent of $5,000,000 of commercial advertising.

"'Sudden Fear' is one of the first big features that will use TV as a medium of advertising," said Kaufman. Radio's Terry Turner, RKO's exploitation director, has made 12 special TV trailers. The eight one-minute and four 20-second trailers will be a supplement to the newspaper advertising campaign.

eral McGranery by Wilbur Snaper, president of National Allied. Snaper's letter declared that the wiping out of a $2,500,000,000 industry would be on the Justice Department's conscience.

Rotus Harvey, president of Western Theatre Owners, has sent from San Francisco to Eric A. Johnston, now on the Coast, a wire pledging to the Motion Picture Association of America president support in fighting the government's complaint. He also offered his personal services in the fight. "If the Government wins this case," Harvey said, "all of us will be run out of business."

Call It 'Squeeze'

The Dallas exhibitor group, composed of R. J. O'Donnell, Col. H. A. Cole, Ed Rowley, Claude Ezell, H. J. Griffith and Phil Isley, wired Stevenson that that the suit "is so illogical and its pleadings are so drastic that we cannot construe it as anything but a political 'squeeze' on personalities thought to be Republican in sympathies. The suit wears so many earmarks of punitive and extortionate motives that it will outrage the entire electorate and confirm a widely held belief that bureaus under a Democratic administration are strong-arm political operatives and not administrators of law and equity."

The telegram also said that American motion picture theatre owners may be goaded into using their screens in "partisan political warfare, the personnel of our group being fairly well divided between the two parties. But action such as this, attacking the very foundations of our industry and threatening our livelihood and very existence, must inevitably drive us to the use of this powerful publicity medium in self-defense."

"Shock and amazement" at the suit was expressed by Robert Wile, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a letter to McGranery. He asked the Attorney-General to reconsider his department's action.

Skiatron President Sees Suit Benefitting Subscriber-Vision

"If the government succeeds in forcing the major motion picture companies to sell their films to television, subscription TV will be the only practical method of bridging the inevitable economic gap," Arthur Levey, President of Skiatron Electronics & Television Corporation, sponsors of the Subscriber-Vision pay-as-you-see television system, has indicated.

"Justice Department efforts to compel film distributors to make 16mm versions of their feature pictures available to television will inevitably strengthen the position of Subscriber-Vision and may hasten its introduction to the public," Mr. Levey said.

"Even if the government wins its case and the movie firms offer their pictures for sale, the question still remains: Who can afford this celluloid bounty? The picture people will undoubtedly put a stiff price on their product, and justly so. Neither the sponsors, nor the networks, nor the individual stations will be able to meet it.

"Only through subscription TV, which transfers the boxoffice directly and effectively to the living room, will television be able to afford Hollywood's better films."

Television--Radio

EVERYTHING HAPPENS in cycles, mega, kilo and ordinary. Just about 20 years ago your reporter was writing a column about film folk and their doings at the Paramount Studios at Astoria, L. I. and Warner's Vitaphone plant in Flatbush. Last Thursday at the Seaboard Studios where they're producing a series of 13 Ed & Pegeen Fitzgerald TV comedies, we saw so many familiar faces on the set that for a brief moment or two we thought we were witnessing a flashback to 1932. Jack Etra was at the camera, Phil Rein on sound, Joe Redden, props, Dan Spillane and Jim Hennessy, grips, Art Kornfeld, chief electrician and Vince Matthews, former electrician, with Rein on sound, one of the crews that worked with Lubitsch on "The Big Pond" and "Smiling Lieutenant," with Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert and other Paramount stars. Reminds us of the old days, we said. "Old days?" snorted Jim Hennessy,"the real good old days were when most of us here worked with D. W. Griffith up in Mamaroneck, later moving to the Claremont Studios in the Bronx and then to the Pathe Studios at 135th St. where we made the Pearl White Pictures." Which all goes to prove our "cycle" contention. With the wedding of motion pictures and television, the use of the camera has once again given work to hundreds of capable technicians and studios that had been dark and silent for lo these many years are once again resounding to "sound the bells" "up to speed, roll 'em."

Then she does her Saturday show on NBC and another series on ABC which makes Kathi one of the busiest distaffers on the nets. What a package! Beauty PLUS Brains. . . . Announcer Joe King has drawn up plans for his new home which he plans to build (no, a professional contractor will do the building) at the place he just purchased in Nyack, overlooking the Hudson River. . . . Hal Roach arrived in town yesterday with 2 full-hour (in four segments) film series, "The Children's Hour" and "The Actors' Hour." Roach feels that film stars can enhance and prolong their professional lives by appearing on TV once a week but in brief sequences. Pictures have eight conveniently-spaced ends for commercials without interrupting the action. . . . Can anyone imagine? The original producer of such TV classics as "Lights Out," "The Clock" and "The Amazing Mr. Malone" is currently unassigned and in fact unemployed. TV, or for that matter motion picture producers should immediately phone Larry Schwab, Jr., grab his talents and then thank us by sending a check to the Damon Runyan Cancer Fund. . . . Don't be too surprised if NBC acquires rights to "Breakfast In Hollywood" for a fall series of simulcasts.

A. T. & T. Facilities Extended in South

The long lines department of American Telephone and Telegraph has started laying a coaxial cable between Orlando and Tampa to provide additional long distance telephone, network radio and television circuits for Florida's West Coast. Planned for completion in time for the 1952-53 winter season, the new 101-mile route will connect with the nationwide network at Orlando.

Albany Unit Meets on Compo Tax Drive

ALBANY, N. Y., July 28.—Elimination of the 20 per cent Federal amusement tax could be the "salvation" of many exhibitors, Leo Greenfield, Universal branch manager here, and distributor chairman in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' campaign, said today at a meeting of branch managers and salesmen. There being "no reason why the exhibitor cannot retain the money collected in the tax, if it is repealed," all exhibitors should contribute to COMPO for furtherance of the drive, Greenfield declared.

Branch managers were assigned to solicit smaller circuits and salesmen to independent exhibitors, with pledge cards. Division and district managers will contact larger circuits.

3 More Exhibitors Join 20% Tax Fight

Three more exhibitors sent word yesterday to Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the national tax repeal campaign committee, that they will serve as committeemen to lead the campaign in their states. State campaign committeemen, representing all 48 states, now total 163.

Latest additions are Ralph E. McClanahan of Irvine, Ky., president of the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners; Samuel B. Landrum of Dallas, and Leo Peterson of Rapid City, president of the South Dakota Exhibitors' Association.

Talks Still Being Held on Todd TV

Negotiations looking toward the theatre telecasting of Mike Todd's "Night in Venice" stage production at Jones Beach, Long Island, are currently being conducted by the Fabian circuit.

Todd recently acknowledged that he had talked with theatremen and other interested parties, including Nate Halpern, president of Theatre Network Television, on the possibility of using the new medium.

Lasky Here on Promotion

Jesse L. Lasky, completely recovered from his recent illness, arrived in New York yesterday from the Coast and will be the guest of the National Association of Music Merchants at its annual convention at the Hotel New Yorker where he will deliver an address outlining details of his next production, "The Big Brass Band." The several thousand members are to cooperate in an advertising campaign during 1953.

Protests Rise Continually Vs. Gov't Suit

Wires Sent to Stevenson; Snaper, Harvey Also Act

Protests against the government's anti-trust suit to force the sale of 16mm. films to television and other outlets in competition to regular theatres are mounting steadily, the prospect being that soon virtually every segment of the industry will have raised its voice against the action of the Department of Justice.

Terming the suit a "political" move, exhibitors of Dallas, Texas, have retaliated by telegraphing Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic nominee for President, enlisting aid against the litigation. Last week these same exhibitors had telegraphed President Truman to the same effect.

Meanwhile, a strong letter of protest has been sent to Attorney-Gen-

Business Overseas Good, Says Balaban

Business abroad is very good, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, reported here yesterday on his return from a six-week trip to Rome, Paris, Venice and Montecatini. Balaban pointed out, however, that while the overseas market is encouraging, there has been a decline in actual earnings because of devaluation.

Balaban asserted that the company

Attendance Abroad Healthy: Einfeld

Attendance abroad is very satisfactory, Charles Einfeld, 20th Century-Fox vice-president, declared here yesterday on his return on the S.S. Liberte from six weeks overseas.

He said he conferred with executives abroad as well as theatremen. He also set plans for the fall premiere of Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro" to be staged simultaneously in capital cities of Europe, Africa and South America.

Sullivan Returns to TOA Post Monday

Gael Sullivan, who served as manager of Senator Estes Kefauver's campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination, will return to his post as executive director of the Theatre Owners of America next Monday.

Sullivan is vacationing at Narragansett, R. I., this week. He had been given a leave of absence by TOA to accept the campaign assignment.

Roach Plans Six Films Next Year

Hal Roach declared here yesterday that in returning to theatrical production, as disclosed last week, he plans to make six films for theatres next year. He also plans to make a series of TV films.

His idea calls for the signing of stars to a 40-week contract involving their services for both theatrical features and TV films.

Among those Roach has conferred with regarding his project are Leo McCarey, George Stevens and Leonard Goldstein, but no deal has been closed with any of the trio.

While here Roach will confer with distributors on the six films and also negotiate with TV officials on his video shows. Two of the TV shows, running one hour each, are "Children's Hour" and "Actor's Hour."

Roach asserted he is unhappy about the high cost of distribution. Unless he can make a satisfactory distribution deal, he said, he would confer with a group of exhibitors and try to set up a special distribution deal with them where they would guarantee the costs in their respective areas.

Gottlieb and Levy To Aid JDA Drive

Saal Gottlieb, of MGM-Loew's, and David A. Levy, of Universal Pictures, have accepted co-chairmanship of the exchanges division of the motion picture industry's campaign on behalf of the Joint Defense Appeal (JDA), it was announced by Leon Goldberg, of Universal, and Edward L. Fabian, of Fabian Theatres, co-chairmen of the industry-wide JDA effort.

The JDA is seeking $5,000,000 in 1952 to finance the activities of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the nation's largest Jewish agencies combatting bigotry.

B'way Grosses Rise With the Thermometer

The current business week, aided and abetted by hot weather, is proving to be a stronger-than-usual one for New York's first-runs. Both theatres have stage shows.

Decentralization in Production Stressed

The future of film production lies in decentralization, producer Joseph Kaufman said yesterday. He is in New York in the interests of "Sudden Fear," his independently produced Joan Crawford vehicle which tees off August 7 at Loew's State Theatre.

Kaufman holds that the task of getting people out of their homes and into film houses can be solved if Hollywood will work in smaller units.

"I think the day of mass production of films is ended," Kaufman stated. "This is evidenced by the decision of the big studios to make only big pictures." On the problem of getting the

Rackmil Plans Long-Range 'U' Expansion

Predicts Results Will Show in 2 to 3 Years

Convinced that Universal Pictures and Decca Records are capable of "complementing" each other in important phases of operation, Milton R. Rackmil, president of both companies, told a luncheon gathering of trade press editors here yesterday that plans are now being developed which are expected to result in "a greatly expanded business for both within the next two to three years."

Rackmil declined to disclose the nature of the plans, asserting that they are in an early discussion stage at this time. However, he confirmed that they are not dependent upon a merger of the two companies, stating that the original plan for a merger has been called off, at least for the present.

The Universal-Decca president also reiterated his statement made on his

Strike's End Won't End Restrictions

WASHINGTON, July 28.—There will be no relaxation of restrictions on amusement construction this year.

That is the word from top officials of the National Production Authority.

Commenting on the end of the steel strike, one official of NPA's construction division said unofficially that it would be impossible to put the planned relaxations which were deferred because of the steel strike into effect until after January 1.

TV Set Manufacture Declines 33 Per Cent

Washington, July 28.—Output of TV sets in the first six months of this year dropped 33 per cent below the figure for the corresponding period in 1951, according to the Radio-Television Manufacturers Association.

The RTMA report showed the manufacture of 2,310,000 TV receivers in the first half of 1952, against 3,450,000 sets in January-June, 1951.

Schwalberg Cites Big 'Show' Grosses in Small Towns

Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show on Earth" is proving one of the greatest small-town box-office attractions in the history of the industry, according to A. W. Schwalberg, president of Paramount Film Distributing Corp.

Schwalberg stated that "in a town in Iowa with a population of only 6,000, and in a theatre that seats less than 400, 'The Greatest Show on Earth' rolled up a $3,067 one-week gross. Figure for 'Samson and Delilah,' at the same theatre and the same playing time was $949.

"In another Iowa town, with a population of 7,600 and in a theatre seating 500, 'Greatest Show' grossed $2,432 to $537 for 'Samson.' In Wisconsin a theatre seating 850 and drawing from a town with a population of 7,000 'Greatest Show' grossed $5,397 to $881 for 'Samson.' Also in Wisconsin, in a town with a population of 7,300 and a theatre seating 750, 'Greatest Show' grossed $3,739 to $942 for 'Samson.'

"This box-office story is the same in Indiana where the results in two towns selected at random showed 'Greatest Show' outgrossing 'Samson' by $5,857 to $2,518 and $6,380 to $1,571, respectively. In a town of 12,000 in California the figures were $4,965 to $1,330, while a town in South Carolina with a population of 19,700 showed 'Greatest Show' with $5,857 and two days to go to $2,518 for 'Samson.'

Levin Associates in Specialized Sales

Jack H. Levin Associates has set up a home office division to promote sales of specialized pictures for both theatrical and non-theatrical fields, tying-in showings to benefit fund-raising activities of such non-profit organizations as religious, fraternal, educational and cultural groups. The latter would select films best suited to their individual needs. Following a test in the Central and Northwestern states, it is intended to eventually embrace all seven regional divisions of Levin Associates.

The Levin company is completing a deal with Souvaine Selective Pictures to handle some of its motion picture product.

Cartoonists Local Wins Pay Rise

HOLLYWOOD, July 28.—Motion Picture Screen Cartoonists, IATSE, has gained a pay rise of 24 cents an hour or 10 per cent figured on the basic minimum, whichever is greater, in an agreement concluded with the Animated Film Producers Association.

The contract, ratified by the union, is retroactive to March 15, and may be reopened for wage adjustments should the Bureau of Labor's cost-of-living index rise five per cent above the January 15 level.

2 Ladd Features to Be Made in Britain

LONDON, July 28.—The impending production in this country of two color in Technicolor features starring Alan Ladd was disclosed here by Columbia Pictures.

Balaban

would give a reasonably good account of itself this year and has a "well-balanced production schedule for 1953."

Asked about possible retrenchments similar to those recently made at M-G-M, Balaban declared that "whenever we find an uneconomic situation we make necessary cuts. These are times that call for efficiency and productivity."

Asked about the possibility of the company making more pictures abroad, he said it would do so only if a picture's background called for it.

Responding to a question about the industry's outlook, Balaban remarked that "each company would prosper according to the number of box-office hits it can produce."

Intermission Policy At Cleveland Houses

Cleveland, July 28. — Theatres in this area are, like many theatres elsewhere, adopting an intermission policy between shows for the purpose of boosting concession sales, using an intermission trailer suggesting a visit to the concession stand.

Coast Projectionists Get Liberal Benefits

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—New agreements have been signed between the Motion Picture Projectionists Local No. 162 and North Coast United Paramount, Loew's Warfield and others in the San Francisco area calling for a 27-cent per hour increase for two years and a 12-cent an hour further increase commencing the third year of the agreement. Each theatre will pay two weeks' vacation per year to all regularly employed operators.

The local was also instrumental in putting into effect a health and welfare plan which is an innovation so far as the theatrical industry here is concerned. The welfare plan is based on $2.10 per week paid by the employer. This provides hospitalization care for the membership. Included therein also is a $2,500 life insurance policy with a double indemnity clause for $5,000 in the event of accidental death. Other fringe benefits in minor working conditions were secured under the new agreement.

The agreement was negotiated by a wage committee composed of five members of the local: business manager John A. Forde, president Thomas J. Kearney and projectionist John Finn of Loew's Warfield, Abe Lubfin of the Orpheum and Mervin Wagner of the New Mission.

Inside New York—50 years ago . . .

Re-creating a corner of old New York for the theater is a stage designer's problem.

But re-creating it so that the color camera will see it and the sound camera hear it as the eye saw it and the ear heard it 50 years ago is quite another story.

It is in reducing problems of this character that the Eastman Technical Service is of great service. Their representatives collaborate with studio technicians; they scrutinize the scenery, establish light and color balances; they help select type of film, color or black-and-white, best to use. Special laboratory procedures, too, may be worked out to ensure precise processing—all to make sure that every foot of film produces best results.

To maintain this service, the Eastman Kodak Company has branches at strategic centers . . . invites inquiry on all phases of film use from all members of the industry. Address:

tional Democratic Convention last week. Except for last Friday when the balloting for the party's Presidential nomination took on the appearance of a knock-down, drag-out fight, business flourished at most of theatres.

Each day and evening of the convention telecasts, marked by more dull roll-calls than fiery contests, the theatres enjoyed good patronage turnovers. On Friday, however, when the hot weather abated and the Stevenson-Kefauver struggle arrived at the point where television and radio could lay claim to offering something in the way of "entertainment," milder returns were being recorded by some, but by no means all of the first-runs.

More than one theatre manager, when asked if the convention left any scars on the box-office, replied gleefully: "What convention?"

'Robin Hood' Strong

Meanwhile, during both the Democratic and earlier Republican convention, Walt Disney's "Story of Robin Hood" was heading for a place among the long runners and better grossers at the Criterion. The picture's fifth week is bringing $21,000, and the management has expressed confidence that a total of at least eight weeks is in store for the film at the Times Square house.

"High Noon" at the Mayfair is proving to be a first-week high grosser, with $49,000 indicated. Still demonstrating plenty of vigor in its second week at the Capitol is "Carrie," the figure being a smart $38,000. "Where's Charley?" and a stage presentation is giving Radio City Music Hall a nice fifth and final stanza, with $70,000 for Thursday-through-Sunday pointing to a seven-day "take" of $108,000. "Ivanhoe" will open at the Hall on Thursday.

$11,000 for 'Beacon'

A more-than-adequate $11,000 for the ninth and final week of "Walk East on Beacon" is indicated for the Victoria which will bring in "Affair in Trinidad" tomorrow. At the Astor, the second week of "The Story of Will Rogers" is seen registering $18,000, a good figure, but a drop of $8,000 from the opening week. Still strong in its second week at the Globe is up a pleasing $6,200 for the 17th 500 indicated. A mild $7,000 was indicated for the second and final week of "Paula" at Loew's State which will open "Glory Alley" today.

The off-Broadway Sutton did a good $7,600 for the 17th week of "The Man in the White Suit," and the similarly identified Normandie is racking up a pleasing $6,200 fo rthe 17th stanza of "Encore."

Openings yesterday included "The Spider and the Fly" at the Little Carnegie, and "The Strange Ones" at the Paris. "What Price Glory" will move into the Roxy on August 8.

"Lure of the Wilderness"

(20th Century-Fox)

THE OKEFENOKEE swamp in Georgia forms the background of this unusual drama which features Jean Peters, Jeffrey Hunter and Walter Brennan. The picture has some intriguing, nature-in-the-raw settings, presented in color by Technicolor, and it moves at a brisk pace. The narrative is developed along formula lines. Filmgoers should find it attractive entertainment.

Hunter plays the part of a young man who ventures daringly into the swamp to find his lost dog and becomes the captive of Brennan and his tomboyish daughter, Miss Peters. It seems that Brennan took to the swamps with his daughter years back to hide from a murder he never committed. After some initial hostilities, Brennan and Miss Peters win Hunter over to their side and he agrees to return to civilization, hire a lawyer, and fight for the vindication of Brennan.

The task becomes an involved and treacherous one, especially since the real murderers resort to a variety of efforts to block the emergence of justice.

The screenplay, by Louis Lantz, provides romantic interest between Miss Peters and Hunter and introduces a rivalry in the form of Constance Smith, a jealous, easily-enraged young lady. By the time the story runs its course justice triumphs and Hunter wins the hand of Miss Peters. Robert L. Jacks produced and Jean Negulesco directed.

Running time, 92 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

Rackmil Plans 'U' Expansion

election to the Universal presidency July 15 that there will be no changes in the latter company's management. This time, he specifically included the studio in the statement. If Leo Spitz, studio executive, recovers from his current illness sufficiently to permit him to continue in an active capacity, he will do so, Rackmil said. He made it clear that the state of Spitz's health will be the deciding factor.

Nate J. Blumberg, new Universal board chairman who left here for the Coast over the past weekend, will also continue in an active capacity, Rackmil said. Blumberg's health, reportedly greatly improved in recent weeks, makes a genuinely active role for him in deciding production policy with William Goetz, Universal production head, and in other capacities, certain, it was indicated.

Rackmil said he would retain his post as president of Decca in addition to heading Universal and that he would work both here and at Universal City. He said he had no plans at present for adding to Decca's representation on the Universal board of directors, despite the fact that he is the only representative of Decca's 42 per cent interest in Universal. J. Arthur Rank, with no stock ownership in Universal now, has three representatives on the board and they will remain, Rackmil said. However, Rank himself and his financial aide, G. I. Woodham Smith, rarely attend Universal board meetings, having contented themselves in the past with the representation afforded by the third member of the Rank trio, Robert Benjamin.

"We have a winning team now," Rackmil said, referring to Universal's good earnings record and the stated determination not to make changes in the executive or directors' status. "When everything is going well it just doesn't make sense to shake things up."

Asserting that the Universal management under his presidency will "move slowly" in the direction of business expansion, Rackmil clearly indicated that he believes motion pictures have an important part to play in the future of television.

Financial instability has hurt TV film producers heretofore, he believes, but sees no problem in that area confronting Universal and Decca. Rackmil stated that TV programs on film will constitute the bulk of the eventual programming. Plans for distribution of the TV films by Decca's national outlets are now being discussed, he revealed.

Rackmil made it clear that he envisions the TV film future of his companies as entirely apart from the theatrical film operations. He said he is confident that the motion picture theatre will not be supplanted by television any more than the record business was supplanted by radio in the late 1920's. Just as radio strengthened the record business eventually, Rackmil feels that television will do much to help motion pictures.

"One medium of entertainment does not take the place of another," he said. "That has been demonstrated. There is a place for each of them."

Accompanying Rackmil to the luncheon were Al Daff, newly named executive vice-president of Universal; Maurice Bergman, public relations executive for "U," Phil Gerard, publicity manager, and Milton Livingston, trade press contact.

Father of Jack Harris

Funeral services were held yesterday for Philip Harris, father of Jack P. Harris, film buyer for Walter Reade Theatres. Harris died here Sunday after a long illness. He is survived by two other sons, Irving J. and Bernard, and by his widow, Lena. Services were held at the Brettschneider Funeral Home, with burial at New Mount Carmel Cemetery.

one shilling and above, A.B.C., Gaumont British, Granada Theatres and Odeon are reluctantly compelled for most of their theatres to make some small increases in the prices of admission with effect from and including Sunday, August 3."

A spot round-up of reactions reveals sharp division of opinion among independent exhibitors in regard to the circuit lead. Harry Mears, last year's Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association president, for example, feels that the circuits should have consulted CEA before coming to a decision.

Yorkshire's J. X. Prendergast will not accept the lead. Like other North-country theatremen he feels the pinch of the slump currently affecting the textile industries.

Hinge Approves

CEA's treasurer E. J. Hinge—accepted as one of the industry's elder statesmen—on the other hand takes count of rising costs. Hinge also operates in the North-country. He applauds the circuit decision. So does London's Theo Fligelstone.

Says Fligelstone: "The circuits have acted wisely, for this may be the last opportunity the industry will have of adjusting prices to the general cost-of-living level. Now that we have flexibility we should make the most of it."

It is regarded as significant that the joint statement from the circuits used the phrase "for most of their theatres." That, it is said, gives the circuits a useful escape-hatch in areas where independents embark on a price-cutting campaign.

most advance penetration for a picture, Kaufman observed that coordination of publicity, advertising and exploitation demands that a picture be made at least one year before its release.

Turning to "Sudden Fear," which RKO Radio is distributing, Kaufman called it an example of integrating selling with production.

"Plans on selling 'Sudden Fear' started with the writing of the script," he says, "and that took place over a year ago. Many things in the script were geared for exploitation and selling."

Cites Example

As an example, he cites cooperation with Western Pacific Railroad. A sequence of "Sudden Fear" brings Joan Crawford and Jack Palance together on the line's San Francisco-bound Zephyr. The railroad furnished the equipment, and has worked out an extensive advertising campaign of its own through 24 sheets for its railroad stations, and window displays in every location in its territory, with agents to be brought to San Francisco for the picture's presentation.

Kaufman estimates that Don Prince, publicity director of RKO Radio, has so far secured the equivalent of $5,000,000 of commercial advertising.

"'Sudden Fear' is one of the first big features that will use TV as a medium of advertising," said Kaufman. Radio's Terry Turner, RKO's exploitation director, has made 12 special TV trailers. The eight one-minute and four 20-second trailers will be a supplement to the newspaper advertising campaign.

eral McGranery by Wilbur Snaper, president of National Allied. Snaper's letter declared that the wiping out of a $2,500,000,000 industry would be on the Justice Department's conscience.

Rotus Harvey, president of Western Theatre Owners, has sent from San Francisco to Eric A. Johnston, now on the Coast, a wire pledging to the Motion Picture Association of America president support in fighting the government's complaint. He also offered his personal services in the fight. "If the Government wins this case," Harvey said, "all of us will be run out of business."

Call It 'Squeeze'

The Dallas exhibitor group, composed of R. J. O'Donnell, Col. H. A. Cole, Ed Rowley, Claude Ezell, H. J. Griffith and Phil Isley, wired Stevenson that that the suit "is so illogical and its pleadings are so drastic that we cannot construe it as anything but a political 'squeeze' on personalities thought to be Republican in sympathies. The suit wears so many earmarks of punitive and extortionate motives that it will outrage the entire electorate and confirm a widely held belief that bureaus under a Democratic administration are strong-arm political operatives and not administrators of law and equity."

The telegram also said that American motion picture theatre owners may be goaded into using their screens in "partisan political warfare, the personnel of our group being fairly well divided between the two parties. But action such as this, attacking the very foundations of our industry and threatening our livelihood and very existence, must inevitably drive us to the use of this powerful publicity medium in self-defense."

"Shock and amazement" at the suit was expressed by Robert Wile, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a letter to McGranery. He asked the Attorney-General to reconsider his department's action.

Skiatron President Sees Suit Benefitting Subscriber-Vision

"If the government succeeds in forcing the major motion picture companies to sell their films to television, subscription TV will be the only practical method of bridging the inevitable economic gap," Arthur Levey, President of Skiatron Electronics & Television Corporation, sponsors of the Subscriber-Vision pay-as-you-see television system, has indicated.

"Justice Department efforts to compel film distributors to make 16mm versions of their feature pictures available to television will inevitably strengthen the position of Subscriber-Vision and may hasten its introduction to the public," Mr. Levey said.

"Even if the government wins its case and the movie firms offer their pictures for sale, the question still remains: Who can afford this celluloid bounty? The picture people will undoubtedly put a stiff price on their product, and justly so. Neither the sponsors, nor the networks, nor the individual stations will be able to meet it.

"Only through subscription TV, which transfers the boxoffice directly and effectively to the living room, will television be able to afford Hollywood's better films."

Television--Radio

EVERYTHING HAPPENS in cycles, mega, kilo and ordinary. Just about 20 years ago your reporter was writing a column about film folk and their doings at the Paramount Studios at Astoria, L. I. and Warner's Vitaphone plant in Flatbush. Last Thursday at the Seaboard Studios where they're producing a series of 13 Ed & Pegeen Fitzgerald TV comedies, we saw so many familiar faces on the set that for a brief moment or two we thought we were witnessing a flashback to 1932. Jack Etra was at the camera, Phil Rein on sound, Joe Redden, props, Dan Spillane and Jim Hennessy, grips, Art Kornfeld, chief electrician and Vince Matthews, former electrician, with Rein on sound, one of the crews that worked with Lubitsch on "The Big Pond" and "Smiling Lieutenant," with Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert and other Paramount stars. Reminds us of the old days, we said. "Old days?" snorted Jim Hennessy,"the real good old days were when most of us here worked with D. W. Griffith up in Mamaroneck, later moving to the Claremont Studios in the Bronx and then to the Pathe Studios at 135th St. where we made the Pearl White Pictures." Which all goes to prove our "cycle" contention. With the wedding of motion pictures and television, the use of the camera has once again given work to hundreds of capable technicians and studios that had been dark and silent for lo these many years are once again resounding to "sound the bells" "up to speed, roll 'em."

Just step up and call the little lady "Dynamo." Who else but Kathi Norris, whose daily series (11 A.M.-12 noon) on DuMont, with different gimmicks on different days and unique and novel special films, guests, and other interesting items adds up to but one phase of the gal's activities. Then she does her Saturday show on NBC and another series on ABC which makes Kathi one of the busiest distaffers on the nets. What a package! Beauty PLUS Brains. . . . Announcer Joe King has drawn up plans for his new home which he plans to build (no, a professional contractor will do the building) at the place he just purchased in Nyack, overlooking the Hudson River. . . . Bernie Schubert just made a kind of a new audience-participation series, "One Good Turn," which one of our spies informs us is a honey. Howard Linkoff is the producer with Craig Allen directing. . . .

George Wallach is back at his NBC Chores as production manager, after a seven-week stay on the Coast where he was assistant producer to Arch Obeler on the filming of a three-demensional feature, in Ansco Color, which will be roadshown, after opening in New York some time in October. Story deals with the natural obstacles and thrilling adventures encountered during the building of the first railroad through darkest Africa. . . . After completing "Taxi" for 20th Century-Fox release, Gregory Ratoff will not return to Hollywood. He has taken a three-year lease on an apartment on 72nd St. and plans to devote all of his time to TV film production. . . . Stuart Buchanan, former program supervisor at ABC, who produces "The Ohio Story" for McCann-Erickson (featured over five key Ohio stations) dropped into town for a few days. . . . Maggi McNellis has been signed to be Piccadilly Ciggies' new ABC-TVenus. Hal Roach arrived in town yesterday with 2 full-hour (in four segments) film series, "The Children's Hour" and "The Actors' Hour." Roach feels that film stars can enhance and prolong their professional lives by appearing on TV once a week but in brief sequences. Pictures have eight conveniently-spaced ends for commercials without interrupting the action. . . . Can anyone imagine? The original producer of such TV classics as "Lights Out," "The Clock" and "The Amazing Mr. Malone" is currently unassigned and in fact unemployed. TV, or for that matter motion picture producers should immediately phone Larry Schwab, Jr., grab his talents and then thank us by sending a check to the Damon Runyan Cancer Fund. . . . Don't be too surprised if NBC acquires rights to "Breakfast In Hollywood" for a fall series of simulcasts.

Albany Unit Meets on Compo Tax Drive

ALBANY, N. Y., July 28.—Elimination of the 20 per cent Federal amusement tax could be the "salvation" of many exhibitors, Leo Greenfield, Universal branch manager here, and distributor chairman in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' campaign, said today at a meeting of branch managers and salesmen. There being "no reason why the exhibitor cannot retain the money collected in the tax, if it is repealed," all exhibitors should contribute to COMPO for furtherance of the drive, Greenfield declared.

Branch managers were assigned to solicit smaller circuits and salesmen to independent exhibitors, with pledge cards. Division and district managers will contact larger circuits.

3 More Exhibitors Join 20% Tax Fight

Three more exhibitors sent word yesterday to Col. H. A. Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the national tax repeal campaign committee, that they will serve as committeemen to lead the campaign in their states. State campaign committeemen, representing all 48 states, now total 163.

Latest additions are Ralph E. McClanahan of Irvine, Ky., president of the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners; Samuel B. Landrum of Dallas, and Leo Peterson of Rapid City, president of the South Dakota Exhibitors' Association.

Sir Frank Lee, Undersecretary of the British Board of Trade, is due in Washington from London during the first week of September, the main purpose of his trip having to do with international matters unrelated to the motion picture business. He is said to have indicated, however, that he will use the opportunity to confer with Eric A. Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president, and a representative

Paris Talks Center On Subsidy Aspects

Talks have resumed in Paris between French government officials and Motion Picture Association of America representatives, and surrounding the new discussions is the possibility that the MPAA is leaning toward a unilateral film agreement providing some form of American subsidy for French production.

Paramount Puts 25 On Production Schedule for 1953

Paramount has scheduled 25 pictures for filming in 1953, the home office announced yesterday, terming it "the greatest number ever programmed by the company so far in advance."

Credit was given to Don Hartman, executive in charge of production, for the long-range planning. Y. Frank Freeman said the number represents "a record investment and evidences Paramount's supreme faith in the future of the motion picture business."

The pictures are: "The Big Song and Dance," starring Donald O'Connor and produced by Robert Emmett Dolan; "Rhapsody," produced by Bernard Smith and directed by Charles Vidor; "A New Kind of Love," produced and directed by Billy Wilder; "White Christmas" (Technicolor), costarring Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire, produced by Dolan; "South

Film Censorship Is Assailed by Lust

ROCKVILLE, Md., July 29.—Censorship of motion pictures is an unconstitutional infringement of personal liberty, a curtailment of the public's choice to make its own decisions and an insult to the intelligence and inherent decencies of the American people, Sidney B. Lust, head of Sidney Lust Theatres, declared here before the Kiwanis Club.

Citing the Supreme Court's decision in the "Miracle" case, Lust declared that the Court "views any law that re-

Since the U. S. Government has as yet issued no regulations regarding the proposed tax "spin-off" provisions of the Revenue Act of 1951, 20th Century-Fox has decided to revert to its original plan of reorganization under the consent decree, namely to set up a new theatre company, to be called National Theatres, and a new picture company, to be known as Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.

D of J, Answering Irate Exhibitors, Says TV Suit Not Meant to Exterminate Them

Washington, July 29.—The Justice Department is assuring exhibitors that its anti-trust suit to force producers to make 16mm. films more readily available to television is not aimed at putting theatre owners out of business.

This is the tenor of a letter being sent by acting anti-trust chief Newell A. Clapp to Robert O'Donnell and other exhibitors who have protested the suit to the Department. The letter will also go out to other theatre owners who write in the future.

The letter declares that the Justice Department is well aware of the competition that theatre owners are getting from television, and that these problems will be carefully considered in any relief finally sought from the court if the producers are found guilty of violating the anti-trust laws. It promises that the Justice Department's purpose in bringing the suit is not to deprive theatre owners of an opportunity to show films for profit, and calls attention to Paragraph Four of the complaint, which Justice says proves that the Department means to continue a reasonable clearance between theatre showing and 16mm. showing on television and other media.

1951 Year of Progress for Italian Film Industry

WASHINGTON, July 29. — The year 1951 was one of progress and prosperity for all segments of Italy's motion picture industry and there are indications that 1952 will bring even greater developments, the Department of Commerce reports. The volume and quality of Italian productions in 1951 reached an all-time high with record audience acceptance, as reflected in the level of box-office receipts and the marked increase in exports, particularly to the United States, it was said in the report, prepared by Nathan Golden, head of the film section of Commerce

Exports of Italian pictures inereased from 121 contracts in 16 countries in 1946 to 948 contracts in 62 countries in 1951. Imports of films, on the other hand, declined, which was said to indicate further the growing audience acceptance of Italian product. In 1946 Italian films represented only 13 per cent of the films exhibited in Italy, against about 30 per cent in 1951, said Commerce.

In 1951 Italian production reached its highest level with 110 feature films, 350 short subjects, and 300 newsreel and special event films produced. In 1951 production activities utilized 80 per cent of their capacity, affording almost full employment for all film workmen, technicians, and artists. About 80 per cent of Italy's production potential is now centered in the Rome area.

Gross box-office receipts in 1951 were estimated at 70,000,000,000 lire, compared with 61,450,000,000 lire in 1950. Approximately 60 per cent or 42,000,000,000 lire came from United States films, 24 per cent from Italian films, and 16 per cent from other foreign films. There are about 10,500 motion picture theatres in Italy, and attendance in 1951 was estimated at 700,000,000, compared with 653,000,000 in 1950, and 607,000,000 in 1949.

Import permits granted for feature films in 1951 totaled 342, of which 230 were for United States films, while in 1950 a total of 539 import permits were granted, 394 for United States films.

Attacks on Industry Scored by Duggan

Asserting that it has become something of a vogue in certain circles to attack the industry, Pat Duggan, producer of Paramount's "Just for You," Technicolor musical with Bing Crosby and Jane Wyman, declared here yesterday that the trade press is the ideal medium for answering the attacks.

Duggan said better pictures are coming up all the time and the industry is in better shape today from a product viewpoint than "10 or 12 years ago."

Citing the importance of the industry, Duggan said that when the history of this century is written, the "Goldwyns, Mayers, Zukors and others will be high up on the list of industry makers."

Duggan said "Just for You" reflects the new musicals that will be coming from Paramount in the next few years under the influence of Don Hartman, in charge of production. He outlined them as having more substantial stories and more substantial characterizations rather than merely a series of songs put together around plot cliches.

"Just for You" was brought in at "around $2,000,000," Duggan said. It was his first production. Next on his agenda is "Reaching for the Stars," to start in October.

'Lady of Fatima' at N.Y. Astor and Bijou

"The Miracle of Our Lady of Fatima," Warner Brothers' new picture in WarnerColor about the shrine of a small town in Portugal, will open a two-theatre engagement in New York on August 21 at the Astor and Bijou theatres. A special invitation premiere will be held at the Astor on the previous evening.

The Bijou will present "The Miracle" on a reserved seat basis, with matinee performances Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays and evening performances daily. The Astor will show the film on a continuous performance basis.

RKO Theatres Will Hold JDA Meeting

Continuing the series of home office meetings in the industry's campaign on behalf of the Joint Defense Appeal, key executives and other personnel of RKO theatres will hold a meeting today in the company's projection room here, it was announced by Harry Kalmine, of Warner Brothers, chairman of the home office division of JDA. Leon Goldberg, Universal Pictures, and Edward L. Fabian, Fabian Theatres, are co-chairmen of the industry-wide drive.

Previous meetings in the home office division were held at Universal and at United Artists.

$4,380,000 Set for 'Good' Mex. Films

Mexico City, July 29.—The trade's own bank, the semi-official Banco Nacional Cinematografico, has made $4,380,000 available to producers with the sole condition that they make really good pictures for the sake of Mexico and themselves. These pictures, the bank stressed, must be strictly in accord with President Miguel Aleman's demand for films that are entertaining and of high moral tone.

TOA, U.S. Suit

statement expressed TOA's "shock" at the Department of Justice's action and in its naming of TOA as a co-conspirator in "alleged claims of restraint of interstate commerce in 16mm. film." While it was named a co-conspirator, TOA was excluded from the government's list of defendants, who number 12.

With the board's approval, TOA would seek to intervene in the case, and thereby become one of the defendants. However, if the government opposed TOA's intervention the court would not sanction the organization's becoming a defendant.

TOA "knows no reason at all" why it should have been named a co-conspirator by the Justice Department, Levy said. "As general counsel," he added, "I feel very keenly TOA's and my obligations to our constituents, and to the entire industry, to do all in our power, by all means available to us, to strike down this brazen attack. I shall place the entire matter before our board of directors for full discussion at its next meeting in September, at the annual convention."

Levy said he would ask the board to decide whether or not it wishes to take the necessary steps to seek permission to be made a party defendant "so that we may better, and to the fullest possible extent, combat this unjustifiable and unwarranted attempt on the part of the Federal Government to invade the motion picture industry."

The meeting also gave final approval to plans for a motion picture exhibit at the Indiana State Fair to key a second "Movietime, U.S.A.," tour the first week in September. Bob Wile, executive secretary of Ohio Allied, was here to exchange ideas on the fair exhibit.

THE new Look, dated August 12 and just received, carries Universal's full-page, full-color ad on "The World in His Arms" well up front, and RKO Radio's similarly strong color page on "The Big Sky" close by. There is also a "Sex Appeal Poll"—"what men notice first about women"—and while Marilyn Monroe isn't mentioned, she will be thought of. To top it off, a four-page section is titled simply "lana"—with one full page in color of the M-G-M star and three other pages of pictures, including one of "The Merry Widow" in her Victorian cradle tub. And for good measure, there is a back-of-the-book serious piece, entitled "Hollywood Goes TV," by Look's executive editor, and an article on "TV Bungling," by Abel Green. It's a lot of magazine for the money, with accent on pictures.

saved stockholders the tax on the new stock they received following divorcement by avoiding the organization of one or more of the new companies.

Rather than delay the reorganization further, since it appears to the company that no "spin-off" regulations will be issued, it was proposed to proceed with the original plan and to complete the reorganization on or about September 27.

Adopted October 4

The plan, less the authorized amendment, also was adopted at the October 4 meeting. It contemplates (a) the organization of a new theatre company, to be called National Theatres, Inc., which will take over the interests of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation in the common stock of Wesco Theatres Corporation and Roxy Theatre, Inc.; (b) the organization of a new picture company which will be incorporated in Delaware under the name of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and which will take over the balance of the assets of the present company; (c) the dissolution of the present Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; and (d) the distribution of the stock in the new picture company and the new theatre company to the stockholders of the present Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation in exchange for their present shares, on the basis of one share of stock in each new company for each present share of the present company. Both these new companies have filed applications for the listing of their stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

Had the amendment been adopted, the new theatre company would have been known as Wesco Theatres.

Mexico City Theatres Averaging Gross Income of $250,000 Weekly

Mexico City, July 29.—The 127 theatres operating here are doing well judging from official figures which show that their combined weekly gross averages about $250,000. That income yields the municipal treasury some $47,300 weekly. Taxes on theatre receipts are on a sliding scale. Those charging up to 12 cents pay 12.65 per cent. Those charging more than 12 cents pay 16.10 per cent.

Theatre business here has improved greatly of late because of the exhibition of really good U. S., Mexican and foreign pictures, the Treasury said.

The de luxe Cine Roble, newest first-run theatre, did the biggest business during the first half of this year, grossing $404,000. The Cine Alameda, pioneer of Mexican picture houses, was runner-up with a $289,000 gross. Grossing more than $100,000 each were the Metropolitan, Palacio Chino, Mexico, Olimpia, Real Cinema and Nacional, all first-run, and the Opera, a subsequent run.

The municipal government is investigating complaints of an alleged racket practiced by minor city employes who are selling for half price passes to theatres that should be given gratis. The trade estimates that this costs it more than $250,000 yearly.

Others from the MPAA who also will sit in on the preliminary talks are Joyce O'Hara and John G. McCarthy, vice-presidents. James Mulvey and Alfred Crown probably will represent the SIMPP if Ellis G. Arnall, who is on leave as president during his service as U. S. Price Stabilizer, has not returned by that time.

Arrangements are expected to be made at the meetings for further talks, probably in London, at a later date. The present two-year agreement, which was renegotiated a year ago, will expire at the end of September. It provided for remittances of $17,000,000 and set up a "bonus" arrangement which established some 27 methods whereby additional remittances could be secured. These additional remittances are said to have totaled approximately $4,500,000.

Paris Talks

Picture Producers some time ago went on record as unqualifiedly opposed to entering into any agreement that would provide such subsidization.

The current talks in Paris were reported to be centering around Article III of the French government decree, which article authorizes the issuance of additional import permits to countries that assist French films. Some MPAA member companies are known to be willing to sign a subsidy agreement in order to increase exports to France.

Participating in the current talks are F. W. Allport, chairman of the MPAA delegation, and the Association's Theodore R. Smith and Gene Van Dee. It was indicated here that later on, after clarification of certain aspects of Article III are arrived at, the U. S. State Department will be invited to resume its role in the negotiations, which commenced on the government level.

200 Films Entered In Venice Festival

VENICE, Italy, July 29.—Two hundred films from 27 nations have been entered in the Venice Film Festival, it is reported.

The United States is presenting 11 films at the Scientific and Art Documentary Exhibition, under the auspices of the U. S. State Department, and nine other films selected from independent production by the Film Council of America, an organization appointed by the government to make this choice. Eighteen other films will be presented by the U. S. at the Festival of Films for Children.

Germans Produced 13 in 1st Quarter

WASHINGTON, July 29.—During the first quarter of 1952 Western German producers completed 13 feature films, according to Department of Commerce film chief Nathan D. Golden.

At present there are about 40 producers of feature films in Germany. There are 29 studios and 34 stages.

During the first quarter of 1952 a total of 141 feature films were approved for exhibition by the Voluntary Self Censorship Board, which censors all films shown in Germany. Of these 141 features, 120 were foreign productions, 12 were new German pictures and nine were German films produced prior to 1945. Of the 120 foreign features approved, 81 were United States films, 12 were French, eight Italian, five Austrian, five Mexican, five British, two Swedish, and one each from Czechoslovakia and Denmark. Six features were rejected by the censors, two of which were of German origin, three were United States films and one British.

Since the German Federal Republic has signed the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the only possibility to curtail the showing of foreign films in Western Germany would be by a screen quota law. A draft quota law has been before the Federal Parliament for approximately a year, but no action has been taken. The practical value of such a law is questioned in several quarters. Film theatre owners are opposed to it, since it would compel them to reserve a certain amount of screen time for German productions, regardless of their quality or box-office appeal, Golden's report said.

Motion Picture Daily Feature Reviews

"Affair in Trinidad"

(Columbia)

THE RETURN OF RITA HAYWORTH to the screen after a three-year absence is in itself a factor that constitutes good box-office news. And playing opposite her in this drama of espionage in Trinidad is none other than her old partner of "Gilda," Glen Ford. More material for exploitation-minded exhibitors to work with are two torrid, native song-dances which Miss Hayworth delivers in appropriate style.

As for the story itself, it seems like a compound of routine elements and situations seen before in many spy melodramas. Miss Hayworth appears as an American nightclub entertainer in Trinidad who learns about the unaccountable suicide of her husband. Before the story is long underway it appears that he was actually caught up in the tentacles of a spy ring and liquidated as a safety measure. It gradually evolves that Alexander Scourby, a suave man-of-the-world, who is in love with Miss Hayworth, is the head of the ring. Action starts to percolate when Ford, brother of the deceased, arrives on the scene and starts digging at the roots of the murder. In good time he falls in love with Miss Hayworth, all of which creates a thorny triangle.

Complications and misunderstandings develop to a point where Miss Hayworth, fearing vengeance upon Ford, puts up a strategic act of wild abandon at a party. Ford slaps her sharply and walks out. In the meantime, Miss Hayworth does some private sleuthing and finds evidence which proves a plot against the U. S. And just when Miss Hayworth's life is about to be snuffed out, Ford makes a rescuing entrance.

Others in the cast of Vincent Sherman's production are Valerie Bettis, a shapely, loquacious member of the spy ring, and Torin Thatcher, of the British Colonial Police.

A Beckworth Corp. Production, it was directed by Sherman from the screenplay by Oscar Saul and James Gunn. Running time, 98 minutes. General audience classification. For August release. MANDEL HERBSTMAN

"Last Train from Bombay"

(Columbia)

INDIA IS THE LOCALE of this melodrama which pits Jon Hall against a terroristic Hindu band bent upon creating civil strife there. Youngsters may find the action in the film somewhat engrossing, but adults probably will react unfavorably to the episodic plot contrivances which makes the film incredulous to a large degree.

Hall, young American diplomat, learns of a plot to blow up a train upon his arrival in India. During the course of his attempts to thwart the plot, he is innocently accused of murder and hunted by the police. His adventures are highlighted by cloak-and-dagger developments, punctuated by dagger-throwing and fisticuffs. In true formula lines, the leader of the terroristic band is unveiled and Hall marries the girl.

The formula motif of this film, while it may be of some merit to those who like their story simple, yet action packed, fails to be enhanced either by good acting or credulous scenery.

The producer is Sam Katzman, while Fred F. Sears directed, from a story and screenplay by Robert Yale Libott. Others in the cast include Christine Larson, Lisa Ferraday, Douglas R. Kennedy and Michael Fox.

Running time, 72 minutes. General adult classification. For August release. MURRAY HOROWITZ

"Woman of the North Country"

(Republic)

"WOMAN OF THE NORTH COUNTRY" has several favorable qualities, not the least of which are the beauteous Minnesota country, enhanced by Trucolor, framed in a fairly interesting, although at times slow-moving, melodramatic story, and a cast containing some pretty marketable names, including Ruth Hussey, Rod Cameron, John Agar, Gale Storm, J. Carrol Naish, Jay Flippen and Grant Withers.

The tale concerns the development of Minnesota's Mesabi iron ore range at the turn of the century and pits Ruth Hussey, a woman of will and established wealth, against Cameron, rugged upstart out to develop the Mesabi to the detriment of Miss Hussey's iron holdings. The advantage held by Cameron, as title holder to the Mesabi range, is that the ore there lies only several feet below the surface and can be mined by steamshovel, as against the conventional and more expensive method of shaft mining.

The screenplay by Norman Reilly Raines depicts Miss Hussey as a beautiful but power-mad heiress to an established iron empire, the safety of which is threatened by Cameron's development of the Mesabi. When Miss Hussey's out-and-out gangster techniques (carried out by her brother—who gets killed in the process) fail to stop Cameron, she uses beauty to lure him into marriage. Cameron still doesn't realize that she is out to break him until she blows up a railroad bridge and later confesses her scheming in the mistaken notion that she already has forced him into bankruptcy. A bullet fired by a jealous lover puts an end to her, however, and leaves Cameron to resume with his first love, Gale Storm, whom he had forsaken for the lady of fortune.

Miss Hussey is a convincing villainess, giving the character a sort of sparkling insincerity. Cameron is handy with the fists, if slow on the up-take. Others in the cast include Jim Davis, Taylor Holmes, Barry Kelley, Stephen Bekassy, Howard Petrie, Hank Worden and Virginia Brissac. Joseph Kane was associate producer-director. The story is by Charles Marquis Warren and Prescott Chaplin.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, August 20.

"Sea Tiger"

(Monogram) Hollywood, July 29

WILLIAM F. BRODY, executive producer, and Wesley E. Barry, producer, have come up with a tortured tale of chicanery aboard ship and ashore. This venture into the field of suspense fiction goes all the way back to the film serials of the industry's unsophisticated infancy ("$1,000,000 Mystery," "Black Box," etc.) for its pattern, and that was going too far. In those blissful days the rules could be changed in the middle of the game, a hero made a villain or vice versa, and the destination of the plot revised without notice, but that was long ago. Today is too late for it.

The screenplay by Sam Roeca, from an original by Charles Yerkow, has to do with an American freighter abandoned by the Japs off New Guinea and the attempts of a wide variety of individuals to obtain possession of jewels secreted aboard the craft. The serial technique crops up when, the quest for the jewels having been on a long while, it comes out that the jewels are just a front for a fortune in gold bars also aboard. By this time it doesn't matter whether it's jewels or gold the baddies are after, because credibility went out the window long since.

John Archer, Harry Lauter and Marguerite Chapman bear the brunt of an acting burden that leaves them room for nothing but improvement.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

"Thundering Caravans"

(Republic)

IN A WESTERN of standard design and swift pace, Allan (Rocky) Lane triumphs over a crooked female newspaper publisher. Lending a hand with the fisticuffs and law enforcement are Rocky's old friend, Eddy Waller, the town sheriff, and Richard Crane, Waller's assistant, who is a reformed bad-man now on the side of the law.

M. Coates Webster's story casts Rocky in his usual role of U. S. Marshal, this time assigned to solve a series of ore wagon robberies in the community where Waller is sheriff. The blame for the robberies has been heaped on the sheriff, principally as a result of a newspaper campaign instigated by publisher Isabel Randolph. Miss Randolph is the mastermind of the holdup gang and is maneuvering to put her brother into the sheriff's post.

Her nefarious plans include the framing of young Crane in a holdup, to discredit the incumbent and bring in her brother by acclamation. Rocky eventually discovers the plot and brings all concerned to justice, but not however, before the usual riding and shooting and a knock-down, drag-out brawl at the bandits' ghost town retreat.

Mona Knox is Crane's pretty sweetheart while Roy Barcroft upholds the wrong cause, as usual. Rudy Ralston was associate producer. Harry Keller directed.

Running time, 54 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

quires submission of films in advance of exhibition to a censor as an encroachment on constitutional rights to be guarded against." In the light of this, he said, none of the seven states maintaining censor boards have taken any action to revise their statutes.

The industry, armed with the dictum of the Supreme Court, is determined to give battle to censorship everywhere it exists, Lust asserted.

Lust pointed out the safeguards the industry has against indecency on the screen. They are the fact that films are produced by high-minded and honorable men and women and the existence of the Production Code which "tangibly demonstrates the industry's recognition of its responsibilities to the American public."

Film Censorship Is Assailed by Lust

ROCKVILLE, Md., July 29.—Censorship of motion pictures is an unconstitutional infringement of personal liberty, a curtailment of the public's choice to make its own decisions and an insult to the intelligence and inherent decencies of the American people, Sidney B. Citing the Supreme Court's decision in the "Miracle" case, Lust declared that the Court "views any law that re-

D of J, Answering Irate Exhibitors, Says TV Suit Not Meant to Exterminate Them

Washington, July 29.—The Justice Department is assuring exhibitors that its anti-trust suit to force producers to make 16mm. films more readily available to television is not aimed at putting theatre owners out of business.

This is the tenor of a letter being sent by acting anti-trust chief Newell A. Clapp to Robert O'Donnell and other exhibitors who have protested the suit to the Department. The letter will also go out to other theatre owners who write in the future.

The letter declares that the Justice Department is well aware of the competition that theatre owners are getting from television, and that these problems will be carefully considered in any relief finally sought from the court if the producers are found guilty of violating the anti-trust laws. It promises that the Justice Department's purpose in bringing the suit is not to deprive theatre owners of an opportunity to show films for profit, and calls attention to Paragraph Four of the complaint, which Justice says proves that the Department means to continue a reasonable clearance between theatre showing and 16mm. showing on television and other media.

1951 Year of Progress for Italian Film Industry

WASHINGTON, July 29. — The year 1951 was one of progress and prosperity for all segments of Italy's motion picture industry and there are indications that 1952 will bring even greater developments, the Department of Commerce reports. The volume and quality of Italian productions in 1951 reached an all-time high with record audience acceptance, as reflected in the level of box-office receipts and the marked increase in exports, particularly to the United States, it was said in the report, prepared by Nathan Golden, head of the film section of Commerce

Exports of Italian pictures increased from 121 contracts in 16 countries in 1946 to 948 contracts in 62 countries in 1951. Imports of films, on the other hand, declined, which was said to indicate further the growing audience acceptance of Italian product. In 1946 Italian films represented only 13 per cent of the films exhibited in Italy, against about 30 per cent in 1951, said Commerce.

In 1951 Italian production reached its highest level with 110 feature films, 350 short subjects, and 300 newsreel and special event films produced. In 1951 production activities utilized 80 per cent of their capacity, affording almost full employment for all film workmen, technicians, and artists. About 80 per cent of Italy's production potential is now centered in the Rome area.

Gross box-office receipts in 1951 were estimated at 70,000,000,000 lire, compared with 61,450,000,000 lire in 1950. Approximately 60 per cent or 42,000,000,000 lire came from United States films, 24 per cent from Italian films, and 16 per cent from other foreign films. There are about 10,500 motion picture theatres in Italy, and attendance in 1951 was estimated at 700,000,000, compared with 653,000,000 in 1950, and 607,000,000 in 1949.

Import permits granted for feature films in 1951 totaled 342, of which 230 were for United States films, while in 1950 a total of 539 import permits were granted, 394 for United States films.

Attacks on Industry Scored by Duggan

Asserting that it has become something of a vogue in certain circles to attack the industry, Pat Duggan, producer of Paramount's "Just for You," Technicolor musical with Bing Crosby and Jane Wyman, declared here yesterday that the trade press is the ideal medium for answering the attacks.

Duggan said better pictures are coming up all the time and the industry is in better shape today from a product viewpoint than "10 or 12 years ago."

Citing the importance of the industry, Duggan said that when the history of this century is written, the "Goldwyns, Mayers, Zukors and others will be high up on the list of industry makers."

Duggan said "Just for You" reflects the new musicals that will be coming from Paramount in the next few years under the influence of Don Hartman, in charge of production. He outlined them as having more substantial stories and more substantial characterizations rather than merely a series of songs put together around plot cliches.

"Just for You" was brought in at "around $2,000,000," Duggan said. It was his first production. Next on his agenda is "Reaching for the Stars," to start in October.

'Lady of Fatima' at N.Y. Astor and Bijou

The Bijou will present "The Miracle" on a reserved seat basis, with matinee performances Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays and evening performances daily. The Astor will show the film on a continuous performance basis.

$4,380,000 Set for 'Good' Mex. Films

Mexico City, July 29.—The trade's own bank, the semi-official Banco Nacional Cinematografico, has made $4,380,000 available to producers with the sole condition that they make really good pictures for the sake of Mexico and themselves. These pictures, the bank stressed, must be strictly in accord with President Miguel Aleman's demand for films that are entertaining and of high moral tone.

TOA, U.S. Suit

statement expressed TOA's "shock" at the Department of Justice's action and in its naming of TOA as a co-conspirator in "alleged claims of restraint of interstate commerce in 16mm. film." While it was named a co-conspirator, TOA was excluded from the government's list of defendants, who number 12.

With the board's approval, TOA would seek to intervene in the case, and thereby become one of the defendants. However, if the government opposed TOA's intervention the court would not sanction the organization's becoming a defendant.

TOA "knows no reason at all" why it should have been named a co-conspirator by the Justice Department, Levy said. "As general counsel," he added, "I feel very keenly TOA's and my obligations to our constituents, and to the entire industry, to do all in our power, by all means available to us, to strike down this brazen attack. I shall place the entire matter before our board of directors for full discussion at its next meeting in September, at the annual convention."

Levy said he would ask the board to decide whether or not it wishes to take the necessary steps to seek permission to be made a party defendant "so that we may better, and to the fullest possible extent, combat this unjustifiable and unwarranted attempt on the part of the Federal Government to invade the motion picture industry."

Allied officers also will make personal calls on party leaders, including Democratic national chairman Frank E. McKinney. The meeting also gave final approval to plans for a motion picture exhibit at the Indiana State Fair to key a second "Movietime, U.S.A.," tour the first week in September. Bob Wile, executive secretary of Ohio Allied, was here to exchange ideas on the fair exhibit.

THE new Look, dated August 12 and just received, carries Universal's full-page, full-color ad on "The World in His Arms" well up front, and RKO Radio's similarly strong color page on "The Big Sky" close by. There is also a "Sex Appeal Poll"—"what men notice first about women"—and while Marilyn Monroe isn't mentioned, she will be thought of. To top it off, a four-page section is titled simply "lana"—with one full page in color of the M-G-M star and three other pages of pictures, including one of "The Merry Widow" in her Victorian cradle tub. And for good measure, there is a back-of-the-book serious piece, entitled "Hollywood Goes TV," by Look's executive editor, and an article on "TV Bungling," by Abel Green. It's a lot of magazine for the money, with accent on pictures.

He thinks fan magazines are closer to the public than the studios, and that we can believe they are standing right alongside the fans at the magazine counter.

saved stockholders the tax on the new stock they received following divorcement by avoiding the organization of one or more of the new companies.

Rather than delay the reorganization further, since it appears to the company that no "spin-off" regulations will be issued, it was proposed to proceed with the original plan and to complete the reorganization on or about September 27.

Adopted October 4

The plan, less the authorized amendment, also was adopted at the October 4 meeting. It contemplates (a) the organization of a new theatre company, to be called National Theatres, Inc., which will take over the interests of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation in the common stock of Wesco Theatres Corporation and Roxy Theatre, Inc.; (b) the organization of a new picture company which will be incorporated in Delaware under the name of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and which will take over the balance of the assets of the present company; (c) the dissolution of the present Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; and (d) the distribution of the stock in the new picture company and the new theatre company to the stockholders of the present Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation in exchange for their present shares, on the basis of one share of stock in each new company for each present share of the present company. Both these new companies have filed applications for the listing of their stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

Had the amendment been adopted, the new theatre company would have been known as Wesco Theatres.

Mexico City Theatres Averaging Gross Income of $250,000 Weekly

Mexico City, July 29.—The 127 theatres operating here are doing well judging from official figures which show that their combined weekly gross averages about $250,000. That income yields the municipal treasury some $47,300 weekly. Taxes on theatre receipts are on a sliding scale. Those charging up to 12 cents pay 12.65 per cent. Those charging more than 12 cents pay 16.10 per cent.

Theatre business here has improved greatly of late because of the exhibition of really good U. S., Mexican and foreign pictures, the Treasury said.

The de luxe Cine Roble, newest first-run theatre, did the biggest business during the first half of this year, grossing $404,000. The Cine Alameda, pioneer of Mexican picture houses, was runner-up with a $289,000 gross. Grossing more than $100,000 each were the Metropolitan, Palacio Chino, Mexico, Olimpia, Real Cinema and Nacional, all first-run, and the Opera, a subsequent run.

The municipal government is investigating complaints of an alleged racket practiced by minor city employes who are selling for half price passes to theatres that should be given gratis. The trade estimates that this costs it more than $250,000 yearly.

of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, on a new film agreement.

Others from the MPAA who also will sit in on the preliminary talks are Joyce O'Hara and John G. McCarthy, vice-presidents. James Mulvey and Alfred Crown probably will represent the SIMPP if Ellis G. Arnall, who is on leave as president during his service as U. S. Price Stabilizer, has not returned by that time.

Arrangements are expected to be made at the meetings for further talks, probably in London, at a later date. The present two-year agreement, which was renegotiated a year ago, will expire at the end of September. It provided for remittances of $17,000,000 and set up a "bonus" arrangement which established some 27 methods whereby additional remittances could be secured. These additional remittances are said to have totaled approximately $4,500,000.

Paris Talks

Picture Producers some time ago went on record as unqualifiedly opposed to entering into any agreement that would provide such subsidization.

The current talks in Paris were reported to be centering around Article III of the French government decree, which article authorizes the issuance of additional import permits to countries that assist French films. Some MPAA member companies are known to be willing to sign a subsidy agreement in order to increase exports to France.

Participating in the current talks are F. W. Allport, chairman of the MPAA delegation, and the Association's Theodore R. Smith and Gene Van Dee. It was indicated here that later on, after clarification of certain aspects of Article III are arrived at, the U. S. State Department will be invited to resume its role in the negotiations, which commenced on the government level.

200 Films Entered In Venice Festival

VENICE, Italy, July 29.—Two hundred films from 27 nations have been entered in the Venice Film Festival, it is reported.

The United States is presenting 11 films at the Scientific and Art Documentary Exhibition, under the auspices of the U. S. State Department, and nine other films selected from independent production by the Film Council of America, an organization appointed by the government to make this choice. Eighteen other films will be presented by the U. S. at the Festival of Films for Children.

Germans Produced 13 in 1st Quarter

WASHINGTON, July 29.—During the first quarter of 1952 Western German producers completed 13 feature films, according to Department of Commerce film chief Nathan D. Golden.

At present there are about 40 producers of feature films in Germany. There are 29 studios and 34 stages.

During the first quarter of 1952 a total of 141 feature films were approved for exhibition by the Voluntary Self Censorship Board, which censors all films shown in Germany. Of these 141 features, 120 were foreign productions, 12 were new German pictures and nine were German films produced prior to 1945. Of the 120 foreign features approved, 81 were United States films, 12 were French, eight Italian, five Austrian, five Mexican, five British, two Swedish, and one each from Czechoslovakia and Denmark. Six features were rejected by the censors, two of which were of German origin, three were United States films and one British.

Since the German Federal Republic has signed the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the only possibility to curtail the showing of foreign films in Western Germany would be by a screen quota law. A draft quota law has been before the Federal Parliament for approximately a year, but no action has been taken. The practical value of such a law is questioned in several quarters. Film theatre owners are opposed to it, since it would compel them to reserve a certain amount of screen time for German productions, regardless of their quality or box-office appeal, Golden's report said.

Motion Picture Daily Feature Reviews

(Columbia)

THE RETURN OF RITA HAYWORTH to the screen after a three-year absence is in itself a factor that constitutes good box-office news. And playing opposite her in this drama of espionage in Trinidad is none other than her old partner of "Gilda," Glen Ford. More material for exploitation-minded exhibitors to work with are two torrid, native song-dances which Miss Hayworth delivers in appropriate style.

As for the story itself, it seems like a compound of routine elements and situations seen before in many spy melodramas. Miss Hayworth appears as an American nightclub entertainer in Trinidad who learns about the unaccountable suicide of her husband. Before the story is long underway it appears that he was actually caught up in the tentacles of a spy ring and liquidated as a safety measure. It gradually evolves that Alexander Scourby, a suave man-of-the-world, who is in love with Miss Hayworth, is the head of the ring. Action starts to percolate when Ford, brother of the deceased, arrives on the scene and starts digging at the roots of the murder. In good time he falls in love with Miss Hayworth, all of which creates a thorny triangle.

Complications and misunderstandings develop to a point where Miss Hayworth, fearing vengeance upon Ford, puts up a strategic act of wild abandon at a party. Ford slaps her sharply and walks out. In the meantime, Miss Hayworth does some private sleuthing and finds evidence which proves a plot against the U. S. And just when Miss Hayworth's life is about to be snuffed out, Ford makes a rescuing entrance.

Others in the cast of Vincent Sherman's production are Valerie Bettis, a shapely, loquacious member of the spy ring, and Torin Thatcher, of the British Colonial Police.

A Beckworth Corp. Production, it was directed by Sherman from the screenplay by Oscar Saul and James Gunn. Running time, 98 minutes. General audience classification. For August release. MANDEL HERBSTMAN

"Last Train from Bombay"

(Columbia)

INDIA IS THE LOCALE of this melodrama which pits Jon Hall against a terroristic Hindu band bent upon creating civil strife there. Youngsters may find the action in the film somewhat engrossing, but adults probably will react unfavorably to the episodic plot contrivances which makes the film incredulous to a large degree.

Hall, young American diplomat, learns of a plot to blow up a train upon his arrival in India. During the course of his attempts to thwart the plot, he is innocently accused of murder and hunted by the police. His adventures are highlighted by cloak-and-dagger developments, punctuated by dagger-throwing and fisticuffs. In true formula lines, the leader of the terroristic band is unveiled and Hall marries the girl.

The formula motif of this film, while it may be of some merit to those who like their story simple, yet action packed, fails to be enhanced either by good acting or credulous scenery.

The producer is Sam Katzman, while Fred F. Sears directed, from a story and screenplay by Robert Yale Libott. Others in the cast include Christine Larson, Lisa Ferraday, Douglas R. Kennedy and Michael Fox.

Running time, 72 minutes. General adult classification. For August release. MURRAY HOROWITZ

"Woman of the North Country"

(Republic)

"WOMAN OF THE NORTH COUNTRY" has several favorable qualities, not the least of which are the beauteous Minnesota country, enhanced by Trucolor, framed in a fairly interesting, although at times slow-moving, melodramatic story, and a cast containing some pretty marketable names, including Ruth Hussey, Rod Cameron, John Agar, Gale Storm, J. Carrol Naish, Jay Flippen and Grant Withers.

The tale concerns the development of Minnesota's Mesabi iron ore range at the turn of the century and pits Ruth Hussey, a woman of will and established wealth, against Cameron, rugged upstart out to develop the Mesabi to the detriment of Miss Hussey's iron holdings. The advantage held by Cameron, as title holder to the Mesabi range, is that the ore there lies only several feet below the surface and can be mined by steamshovel, as against the conventional and more expensive method of shaft mining.

The screenplay by Norman Reilly Raines depicts Miss Hussey as a beautiful but power-mad heiress to an established iron empire, the safety of which is threatened by Cameron's development of the Mesabi. When Miss Hussey's out-and-out gangster techniques (carried out by her brother—who gets killed in the process) fail to stop Cameron, she uses beauty to lure him into marriage. Cameron still doesn't realize that she is out to break him until she blows up a railroad bridge and later confesses her scheming in the mistaken notion that she already has forced him into bankruptcy. A bullet fired by a jealous lover puts an end to her, however, and leaves Cameron to resume with his first love, Gale Storm, whom he had forsaken for the lady of fortune.

Miss Hussey is a convincing villainess, giving the character a sort of sparkling insincerity. Cameron is handy with the fists, if slow on the up-take. Others in the cast include Jim Davis, Taylor Holmes, Barry Kelley, Stephen Bekassy, Howard Petrie, Hank Worden and Virginia Brissac. Joseph Kane was associate producer-director. The story is by Charles Marquis Warren and Prescott Chaplin.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, August 20.

"Sea Tiger"

(Monogram) Hollywood, July 29

WILLIAM F. BRODY, executive producer, and Wesley E. Barry, producer, have come up with a tortured tale of chicanery aboard ship and ashore. This venture into the field of suspense fiction goes all the way back to the film serials of the industry's unsophisticated infancy ("$1,000,000 Mystery," "Black Box," etc.) for its pattern, and that was going too far. In those blissful days the rules could be changed in the middle of the game, a hero made a villain or vice versa, and the destination of the plot revised without notice, but that was long ago. Today is too late for it.

The screenplay by Sam Roeca, from an original by Charles Yerkow, has to do with an American freighter abandoned by the Japs off New Guinea and the attempts of a wide variety of individuals to obtain possession of jewels secreted aboard the craft. The serial technique crops up when, the quest for the jewels having been on a long while, it comes out that the jewels are just a front for a fortune in gold bars also aboard. By this time it doesn't matter whether it's jewels or gold the baddies are after, because credibility went out the window long since.

John Archer, Harry Lauter and Marguerite Chapman bear the brunt of an acting burden that leaves them room for nothing but improvement.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

"Thundering Caravans"

(Republic)

IN A WESTERN of standard design and swift pace, Allan (Rocky) Lane triumphs over a crooked female newspaper publisher. Lending a hand with the fisticuffs and law enforcement are Rocky's old friend, Eddy Waller, the town sheriff, and Richard Crane, Waller's assistant, who is a reformed bad-man now on the side of the law.

M. Coates Webster's story casts Rocky in his usual role of U. S. Marshal, this time assigned to solve a series of ore wagon robberies in the community where Waller is sheriff. The blame for the robberies has been heaped on the sheriff, principally as a result of a newspaper campaign instigated by publisher Isabel Randolph. Miss Randolph is the mastermind of the holdup gang and is maneuvering to put her brother into the sheriff's post.

Her nefarious plans include the framing of young Crane in a holdup, to discredit the incumbent and bring in her brother by acclamation. Rocky eventually discovers the plot and brings all concerned to justice, but not however, before the usual riding and shooting and a knock-down, drag-out brawl at the bandits' ghost town retreat.

Mona Knox is Crane's pretty sweetheart while Roy Barcroft upholds the wrong cause, as usual. Rudy Ralston was associate producer. Harry Keller directed.

Running time, 54 minutes. General audience classification. July release.

quires submission of films in advance of exhibition to a censor as an encroachment on constitutional rights to be guarded against." In the light of this, he said, none of the seven states maintaining censor boards have taken any action to revise their statutes.

The industry, armed with the dictum of the Supreme Court, is determined to give battle to censorship everywhere it exists, Lust asserted.

Lust pointed out the safeguards the industry has against indecency on the screen. They are the fact that films are produced by high-minded and honorable men and women and the existence of the Production Code which "tangibly demonstrates the industry's recognition of its responsibilities to the American public."

Jacobi Opposes Brennan In First Test Since '46

The IATSE convention in Minneapolis next week will differ from any of the labor union's biennial conclaves since 1946 in that one or more international officers making up the "official family" will be compelled to risk their posts in a balloting election.

This became known here yesterday when Vincent Jacobi, president of New York Stage Hands Local No. 1, which includes motion picture theatres in its jurisdiction, indicated that he has decided to run against James J. Brennan, candidate for reelection as third vice-president.

Brennan has the support of Richard F. Walsh, "IA" international president. However, during the past three

'Heat Sent Them to Theatres, Now They're Coming Back for More'

Cleveland, July 30.—Theatre attendance in a majority of spots in this territory that started an upswing with the TV Presidential convention presentations, is holding up, theatre owners report in the first expression of optimism displayed here in recent months. It is felt that all houses destined to shutter due to neighborhood changes, old age or lack of modern equipment, have closed and that from now on remaining theatres can look for a return to normalcy.

The excessive heat of June and July drove many into theatres to cool off. Many, managers report, had not been inside a theatre in a year or more. They like what they found and came back for more. "Now," one of the optimistic exhibitors states, "all we need is a steady flow of good pictures and we can reestablish our occasional patrons into permanent patrons."

Report Milwaukee, Baltimore Upswing

Two more key cities — Baltimore and Milwaukee—can be added to the growing list of those in which exhibitors report improved box-office conditions.

In Baltimore, business at neighborhood motion picture theatres during the past two weeks scored the best grosses of any similar period during the past year, or more, according to Leon B. Back, president of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland.

The question whether screen attractions drew increased audiences or patrons merely sought relief from an all-time record heat wave, only slightly dampened the optimism of his comment.

Milwaukee exhibitors report improved business and are optimistic for a continuance.

OMAHA, July 30.—Ted Emerson, publicity director for Tri-States Theatres, who is touring this territory serving as substitute manager for vacationing managers of all of the circuit's theatres, finds farm crops to be in very good condition. While conceding that the Justice Department's objective in filing its 16mm. anti-trust suit "is neither to destroy theatres nor to bar the production of feature films of high quality," Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, in a letter sent yesterday to the Department contended that, notwithstanding, "these would be the incidental and most important by-products of a successful prosecution of this suit."

"Just for You"

(Paramount)

BING CROSBY'S back, and Jane Wyman's got him. The self-styled "old groaner's" latest for Paramount is a dandy hunk of entertainment and a distinct credit to the production acumen of Pat Duggan. It is, for the most part, a frothy affair in color by Technicolor, with a rich cargo of production numbers and a light story in which humor, some mild family anxieties and song-making intertwine to form a delightful fabric of diversion for audiences of every composition.

There is a genuine stand-out quality in the production numbers, which reflects to the credit of director Elliott Nugent, choreographer Helen Tamiris, cameramen George Barnes, Gordon Jennings, Paul Lerpae and Farciot Edouart, and art directors Hal Pereira and Roland Anderson. All deserve mention because their efforts have combined to bring forth a superior piece of merchandise—a picture which should be as easy as pie to sell, and which should strike a bonanza at the box-office.

The plot: Crosby, a stage producer, and Miss Wyman, the star of his new musical, are in love. Being a busy man, widower Crosby hadn't been able to give as much attention as he would have liked to his 'teen-aged youngsters, Robert Arthur, who has fallen victim to the illusion that Miss Wyman is in love with him, and Natalie Wood, whose main ambition is to be admitted to an exclusive girls' school. Papa, faced with Arthur's hostility, when the truth about Miss Wyman's love interest is exposed, sets things in order with easy-going grace and uncommonly good understanding of the youngster's emotional problem. And Bing's well-known way with a song and a wink so captivates school supervisor Ethel Barrymore that Natalie is allowed to matriculate despite the trustee's aversion for "theatre people."

Rounding out the amiable supporting cast are Cora Witherspoon, Ben Lessy, Regis Toomey, Art Smith, Leon Tyler, Willis Bouchey and Herbert Vigran. Robert Carson's screenplay was based on the Stephen Vincent Benet story, "Famous."

months leaders in various locals across the country are known to have urged Jacobi to make the race. During the past year, it was reported in labor circles here, there has been a movement among leaders of locals to "crack" the "official family" headed by Walsh. Jacobi returned to New York yesterday following out-of-town meetings with opponents of the "official family" and disclosed his intention to run.

Jacobi said he has been pledged sufficient support by delegates from various parts of the country to make him feel certain he can unseat Brennan, a long-time rival in contests for the presidency of Local No. 1, which Jacobi heads. Jacobi has defeated Brenan in the last two elections for the local's presidency.

Except for the 1946 convention, when William P. Bennett of Washington ran unsuccessfully against Walsh for the "IA" presidency, the union's biennial elections have been voice-vote affairs, with the "official family" winning hands down. Walsh became president in 1941 following the Brown-Bioff scandals.

Jacobi's action is expected by other leaders of New York locals to encourage other aspirants to one or more of the nine "IA" vice-presidencies to run. The ninth vice-presidency, held by Louise Wright of Dallas, is very likely to be thrown open to balloting, according to observers. Balloting could extend the convention from its scheduled four days to at least six, it was said.

'IA' Convention Preliminaries Set at Board Meet This Week

MINNEAPOLIS, July 30.—Preliminaries to next week's IATSE convention here are being disposed of at a meeting of the organization's general executive board this week.

The "official family" of the Alliance was welcomed to Minneapolis by a committee consisting of William Donelly and Fred Ebert of Stage Employes Local No. 13, Al Kuiper and Wallace Yutzy of Moving Picture Machine Operators Local No. 219, Elizabeth Marietta of Theatrical Wardrobe Attendants Local No. 781 and Nora J. Gaines of Film Exchange Employes Local No. B-31.

Convention plans will be completed at this week's session of the board, with International president Richard F. Walsh, of Brooklyn, N. Y., presiding. Others in attendance are general secretary-treasurer William P. Raoul, Atlanta, Ga., and vice-presidents Harland Holmden, Cleveland, Ohio; James J. Brennan, New York City; Roger M. Kennedy, Detroit, Mich.; Felix D. Snow, Kansas City, Mo.; Carl G. Cooper, Los Angeles, Calif; Harry J. Abbott, Philadelphia, Pa.; Orin M. Jacobson, Tacoma, Wash., and Louise Wright, Dallas, Texas.

About 1,200 delegates to the convention will begin arriving this weekend from all parts of the United States and Canada.

"Island of Desire"

(Coronado—United Artists)

WHAT PRODUCER DAVID E. ROSE'S "Island of Desire," a Coronado production, lacks in credulity, is made up aplenty by the engrossing scenic wonder of the romantic British Indies island of Jamaica, whose long, entwining, exotic sandy beaches are thrillingly framed in color by Technicolor. For this photographic gem, credit should by given at the outset to cameraman Arthur Ibbetson who performed under the able direction of Stuart Heisler.

The latter did the best he could with a somewhat unconvincing tale of a beautiful woman, in the person of Linda Darnell, who is cast ashore from the wreck of a ship returning from the Far East with service men and women that is struck by a mine. Fate and the raging waters throw returning Corporal Tab Hunter on a raft with Linda and the two finally reach the unpopulated beaches. From that point onward, Hunter, who plays the part of a very young and unsophisticated soldier, develops a strong affection for Miss Darnell, who in more or less high sophistication does not return the affection, taking full cognizance of Hunter's youth.

The lad is really a miracle man in the construction of huts and gadgets to make life easier on the island. Like the proverbial rabbit in the hat he creates all kinds of cooking and eating and living utensils without tools or other implements, and even weaves clothes from plants on the beachside. A happy finale is reached after a plane crashes with Donald Gray, whose injuries are healed by Army Nurse Darnell. Both fall in love. The inevitable rescue ship steams over the horizon and young corporal Hunter steps aside as Linda and Gray sail homeward on their romantic way.

Others in the cast are John Laurie, Sheila Chong, Russell Waters, Hilda Fenemore, Brenda Hogan, Diana Decker, Peggy Hassard and Michael Newell. Stephanie Nordli wrote the screenplay, from the novel, "Saturday Island," by Hugh Brooke.

Most audiences will be entertained, despite the lack of credulity in spots and nearly all will be engrossed by the scenic beauty at the oceanside.

Running time, 103 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, August 4.

"Beware, My Lovely"

(Filmakers—RKO Radio)

IDA LUPINO, as a war widow back in the era of the first World War, goes through a strange one-day nightmare in "Beware, My Lovely." She hires an itinerant houseworker who turns out to be a "psycho." Robert Ryan plays the lead opposite Miss Lupino as the deranged man who holds her captive in her own house.

Both roles are acted with considerable strength and conviction. Although there is not much variation to the story, it becomes an unusual exercise in suspense as the tension mounts and the audience wonders what violence will befall Miss Lupino.

Although the screenplay by Mel Dinelli, based on his story and play, does not clearly outline the nature of Ryan's fitful disturbance, the whole sequence of events is entirely credible. Exhibitors in general will find audiences completely engrossed.

The story builds up gradually to the point where Miss Lupino, to her horror, learns that she is in the grip of a madman. Subsequent attempts to flee the house or get out messages seeking help are cunningly frustrated by Ryan. The picture concentrates on this interplay between captor and captive, although there are other roles of a secondary nature, played by Taylor Holmes, Barbara Whiting and James Willmas.

The picture ends on a note as unusual as everything that preceded. The mad mood suddenly leaves Ryan, and forgetting everything as though it were some passing siege of amnesia, Ryan quietly takes leave of Miss Lupino.

Harry Horner directed and Collier Young produced this Filmakers presentation.

Running time, 77 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

number of feature films as the court may deem necessary to eliminate the effects of this alleged conspiracy."

The Justice Department also asks for such other relief as the court may deem appropriate to establish competition in the distribution and exhibition of feature films, Brandt noted.

"We would like to remind the Justice Department," Brandt's letter continued, "that it was a similar request for relief that first brought competitive bidding into the motion picture industry. In seeking this relief, the Justice Department is proving that it is not 'cognizant of the problems confronting exhibitors' and that it will deprive theatre owners of an opportunity to exhibit motion pictures at a profit."

In his letters to Brandt and other exhibitors, Clapp averred that the objective of the suit is not to deprive theatres of an opportunity to exhibit films at a profit "nor do we think that the relief we ask for in the suit is reasonably subject to such an interpretation."

Brandt contended that "if the court ever directs the compulsory sale of feature films to TV, it will in effect be a more tragic error than the court-sponsored system of competitive bidding, which was later discredited by the Supreme Court but nevertheless continues to work severe hardships on innocent bystanders and alleged beneficiaries of the suit—the independent exhibitors."

Terming the suit ill-advised and contrary to the principle of free enterprise, Brandt's letter stated: "It appears to us that this is not a suit to protect 16mm. exhibition for shutins, hospitals, churches, the Armed Forces and other groups. Although they are now being serviced, their inclusion makes good 'window dressing.' The real beneficiaries of this suit are the fly-by-night itinerant film merchants and the television interests. We are firmly convinced that this suit would have been brought for the release of 35mm. prints to TV even if these companies didn't have 16mm. departments. At least, it would have been a more honest approach."

Same Old Loose Charges, But Not One Specific Case

By Richard L. Coe

SPEAKING in this city two weeks ago, the counsel for the New York State Board of Regents said he was "concerned over pictures which apparently teach communism" and that "it is useless to eliminate the teaching of communism in the school system and condone it for the same children in theaters."

Pressed for specific pictures of subversive quality, the speaker refused to name one. Pressed further, he indicated that the pictures he had in mind were "of foreign origin," but he again refused to be specific.

Charles A. Brind, jr., the speaker, occupies a unique position in the film world. The New York State seal of approval, from a subcommittee of the Board of Regents, is vital to the exhibition of films in that key State and most of the existing State boards follow the Empire State lead. It was Brind who led the losing fight against "The Miracle" before the Supreme Court and he has since suggested licensing all motion picture houses as a way to get around the high court's rulings in "The Miracle" and "Pinky" cases.

IT IS not our purpose this morning to go into the reasons for and against forms of censorship in our films, although the birthday reminders of the Declaration of Independence still ring in our ears. It is a long, involved story and the reasoning behind the industry's own "Production Code" has its points.

But it seems to me that the industry, both through the Motion Picture Association and through all its individuals should firmly press Brind for specific cases to which he so vaguely alludes as "a lot of letters from the public."

What public, Mr. Brind? What kind of letters? How many? What pictures? What scenes? What lines?

For so important a figure in the film world to issue such vague charges seems to me to demand the full attention of the industry's spokesmen.

Brind's audience was an important one of key Washington people interested in films both as entertainment and as thought control. The meeting was held by the Motion Picture Council of the District of Columbia and was most unfortunately terminated by some equally irresponsible words from a member of the motion picture trade press. The audience, following this hot head's insult to its members, rather naturally seemed to wind up on Mr. Brind's side.

But it is hard to believe, even in the hot weather, that by now the excited audience has not found its calm and with it reason.

FORTUNATELY, the Motion Picture Herald has lately been devoting space to a panel on this matter and the discussion is on a far higher plane than Brind put it. Exhibitors, for instance, note that a majority of their patrons have not made adverse comments on the subject of communism in Hollywood. They note that adverse comments by phone are less than 10 percent.

The panel does note, however, that the publicity about communism in Hollywood has had "a measurably depressing effect on box offices, principally in the larger cities," but that "there have been relatively few organized demonstrations against specific pictures or players."

Reading the considered findings in Martin Quigley's business-minded weekly, one is struck by the public's general level-headedness as to subversive influences in pictures and also by the moviemakers' own lack of punch in fighting charges that such influences exist.

What the moviemakers should do with such accusations as Brind's—and other fear-mongers of the West Coast—is to make them put up or shut up. A dynamic, positive quality is needed to dispute this loose talk which can not only harm the theather owners, the studios and particular individuals, but result in films even more unrelated to life than they have been.

IN THE Quigley magazine, M-G-M's Dore Schary speaks up for a sane approach. Discussing the question of whether film workers should take a loyalty oath, Schary states his opposition to the oath:

"Because a wholesale declaration of loyalty would only be viewed as a whitewash by our critics and would be insulting to men and women who have served this country again and again in many, many ways.

"Write one loyalty oath and swear to it and some group will tell you that it is not specific enough and you will be asked to swear to another loyalty oath. Then you will be told that loyalty oaths mean nothing because Communists will swear to anything and soon we will be judging our contemporaries' patriotism on the volume of oaths they recite rather than on the deeds they do as citizens of their community and their Nation. I am very wary about loyalty oaths that a Communist would sign also along with a man like Gerald L. K. Smith."

This line of talk, not based on the new-fangled and entirely revolutionary idea of guilty until proved innocent, seems the tack the industry should take at such gusts as Brind's cloudy accusations.

As one who sees 8 to 10 pictures a week from all countries outside the Iron Curtain, I'd be very interested to know what Communist ideas I've swallowed, and apparently Brind could oblige.

But until he can back up his accusations, I have to lift an answer from Gen. MacAuliffe as to what communistic doctrine I've been swallowing from the celluloid idea package. "Nuts."

The HERALD INSTITUTE of Industry Opinion

WHEN the Herald Institute of Industry Opinion was organized in November 1951, one of its announced purposes was to provide: "A source of reliably gathered facts for release to the public via the press, etc.—when incorrect concepts have been published to the detriment of the industry—or to enlighten those who write for widespread readership. . . ."

Reproduced here is a typical example of the manner in which the Institute's Reports are used to refute fallacies.

FCC Still Silent on ABC-UPT Merger

Washington, July 30. — The Federal Communications Commission held another closed-door session today on what to do about the ABC-UPT merger, but there was no indication as to whether the commissioners had made up their minds or when a decision would be announced. The Commission discussed the matter at two lengthy sessions last week, as well as today's session. Most of the industry lawyers in the case have been expecting a decision by the end of the week.

Hondouras Has 22 16mm. Theatres

WASHINGTON, July 30.—At present there are 22 motion picture theatres in Honduras which exhibit 16mm. entertainment motion pictures, according to Nathan D. Golden, head of the film division of the U. S. Commerce Department. However, these houses are not regular exhibitors in the sense that they hold regular showings in properly constructed theatres. Their performances are given spasmodically, depending upon the weather (many are held in the open), the time of harvest, and the amount of money currently available in the various localities for entertainment purposes.

Television--Radio

FLASHBACK. . . . This happened so long ago it seems to go back to the prehistoric days or possibly the neolithic age and yet perhaps it happened in the much later period, the Dark Ages. . . . Yep. that's when it happened, back in the modern Dark Ages, in the depression year of 1931. Your reporter, during his chores as vaudeville critic on the Motion Picture Herald, had occasion to rave about the talents of a young comic, fresh from Cleveland named Bob Hope, discovered by Al Boasberg (then a top scripter for M-G-M), who left Hollywood and came East to write material for Bob and to lend the Boasberg wit to radio. During an interview with Boasberg in his suite at the Essex House, Al told us that he had signed to write a new radio series titled, "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" for Blackett Sample & Hummert and that he needed a songwriter to write a theme song. That's how come we were assigned to compose the song of that title (with the melody composed by Gus Haenschen). From October, 1931, until late in 1949 this composition was broadcast every Sunday night on a Coast-to-Coast network over NBC. That program, endured and prospered for a complete radio cycle, bridging the gap from vaudeville to television. Last week we interviewed Donald Voorhees in studio 6B at NBC and learned that the maestro seems a sure thing to beat the longevity record of 'M. M. G. R.' not once but twice and simultaneously. He's now rounding out his 13th year and 16th year on the "Bell Telephone Hour" and "Cavalcade of America," respectively.

Bill Cullen, who temporarily replaced Meredith Wilson as panelist on "The Name's The Same," ABC-TV, is now a regular member of the show. The young quizmaster thus finds himself appearing on seven radio and TV programs a week. . . . Johnny Olsen's "Kids & Co." sponsored by Red Goose Shoes, resumes on DuMont Network, Aug. 9. . . . Starting next week when he subs for Don McNeill on the ABC "Breakfast Club" stanzas, Peter Donald will spend as much time in the air as on it. The carrot-topped comic, on Mondays, will do the "B.C." show from Chicago, then fly to New York for his regular "Masquerade Party," NBCommercial and thence back to Chicago for Tuesday morning's "Breakfast Club."

Children's Program Set by British Unit

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The first annual report of the Children's Film Foundation, Ltd., shows that the £159,000 so far made available to the Foundation from the British Film Production Fund, will meet the cost of five of the six features in the 1951-52 program, according to Nathan D. Golden, head of film division of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce. This program includes the following pictures: "John of the Fair" and "The Stolen Plans," already completed; "Alpine Rally," now on location; "Johnny on the Run," awaiting a studio; an untitled adventure story, production of which is expected to start in August; and an untitled social comedy.

The program also includes a series of six short stories dealing with animals and children, production of six magazine one-reelers, and a cartoon. Associated British Film Distributors will be responsible for the distribution of all of the Foundation's 35mm. films in the United Kingdom. It is hoped that distribution to all theatres will commence in September.

For its 1952-53 program the Foundation has under consideration adventure serial stories in Gibraltar and South Africa, a slapstick serial, and features set in New Zealand and the Kent hop fields.

Jacobi Opposes Brennan In First Test Since '46

The IATSE convention in Minneapolis next week will differ from any of the labor union's biennial conclaves since 1946 in that one or more international officers making up the "official family" will be compelled to risk their posts in a balloting election.

This became known here yesterday when Vincent Jacobi, president of New York Stage Hands Local No. 1, which includes motion picture theatres in its jurisdiction, indicated that he has decided to run against James J. Brennan, candidate for reelection as third vice-president.

Brennan has the support of Richard F. Walsh, "IA" international president. However, during the past three

'Heat Sent Them to Theatres, Now They're Coming Back for More'

Cleveland, July 30.—Theatre attendance in a majority of spots in this territory that started an upswing with the TV Presidential convention presentations, is holding up, theatre owners report in the first expression of optimism displayed here in recent months. It is felt that all houses destined to shutter due to neighborhood changes, old age or lack of modern equipment, have closed and that from now on remaining theatres can look for a return to normalcy.

The excessive heat of June and July drove many into theatres to cool off. Many, managers report, had not been inside a theatre in a year or more. They like what they found and came back for more. "Now," one of the optimistic exhibitors states, "all we need is a steady flow of good pictures and we can reestablish our occasional patrons into permanent patrons."

Report Milwaukee, Baltimore Upswing

Two more key cities — Baltimore and Milwaukee—can be added to the growing list of those in which exhibitors report improved box-office conditions.

In Baltimore, business at neighborhood motion picture theatres during the past two weeks scored the best grosses of any similar period during the past year, or more, according to Leon B. Back, president of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland.

The question whether screen attractions drew increased audiences or patrons merely sought relief from an all-time record heat wave, only slightly dampened the optimism of his comment.

Milwaukee exhibitors report improved business and are optimistic for a continuance.

Reports Conditions In Corn Belt Good

OMAHA, July 30.—Ted Emerson, publicity director for Tri-States Theatres, who is touring this territory serving as substitute manager for vacationing managers of all of the circuit's theatres, finds farm crops to be in very good condition. Says US Suit Is Ruinous, Despite 'Aim'

Bidding Analogy Put to Government by Brandt

While conceding that the Justice Department's objective in filing its 16mm. anti-trust suit "is neither to destroy theatres nor to bar the production of feature films of high quality," Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, in a letter sent yesterday to the Department contended that, notwithstanding, "these would be the incidental and most important by-products of a successful prosecution of this suit."

Brandt's letter, sent in reply to one received from Newell A. Clapp, acting Assistant Attorney-General, who has been answering many exhibitor protests against the action, points out that the complaint calls for a decree "directing each of the defendants to grant unrestricted licenses for an unspecified

(Paramount)

BING CROSBY'S back, and Jane Wyman's got him. The self-styled "old groaner's" latest for Paramount is a dandy hunk of entertainment and a distinct credit to the production acumen of Pat Duggan. It is, for the most part, a frothy affair in color by Technicolor, with a rich cargo of production numbers and a light story in which humor, some mild family anxieties and song-making intertwine to form a delightful fabric of diversion for audiences of every composition.

There is a genuine stand-out quality in the production numbers, which reflects to the credit of director Elliott Nugent, choreographer Helen Tamiris, cameramen George Barnes, Gordon Jennings, Paul Lerpae and Farciot Edouart, and art directors Hal Pereira and Roland Anderson. All deserve mention because their efforts have combined to bring forth a superior piece of merchandise—a picture which should be as easy as pie to sell, and which should strike a bonanza at the box-office.

The plot: Crosby, a stage producer, and Miss Wyman, the star of his new musical, are in love. Being a busy man, widower Crosby hadn't been able to give as much attention as he would have liked to his 'teen-aged youngsters, Robert Arthur, who has fallen victim to the illusion that Miss Wyman is in love with him, and Natalie Wood, whose main ambition is to be admitted to an exclusive girls' school. Papa, faced with Arthur's hostility, when the truth about Miss Wyman's love interest is exposed, sets things in order with easy-going grace and uncommonly good understanding of the youngster's emotional problem. And Bing's well-known way with a song and a wink so captivates school supervisor Ethel Barrymore that Natalie is allowed to matriculate despite the trustee's aversion for "theatre people."

Rounding out the amiable supporting cast are Cora Witherspoon, Ben Lessy, Regis Toomey, Art Smith, Leon Tyler, Willis Bouchey and Herbert Vigran. Robert Carson's screenplay was based on the Stephen Vincent Benet story, "Famous."

Running time, 95 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

months leaders in various locals across the country are known to have urged Jacobi to make the race. During the past year, it was reported in labor circles here, there has been a movement among leaders of locals to "crack" the "official family" headed by Walsh. Jacobi returned to New York yesterday following out-of-town meetings with opponents of the "official family" and disclosed his intention to run.

Jacobi said he has been pledged sufficient support by delegates from various parts of the country to make him feel certain he can unseat Brennan, a long-time rival in contests for the presidency of Local No. 1, which Jacobi heads. Jacobi has defeated Brenan in the last two elections for the local's presidency.

Except for the 1946 convention, when William P. Bennett of Washington ran unsuccessfully against Walsh for the "IA" presidency, the union's biennial elections have been voice-vote affairs, with the "official family" winning hands down. Walsh became president in 1941 following the Brown-Bioff scandals.

Jacobi's action is expected by other leaders of New York locals to encourage other aspirants to one or more of the nine "IA" vice-presidencies to run. The ninth vice-presidency, held by Louise Wright of Dallas, is very likely to be thrown open to balloting, according to observers. Balloting could extend the convention from its scheduled four days to at least six, it was said.

'IA' Convention Preliminaries Set at Board Meet This Week

MINNEAPOLIS, July 30.—Preliminaries to next week's IATSE convention here are being disposed of at a meeting of the organization's general executive board this week.

Gaines of Film Exchange Employes Local No. B-31.

Convention plans will be completed at this week's session of the board, with International president Richard F. Walsh, of Brooklyn, N. Y., presiding. Others in attendance are general secretary-treasurer William P. Raoul, Atlanta, Ga., and vice-presidents Harland Holmden, Cleveland, Ohio; James J. Brennan, New York City; Roger M. Kennedy, Detroit, Mich.; Felix D. Snow, Kansas City, Mo.; Carl G. Cooper, Los Angeles, Calif; Harry J. Abbott, Philadelphia, Pa.; Orin M. Jacobson, Tacoma, Wash., and Louise Wright, Dallas, Texas.

"Island of Desire"

(Coronado—United Artists)

WHAT PRODUCER DAVID E. ROSE'S "Island of Desire," a Coronado production, lacks in credulity, is made up aplenty by the engrossing scenic wonder of the romantic British Indies island of Jamaica, whose long, entwining, exotic sandy beaches are thrillingly framed in color by Technicolor. For this photographic gem, credit should by given at the outset to cameraman Arthur Ibbetson who performed under the able direction of Stuart Heisler.

The latter did the best he could with a somewhat unconvincing tale of a beautiful woman, in the person of Linda Darnell, who is cast ashore from the wreck of a ship returning from the Far East with service men and women that is struck by a mine. Fate and the raging waters throw returning Corporal Tab Hunter on a raft with Linda and the two finally reach the unpopulated beaches. From that point onward, Hunter, who plays the part of a very young and unsophisticated soldier, develops a strong affection for Miss Darnell, who in more or less high sophistication does not return the affection, taking full cognizance of Hunter's youth.

The lad is really a miracle man in the construction of huts and gadgets to make life easier on the island. Like the proverbial rabbit in the hat he creates all kinds of cooking and eating and living utensils without tools or other implements, and even weaves clothes from plants on the beachside. A happy finale is reached after a plane crashes with Donald Gray, whose injuries are healed by Army Nurse Darnell. Both fall in love. The inevitable rescue ship steams over the horizon and young corporal Hunter steps aside as Linda and Gray sail homeward on their romantic way.

Others in the cast are John Laurie, Sheila Chong, Russell Waters, Hilda Fenemore, Brenda Hogan, Diana Decker, Peggy Hassard and Michael Newell. Stephanie Nordli wrote the screenplay, from the novel, "Saturday Island," by Hugh Brooke.

Most audiences will be entertained, despite the lack of credulity in spots and nearly all will be engrossed by the scenic beauty at the oceanside.

Running time, 103 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, August 4.

"Beware, My Lovely"

(Filmakers—RKO Radio)

IDA LUPINO, as a war widow back in the era of the first World War, goes through a strange one-day nightmare in "Beware, My Lovely." She hires an itinerant houseworker who turns out to be a "psycho." Robert Ryan plays the lead opposite Miss Lupino as the deranged man who holds her captive in her own house.

Both roles are acted with considerable strength and conviction. Although there is not much variation to the story, it becomes an unusual exercise in suspense as the tension mounts and the audience wonders what violence will befall Miss Lupino.

Although the screenplay by Mel Dinelli, based on his story and play, does not clearly outline the nature of Ryan's fitful disturbance, the whole sequence of events is entirely credible. Exhibitors in general will find audiences completely engrossed.

The story builds up gradually to the point where Miss Lupino, to her horror, learns that she is in the grip of a madman. Subsequent attempts to flee the house or get out messages seeking help are cunningly frustrated by Ryan. The picture concentrates on this interplay between captor and captive, although there are other roles of a secondary nature, played by Taylor Holmes, Barbara Whiting and James Willmas.

The picture ends on a note as unusual as everything that preceded. The mad mood suddenly leaves Ryan, and forgetting everything as though it were some passing siege of amnesia, Ryan quietly takes leave of Miss Lupino.

Harry Horner directed and Collier Young produced this Filmakers presentation.

Running time, 77 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

number of feature films as the court may deem necessary to eliminate the effects of this alleged conspiracy."

The Justice Department also asks for such other relief as the court may deem appropriate to establish competition in the distribution and exhibition of feature films, Brandt noted.

"We would like to remind the Justice Department," Brandt's letter continued, "that it was a similar request for relief that first brought competitive bidding into the motion picture industry. In seeking this relief, the Justice Department is proving that it is not 'cognizant of the problems confronting exhibitors' and that it will deprive theatre owners of an opportunity to exhibit motion pictures at a profit."

In his letters to Brandt and other exhibitors, Clapp averred that the objective of the suit is not to deprive theatres of an opportunity to exhibit films at a profit "nor do we think that the relief we ask for in the suit is reasonably subject to such an interpretation."

Brandt contended that "if the court ever directs the compulsory sale of feature films to TV, it will in effect be a more tragic error than the court-sponsored system of competitive bidding, which was later discredited by the Supreme Court but nevertheless continues to work severe hardships on innocent bystanders and alleged beneficiaries of the suit—the independent exhibitors."

Terming the suit ill-advised and contrary to the principle of free enterprise, Brandt's letter stated: "It appears to us that this is not a suit to protect 16mm. exhibition for shutins, hospitals, churches, the Armed Forces and other groups. Although they are now being serviced, their inclusion makes good 'window dressing.' The real beneficiaries of this suit are the fly-by-night itinerant film merchants and the television interests. We are firmly convinced that this suit would have been brought for the release of 35mm. prints to TV even if these companies didn't have 16mm. departments. At least, it would have been a more honest approach."

Same Old Loose Charges, But Not One Specific Case

By Richard L. Coe

SPEAKING in this city two weeks ago, the counsel for the New York State Board of Regents said he was "concerned over pictures which apparently teach communism" and that "it is useless to eliminate the teaching of communism in the school system and condone it for the same children in theaters."

Pressed for specific pictures of subversive quality, the speaker refused to name one. Pressed further, he indicated that the pictures he had in mind were "of foreign origin," but he again refused to be specific.

Charles A. Brind, jr., the speaker, occupies a unique position in the film world. The New York State seal of approval, from a subcommittee of the Board of Regents, is vital to the exhibition of films in that key State and most of the existing State boards follow the Empire State lead. It was Brind who led the losing fight against "The Miracle" before the Supreme Court and he has since suggested licensing all motion picture houses as a way to get around the high court's rulings in "The Miracle" and "Pinky" cases.

IT IS not our purpose this morning to go into the reasons for and against forms of censorship in our films, although the birthday reminders of the Declaration of Independence still ring in our ears. It is a long, involved story and the reasoning behind the industry's own "Production Code" has its points.

But it seems to me that the industry, both through the Motion Picture Association and through all its individuals should firmly press Brind for specific cases to which he so vaguely alludes as "a lot of letters from the public."

What public, Mr. Brind? What kind of letters? How many? What pictures? What scenes? What lines?

For so important a figure in the film world to issue such vague charges seems to me to demand the full attention of the industry's spokesmen.

Brind's audience was an important one of key Washington people interested in films both as entertainment and as thought control. The meeting was held by the Motion Picture Council of the District of Columbia and was most unfortunately terminated by some equally irresponsible words from a member of the motion picture trade press. The audience, following this hot head's insult to its members, rather naturally seemed to wind up on Mr. Brind's side.

But it is hard to believe, even in the hot weather, that by now the excited audience has not found its calm and with it reason.

FORTUNATELY, the Motion Picture Herald has lately been devoting space to a panel on this matter and the discussion is on a far higher plane than Brind put it. Exhibitors, for instance, note that a majority of their patrons have not made adverse comments on the subject of communism in Hollywood. They note that adverse comments by phone are less than 10 percent.

The panel does note, however, that the publicity about communism in Hollywood has had "a measurably depressing effect on box offices, principally in the larger cities," but that "there have been relatively few organized demonstrations against specific pictures or players."

Reading the considered findings in Martin Quigley's business-minded weekly, one is struck by the public's general level-headedness as to subversive influences in pictures and also by the moviemakers' own lack of punch in fighting charges that such influences exist.

What the moviemakers should do with such accusations as Brind's—and other fear-mongers of the West Coast—is to make them put up or shut up. A dynamic, positive quality is needed to dispute this loose talk which can not only harm the theather owners, the studios and particular individuals, but result in films even more unrelated to life than they have been.

IN THE Quigley magazine, M-G-M's Dore Schary speaks up for a sane approach. Discussing the question of whether film workers should take a loyalty oath, Schary states his opposition to the oath:

"Because a wholesale declaration of loyalty would only be viewed as a whitewash by our critics and would be insulting to men and women who have served this country again and again in many, many ways.

"Write one loyalty oath and swear to it and some group will tell you that it is not specific enough and you will be asked to swear to another loyalty oath. Then you will be told that loyalty oaths mean nothing because Communists will swear to anything and soon we will be judging our contemporaries' patriotism on the volume of oaths they recite rather than on the deeds they do as citizens of their community and their Nation. I am very wary about loyalty oaths that a Communist would sign also along with a man like Gerald L. K. Smith."

This line of talk, not based on the newfangled and entirely revolutionary idea of guilty until proved innocent, seems the tack the industry should take at such gusts as Brind's cloudy accusations.

As one who sees 8 to 10 pictures a week from all countries outside the Iron Curtain, I'd be very interested to know what Communist ideas I've swallowed, and apparently Brind could oblige.

But until he can back up his accusations, I'd have to lift an answer from Gen. MacAuliffe as to what communistic doctrine I've been swallowing from the celluloid idea package. "Nuts."

The HERALD INSTITUTE of Industry Opinion

WHEN the Herald Institute of Industry Opinion was organized in November 1951, one of its announced purposes was to provide: "A source of reliably gathered facts for release to the public via the press, etc.—when incorrect concepts have been published to the detriment of the industry—or to enlighten those who write for widespread readership. . . ."

Reproduced here is a typical example of the manner in which the Institute's Reports are used to refute fallacies.

FCC Still Silent on ABC-UPT Merger

Washington, July 30. — The Federal Communications Commission held another closed-door session today on what to do about the ABC-UPT merger, but there was no indication as to whether the commissioners had made up their minds or when a decision would be announced. The Commission discussed the matter at two lengthy sessions last week, as well as today's session. Most of the industry lawyers in the case have been expecting a decision by the end of the week.

Hondouras Has 22 16mm. Theatres

WASHINGTON, July 30.—At present there are 22 motion picture theatres in Honduras which exhibit 16mm. entertainment motion pictures, according to Nathan D. Golden, head of the film division of the U. S. Commerce Department. However, these houses are not regular exhibitors in the sense that they hold regular showings in properly constructed theatres. Their performances are given spasmodically, depending upon the weather (many are held in the open), the time of harvest, and the amount of money currently available in the various localities for entertainment purposes.

FLASHBACK. . . . This happened so long ago it seems to go back to the prehistoric days or possibly the neolithic age and yet perhaps it happened in the much later period, the Dark Ages. . . . Yep. that's when it happened, back in the modern Dark Ages, in the depression year of 1931. Your reporter, during his chores as vaudeville critic on the Motion Picture Herald, had occasion to rave about the talents of a young comic, fresh from Cleveland named Bob Hope, discovered by Al Boasberg (then a top scripter for M-G-M), who left Hollywood and came East to write material for Bob and to lend the Boasberg wit to radio. During an interview with Boasberg in his suite at the Essex House, Al told us that he had signed to write a new radio series titled, "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" for Blackett Sample & Hummert and that he needed a songwriter to write a theme song. That's how come we were assigned to compose the song of that title (with the melody composed by Gus Haenschen). From October, 1931, until late in 1949 this composition was broadcast every Sunday night on a Coast-to-Coast network over NBC. That program, endured and prospered for a complete radio cycle, bridging the gap from vaudeville to television. Last week we interviewed Donald Voorhees in studio 6B at NBC and learned that the maestro seems a sure thing to beat the longevity record of 'M. M. G. R.' not once but twice and simultaneously. He's now rounding out his 13th year and 16th year on the "Bell Telephone Hour" and "Cavalcade of America," respectively.

Bill Cullen, who temporarily replaced Meredith Wilson as panelist on "The Name's The Same," ABC-TV, is now a regular member of the show. The young quizmaster thus finds himself appearing on seven radio and TV programs a week. . . . Johnny Olsen's "Kids & Co." sponsored by Red Goose Shoes, resumes on DuMont Network, Aug. 9. . . . Starting next week when he subs for Don McNeill on the ABC "Breakfast Club" stanzas, Peter Donald will spend as much time in the air as on it. The carrot-topped comic, on Mondays, will do the "B.C." show from Chicago, then fly to New York for his regular "Masquerade Party," NBCommercial and thence back to Chicago for Tuesday morning's "Breakfast Club."

Children's Program Set by British Unit

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The first annual report of the Children's Film Foundation, Ltd., shows that the £159,000 so far made available to the Foundation from the British Film Production Fund, will meet the cost of five of the six features in the 1951-52 program, according to Nathan D. Golden, head of film division of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce. This program includes the following pictures: "John of the Fair" and "The Stolen Plans," already completed; "Alpine Rally," now on location; "Johnny on the Run," awaiting a studio; an untitled adventure story, production of which is expected to start in August; and an untitled social comedy.

The program also includes a series of six short stories dealing with animals and children, production of six magazine one-reelers, and a cartoon. Associated British Film Distributors will be responsible for the distribution of all of the Foundation's 35mm. films in the United Kingdom. It is hoped that distribution to all theatres will commence in September.

For its 1952-53 program the Foundation has under consideration adventure serial stories in Gibraltar and South Africa, a slapstick serial, and features set in New Zealand and the Kent hop fields.

'IA' Plans Tax Fight and Aid For Box-office

Day's Work for A Day's Pay Principle Up, Too

MINNEAPOLIS, July 31.—Plans for the full participation of the thousands of IATSE members in efforts to stimulate theatre attendance and to join in the all-industry campaign to win repeal of the Federal admission tax have been formulated by the "IA" executive board in session here this week.

The programs for both endeavors will be disclosed to the IA annual convention, which will open here on Monday.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 31.—Next week's election contest for the IATSE vice-presidency occupied by James J. This became apparent today as reports circulating in Minneapolis film labor circles indicated that Richard F. Walsh, "IA"

A Call to Arms!

by MARTIN QUIGLEY

THE Government's so-called anti-trust suit, which is an attempt to force the release of motion pictures to enterprises which seek to compete against the theatres for public attention, is a challenge that should be answered promptly and forcefully.

The industry is confronted with an attack that leaves no room for divided or conflicting interests or viewpoints. An arcused and fully united industry should respond. The development should be met head-on, not with mealy-mouthed and weak-kneed argument but with an all-out counter attack. Anything less will virtually proclaim that the industry is fair game for anyone who wishes to take a shot at it—a notion which is likely enough in face of the do-nothing attitude which has come to settle upon so many of the industry's problems in recent times.

This suit, if properly dealt with, may prove a well-disguised blessing to the industry. On many fronts the industry stands in urgent need of hearty and thorough-going cooperation among its various elements. Up to now various petty divergencies of interests and viewpoints have kept the industry divided and working at cross purposes.

We are now confronted with an attack that imperils to its core the commercial industry of motion pictures. The development provides ample reason for immediate introduction of that kind of cooperation and united front action which is necessary to defeat the attack and is needed as well to deal with many intra-industry problems.

This attack should not alone be answered with the slow, tedi-

Theatres, Nets Vie for 'Million Dollar' Bout TV

Bidding for the electronics' rights to the coming heavyweight championship fight between Jersey Joe Walcott and Rocky Marciano already has entered upon a spirited but still wide-open stage, with two television-radio networks and Theatre Network Television pitted against each other.

The International Boxing Club, sponsor of the bout, has stated it will accept the best offer from any source for the TV rights, whether theatre or home.

The bout, tentatively scheduled for Sept. 23 at the Yankee Stadium here, shapes up as one of the biggest attractions of its kind in years. IBC's president, James Norris, is freely predicting a $1,000,000 gate, "with or without the sale of TV and radio rights." By way of comparison, the last Robinson-Maxim bout grossed $431,000.

An unusual situation involving the inability of Walcott's manager, Felix Bocchicchio, to obtain a license in New York State because of a past conviction for a felony of which he was subsequently pardoned, might possibly force the fight outside New York and, should TNT be successful in bidding for the theatre television rights, New York City's TV-equipped theatres then would be in on their first and biggest TV fight attraction. With most of the recent bouts available to theatre TV having been held in New York, the Metropolitan area was "blacked out" to protect the gate and hence it has been some time since New York City theatres have been able to offer a big scale TV attraction on their large screens.

With nearly a dozen large New York City theatres equipped with TV, their seating capacity conceivably could add strength to the bidding for theatre TV rights to the Walcott-Marciano bout. However, if the fight were to be moved outside New York, it would also open up the Metropolitan area for home TV of the fight and that would also strengthen NBC and CBS bidding for the home TV and radio rights.

Bocchicchio has an application pending for a New York license. If it is turned down, IBC has indicated the bout would be transferred to Boston, Philadelphia or New Jersey. In the latter instance, New York City probably would be blacked out also because of its close proximity to Jersey City and Newark, either of which would be the likely site for the transferred bout.

Home TV has never yet had a fight of the calibre of the Walcott-Marciano affair and can be expected to go the limit in the bidding. If successful, theatres nationally would be injured seriously the night of the bout.

TV-equipped theatres have paid a high of $1.05 per seat for TV rights. They would have to go higher to win the Walcott-Marciano TV rights, indicating a ticket price scale of $3.50 to $5. However, the fights draw crowds accoustomed to paying a tariff of that kind for what they want to see and theatre tickets to lesser fights have been "scalped" at those prices and higher on a large scale already.

The theatres' position presumably would be strengthened as it was a year ago when RKO Radio contracted independently for the motion picture rights to the Robinson-Turpin bout, should another such large-scale film rights deal help to keep the Walcott-Marciano bout away from home TV and to deliver it to theatre TV.

Arkansas is the first state to report the organization of its state committee to campaign for the repeal of the Federal admission tax and the appointment of committee chairmen for each of its Congressional districts.

Tax Cut Meetings Held In Virginia; Bowden Presides

RICHMOND, July 31.—Sidney Bowden conducted the first of the tax cut Congressional district organizational meetings for Virginia at Hampton today with 20 exhibitors from the Tidewater Peninsula and Eastern shore present. Plans for the campaign were discussed with G. E. Ward, Jr. of Cape Charles, appointed chairman for the first district and Jeff Hofheimer of Norfolk chairman for the second.

Other meetings planned to complete the statewide organization as quickly as possible are as follows: Congressional districts three and four, Hotel Petersburg, Petersburg; District Five, Old Drewry Place, Martinsville; District Six, Salem Theatre, Salem; District Seven, Kavenaugh Hotel, Harrisonburg; Districts Eight and 10, Princess Anne Hotel, Fredericksburg; District Nine, Wimpy Jones Cafe, Richlands.

Cinerama Deal Nearly Closed

Arrangements are due to be completed momentarily for leasing of the Broadway Theatre here by Thomas-Todd Productions from owners Lee and J. J. Shubert for the initial public exhibition of Cinerama, "three-dimensional" sight and sound process, it was indicated by the Thomas-Todd firm yesterday.

The production organization includes Frank Smith, Lowell Thomas and Michael Todd.

Terms of the deal, whereby new sound apparatus, three coordinated projectors and a huge screen will be installed in the now inactivated legitimate stage showcase, call for a run of the show lease, with 10 weeks guaranteed as minimum playing time and a tentative opening date of September 15. The production company will receive 10 per cent of the total admission gross, with a guarantee from 16 weekly performances of $3,000 on a sliding scale above a possible $30,000 total.

The attraction will be "This Is Cinerama," a program of short subjects, photographed in color here and abroad running for "approximately two hours" and now in the process of final editing and musical scoring. It will feature two brief intermissions. The top admission price will be $2.40, which "may be raised."

Industry Leaders at Schwartz Induction

A packed courtroom of New York state and New York city civic leaders, members of the judiciary and the bar, motion picture industry leaders and friends of the newly-appointed Judge Arthur H. Schwartz, participated in his induction ceremony as a Justice of the New York State Supreme Court at the New York County Court House Building here yesterday.

Judge Schwartz, well-known industry attorney and a former partner in the law firm of Schwartz and Frohlich which represents many motion picture industry clients, was appointed by Governor Thomas E. Dewey to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Judge Bernard L. Scheintag. Speakers who paid tribute to Judge Schwartz indicated that he will be a candidate in the fall for election for the full 14-year term in the First Judicial District which includes Manhattan and the Bronx.

Among those who paid tribute to Judge Schwartz were Bethuel M. Webster, president of the Association of the New York City Bar; Edward M. Outterbourg, president of the New York County Lawyers Association; Walter Dillon, vice-president of the Bronx Bar Association; Thomas J. Curran, Secretary of State of New York; State Senator Walter J. Mahoney and Louis D. Frohlich, senior partner of Schwartz and Frohlich, with whom Judge Schwartz had been associated for 25 years.

Supreme Court Justice Charles D. Breitel, inducted the new Justice with Justice Samuel Hoffstatter and Morris Eder participating.

Among industry leaders who were present were Spyros P. Skouras, Emanuel Silverstone, Harry Brandt, George P. Skouras, Abe Schneider, Leo Jaffe, Sam Rosen, Saul E. Rogers, Charles Schwartz, Louis Weber, Arthur Israel, Jr., and others.

See SWG Strike vs. ATFP on Tuesday

HOLLYWOOD, July 31.—Strike action against the Alliance of Television Film Producers probably will be taken by the Screen Writers Guild next Tuesday in sequel to the breakdown of the five-month negotiations last night.

The SWG television negotiating committee and the SWG board, already authorized to call a strike, will meet Monday night to formulate a decision. SWG today telegraphed Authors League of America president Rex Stout, acquainting him with developments, and also notified all writers working for television, plus their agents, to make no agreements with Alliance members which would conflict with their obeying the strike order.

Negotiations broke down when Alliance refused to meet SWG's insistence on a formula providing that writers receive a minimum plus participation in revenues. Conversely, SWG had refused to accept a formula similar to recent deals between Alliance and SAG and SDG, which provides for re-payment for re-use of television films. Alliance members reportedly turn out 85 per cent of the television films now made in the West.

A Call to Arms!

ous and often fruitless processes of legal defense. It should under a somehow invigorated leadership be answered as well with an explosion of outraged public opinion, informed by direct and positive use of the industry's own incomparable engine of propaganda—the screen itself.

This industry badly needs a renewal of faith, confidence and courage. It has become punch-drunk through a succession of reverses and disappointments. It has too often had wobbly leadership when positive, straight-line action was needed. This suit may prove a heaven-sent test out of which may come a victory which will restore to the industry confidence in itself and reinvigorate and extend public confidence and interest.

But this is not to be achieved through any half-way measures. If the industry has the necessary leadership, courage and determination it will have to show it promptly and effectively. There can be no beating about the bush. The Government's incredible attempt to force the industry to give over to competing enterprises the product it creates is typical of the New Deal-Fair Deal philosophy, aimed toward the domination and manipulation of all elements of American life, including business, for political purposes.

THE obvious purpose in this high-handed, so-called anti-trust suit is a grandstand effort in the midst of a national political campaign to hoodwink gullible people into believing that a paternal administration is going to get for them all the good movies free of charge with their television set, with their glass of beer at the neighboring saloon and with the bunch of spinach at the supermarket.

Together with all these pleasant purposes it will not be overlooked that in the background there would be well-served various commercial and financial interests who wish to exploit for their own purposes the motion picture the industry makes. The gratitude of all such, especially in the midst of a political campaign, is something of course that is not likely to be discounted in the gentle art of politics.

This industry over its long history has carefully—and rightly—avoided mixing in the arena of partisan politics. If at this time it could be guided by what seems objectively to be the right policy for any and every non-political body, including commercial organizations and labor unions, it would stay far clear of partisan politics. But the question arises as to whether or not it is now possible for the purpose of survival to do so.

If this new Government attack is not merely a trial balloon, a half-baked attempt to gain political propaganda, the industry faces the imperative necessity to go to the public—and that means an all-out fight with no holds barred. Under the circumstances this would involve the responsible leadership of the industry in immediate plans to go to the public with a series of forceful statements, proclaiming its case not in the abstruse language of the legal document but in the down-to-earth vernacular of the tabloid newspaper.

THIS industry can, if it wishes, sit back supinely and wait hopefully for some miracle of rescue to come—as it has gotten into the habit of doing lately. It can ignore the political realities of the situation and rely solely upon the tedious processes of legal defense. It can miss, through timidity and uncertainty, the shining hour to strike.

But if this is the course that is followed let no one misjudge the disaster that will be inevitable—and deserved!

FCC Approves Three TV Station Permits

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The Federal Communications Commission today approved two new television stations in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and a third in El Paso, Texas.

The three approvals bring to 22 the total approved since the lifting of the freeze last spring. The approvals today went to: Gore Publishing Co., Ft. Lauderdale; Gerico Investment Co., Ft. Lauderdale and Roderick Broadcasting Corp., El Paso.

The Commission also set down for hearing competing applications for eight other channels in four cities. Included were competing applications for three channels in Chattanooga, where one of the competing applicants is Southern Television, Inc., controlled by Moses Lebovitz and Jay Solomon of Independent Theatres.

Exhibitor Gran in Television Business

MILWAUKEE, July 31.—L. F. Gran, president of Gran Enterprises, a real estate and investment firm, and general manager of Stanard Theatres Management Corp., owners of about 30 theatres in Wisconsin, is the leading stockholder of the new Milwaukee Area Telecasting Corp. which has applied for permission to operate a television station in Milwaukee.

According to the company's statement filed with the FCC, Gran owns one-half of the $500,000 stock in the TV Corporation. He has been chosen general manager of the new firm, and he indicated he might relinquish some of his present theatre and other activities if the FCC grants a construction permit to the new company.

international president, would not support Brennan for reelection.

If Walsh's position on Brennan's candidacy has not changed by Wednesday or Thursday, when voting for all officers will begin, the chances of Vincent Jacobi, president of Local No. 1, New York, in his bid for Brennan's post will have advanced considerably, observers here believe.

It was said that Walsh and Brennan developed strong differences recently on questions of "IA" policy.

Jacobi, as reported yesterday in New York, declared himself a candidate for the vice-presidency after being urged to do so by a number of leaders of "IA" locals.

Walsh has not expressed himself on Jacobi's candidacy. The two ran against each other for the "IA" presidency in 1942 in the first election for that office following the Brown-Bioff scandals. Walsh won, and has been "IA" president ever since.

cussed at the executive board sessions was the need for officers of IA locals to impress on all members of their unions the necessity for every employee to give a full day's work for a full day's pay in order to aid every branch of the industry in adjusting to changed business conditions.

The latter action is regarded as an extension of that taken by Richard Walsh, IATSE president, in Hollywood recently at the behest of Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's-M-G-M.

Citing the need for the industry to take up the box-office slack by increased efficiency and improved labor, among other remedial measures, Schenck sought and was given Walsh's cooperation in urging upon studio union workers the necessity for the principle of a full day's work for a full day's pay. The same message reportedly has been given to the executive board and in all likelihood will be passed on to convention delegates next week in order that the appeal for increased efficiency shall be made applicable to theatre, exchange and home office workers, as well as studio employes.

The programs of greater labor efficiency, stimuli for theatre attendance and aid for the admission tax repeal fight all are designed to help prevent further theatre closings with consequent loss of jobs to union members in all branches of the industry, it was indicated.

The IA executive board also was reported to have canvassed the prospects of further expansion by its unions into television fields both as a matter of jurisdictional policy and to provide work for unemployed members.

Compo,StudioHeads Will Meet Aug. 12

HOLLYWOOD, July 31.—August 12-15 has been set for a high level executive meeting here of Hollywood studio heads and Council of Motion Picture Organizations leaders.

COMPO officials coming here for the meeting will include R. J. O'Donnell, COMPO board member and national director of COMPO's "Movietime U.S.A."; Sam Pinanski, head of American Theatres of New England; Trueman Rembusch, head of the Indiana Theatre Owners Association, and Robert W. Coyne, COMPO special counsel.

Pinanski and Rembusch, together with Al Lichtman as the representative of the Motion Picture Association of America, now head COMPO. Lichtman will not be able to attend because of pressure of business in the East.

O'Donnell Spokesman

O'Donnell, as spokesman for the group, has stated that the meeting was prompted by a desire on the part of the COMPO heads to keep the Hollywood industry informed at first hand of the plans for COMPO and "Movietime U. S. A." for 1952-53.

"We're coming to give," O'Donnell stated, "not to ask. COMPO aims, purposes and plans for the coming season, one of the most important in the history of our industry, will be reviewed and outlined.

"The nationwide campaign for the repeal of the 20 per cent amusement tax which is being spearheaded by COMPO will be reported upon.

"The progress and accomplishments of 'Movietime U.S.A.' though still in its pioneering stage, and its impact upon the box-office and upon public attitude towards Hollywood and its people, will be presented."

Warner Plan

stockholders to take advantage of the so-called "spin-off" section relating to tax free reorganizations in the Revenue Act of 1951. Twentieth Century-Fox, which had a similar intention, this week reverted to its original reorganization plan because it could no longer wait for a government "spin-off" regulation to be issued if it was to complete the reorganization on or about September 27, as desired.

In Warner's case the consent judgment entered on January 5, 1951 in U. S. District Court here provided for a reorganization plan to be effectuated on or before April 4, 1953. The plan was approved by the stockholders on February 20, 1951. Its purpose was to effect the divorcement of the company's theatre assets in the U. S. from its production-distribution assets.

"Since the adoption of the plan," the Warner financial statement said: "Changes have taken place in the industry, and in the company's business (including the sale of theatres and other properties and the acquisition of its common stock). Furthermore, the evenue Act of 1951 contains a new section commonly called the 'spin-off' section, relating to tax free reorganizations. Under all these circumstances the board is convinced that a new plan will be necessary."

Warner's Net

company transactions, amounted to $84,309,000 for the nine months ended May 31, compared with $84,870,000 for the corresponding period last year.

Included in the operating profit for the latest nine-month period is a profit of $1,091,000 from sales of capital assets, before provision for Federal income taxes thereon, which compares with a profit of $482,000 on corresponding transactions for the nine months ended May 26, 1951.

Equivalent to $1.03 a Share

The profit for the nine months ended May 31, 1952 is equivalent to one dollar per share on the 4,950,600 shares of common stock outstanding on that date, after deducting shares held in the treasury. The net for the corresponding period last year was equal to 86 cents per share, on the 6,684,700 shares of common then outstanding.

The financial statement lists current and working assets totaling $58,658,276, against current liabilities amounting to $32,604,444. Assets include $15,042,030 cash on hand, $11,432,746 in U. S. government securities, and product inventories totaling $26,119,706. Fixed assets are valued at $81,802,718. Total assets are listed as amounting to $150,493,796. Earned surplus as of May 31 was $65,554,714.

The company's net foreign assets amounted to $12,471,000, of which $7,755,000 are in the British Isles, $363,000 are in Canada, and $4,353,000 are in other foreign territories.

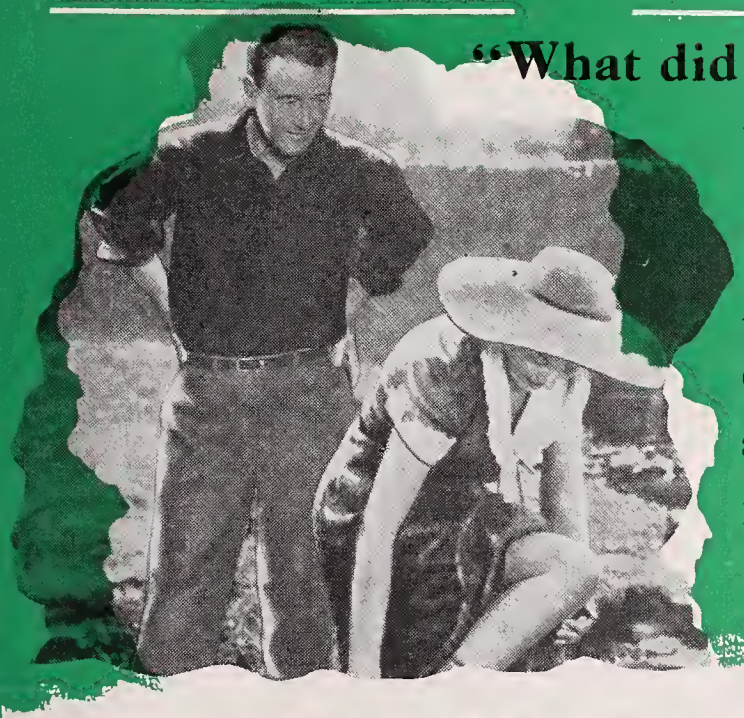
telecast on June 26, when police and other Civil Defense workers received training advice over closed circuit theatre TV. The official report was very enthusiastic about the experiment.



The report said that 10,800 persons attended the June 26 showing, with attendance ranging from standing room only in Detroit to a not-so-good 250 in Philadelphia. It said reaction was almost universally favorable, with over 3,000 persons reporting and nearly everyone saying they were extremely impressed by the experiment. CDA officials, police officials and others in charge of the experiment all reported themselves very well satisfied with the outcome.

The only criticisms, according to CDA, were that the show should have lasted longer, it should have been open to the general public, and that the hour should have been later in the day. CDA pointed out that this last change could not have been made, since the theatres and relay channels were available only in the morning.

"We would definitely like to do more, because we feel the experiment has proven very successful in all three tries," one official declared. "But Congress has cut our budget sharply, and we just don't know at this point whether we will be able to put on any more of these shows."

This official admitted the experiments are very reasonable, with the theatres charging only a nominal amount for cleaning and other costs.

VOL. 72. NO. 24 NEW YORK, U. S. A., MONDAY, AUGUST 4, 1952 TEN CENTS

By SHERWIN KANE

THE CONTINUED silence of producer-distributor defendants in the Justice Department's anti-trust suit on behalf of the television industry is feeding suspicion and uneasiness among exhibitors nationally.

In the nearly two weeks which have passed since the filing of the suit in Los Angeles Federal Court, no producer-distributor defendant has given any official indication whatever that the politically colored suit is either distasteful or unwelcome.

This policy, if not reversed immediately and with a show of leadership unmistakably dedicated to an all-out fight against confiscation under the guise of anti-trust prosecution, can end only in a divided and suspicion-ridden industry.

If defendants are to content themselves with going through the legal motions of filing formal answers and denials, an aroused exhibition branch, with all its allies, will not be patient. Those to whom the industry looks for leadership will be discredited. War has been declared and in it there is no room for reluctant or hesitant captains.

This is a battle which must be won. To win it, the fight must be carried to the public. An equally senseless and obnoxious case brought by the Justice Department last year against the A. & P. chain stores was won by the latter by exactly that method. A badly beaten and publicly discredited Justice Department within a matter of weeks gave indication that it rued the day it started that action.

This industry has at its own command a medium of communication with the public not available to the A. & P. stores in waging its justified and successful battle against the Justice Department. That medium—the theatre screens of the nation—can be enlisted by producer-distributor leadership, if that leadership is forthcoming. If it is not, those screens can—and should—be used by exhibition under its own leadership.

Producer-distributor defendants can afford to waste no more time in letting it be known on whose side they are. They must speak out now. They must act quickly. If they do not, they will have forfeited their leadership.

See Agreement On Arbitration Outline Wed.

With the way apparently cleared for reasonably prompt agreement on the question of competitive bidding, and with little controversy expected to attend the subject of award damages, the industry arbitration conference's Continuations Committee of 10, which will reconvene today at the Hotel Astor here, was said to be certain to complete by Wednesday its analysis of a blueprint for an industry arbitration system.

The committee spokesmen who on Friday offered this view of what could be expected in the way of accomplishment at the meetings, hastened to remind that confabs on arbitra-

Cases Over 3 Years Old No Bar to TV License; Delay ABC-UPT Merger

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — In a precedent making decision, the Federal Communications Commission ruled over the week-end that it would not consider anti-trust violations more than three years old outside the field of radio communications in passing on applications of persons who are already licensees.

The Commission made this statement in a decision denying to United Paramount Theatres and the American Broadcasting Co. the dual request for a speedy decision on the proposed merger between the two companies and the complete junking of the anti-trust issues involved in the merger.

In the opinion of industry attorneys, however, the three-year limitation on anti-trust involvement represents a substantial victory for the two com-

U. S. Suit An 'Assault on Small Business,' Myers Says

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Allied States Association general counsel Abram F. Myers let loose with another lengthy blast at the government's recent anti-trust suit, declaring it "the most devastating assault on small business ever made."

In a seven-page statement, Myers combined a scalding attack on the suit, aimed at forcing producers to release their films to television, with a legal analysis of various aspects of the government's case.

Myers recalled that his first comment on the suit raised the possibility that it was based on political, rather than legal, considerations. Further opportunity to study the complaint, he said, "confirmed that view." The suit, he stated, "appears to be something that was hastily whipped up for use in the coming campaign—a good-will gesture toward that new and important

TV Editor Fights US Suit For Silent Film Industry

By SHERWIN KANE

While the industry officially, at least, continues to maintain its ill-advised silence on the confiscatory suit brought by the Department of Justice on behalf of the television industry and campaign year voters with home TV sets, segments of the lay press are not hesitating to say on the industry's behalf what the industry should be saying for itself.

The erroneous policy of silence on the suit, it is learned, has been advocated by company lawyers for reasons which appear to be grounded more in timidity and indecision than on sound strategy or coherent thinking. The silent policy of the lawyers is being tolerated by some of their executive superiors who themselves are genuinely and vigorously opposed to the confiscation suit and who favor combating it in the open. How long they will continue to tolerate it is a question urgently in need of an answer.

Even the New York Times' television and radio specialist, Jack Gould, in the issue of Friday, August 1, called to the attention of television set owners some of the evil aspects of the Justice Department action which the industry itself should be pointing out to the public long before now.

Said Gould:

"Eager as the set owner may be to see more of Marilyn Monroe and less of Frankie Darrow, the department's action can hardly be regarded by the layman as a very equitable way of achieving that highly desirable end.

Wants Hari-Kari Committed

"Stripped of all the legal phraseology, the practical effect of the move by Attorney General Joseph McGranery is to ask the film industry to hurry up and commit hari-kari with a smile on its face.

"Under today's economics in the television field, with only 109 stations in operation, the most that a film can earn from TV fees is in the neighborhood of $25,000. For this paltry sum the producer presumably is expected to aggravate the crisis in his own business that has been caused by TV competition. In addition, he is supposed to be willing to sacrifice the $200,000 he could probably earn by showing the film another time in theatres.

"Under such circumstances Hollywood can hardly be blamed for not wanting to jeopardize its own existence merely to provide an attractive jackpot prize for TV. Realism clearly dictates a further waiting spell.

"In short, the Washington agency seems infected with the fever that somehow TV has some preordained right to show on its screen anything that it wants without regard to the economic consequences. Yet in the long run the interests of neither the television viewer nor a competitive economy are going to be served if the fields which can offer TV so much, such as Hollywood and sports, are not assured of their own continuing financial ability."

U. S. TV Suit

communication medium, television." He said the suit would enable campaign orators to claim the Administration is taking steps to permit television addicts to see the finest films without having to pay an admission charge or an admission tax.

But merchants are just beginning to realize how much their prosperity depends on successful operation of theatres in their community and how much they are hurt by TV, Myers declared. He predicted that small business all over the country would soon realize that the suit will, if successful, hurt them, and that the Administration, "thinking to step on an anthill, has actually stirred up a hornets' nest."

Myers pointed out that practically all of the defendants have their principal places of business and the pertinent records in New York, and declared the only reason he could see for filing the case in California was that the courts there are less congested and that "by putting on the pressure, the Department might be able to force the case to trial during the political campaign." He said he could not remember "another instance where the Department showed such eagerness to force an anti-trust case to an early trial."

The government's complaint was also attacked for implying that the industry is conspiring to deny film entertainment to the armed services and veterans hospitals. Myers said the Attorney General should be informed of the industry's long record in entertaining the troops and the tributes it has received from military leaders. "Our boys in Korea have their movie shows to entertain them." he said. "Maybe the Attorney General will explain what television is doing for the boys over there."

Another Myers' criticism of the complaint was the vagueness of the charges. He argued that when the government says the companies refused to license 16mm feature films to television, it should also have specified just where and when this happened. The Allied official defended the right of the producers, "as a matter of self-preservation," to refuse to license films to television "for peanuts," and asked that the Administration's stand on this issue be contrasted with the President's approval of the so-called Fair Trade Bill, which permits manufacturers of trade-marked items to set minimum resale prices on their products.

The Justice suit asks that the companies be enjoined from denying films to television other than on the basis of reasonable clearance over theatres. Myers cited the Supreme Court Paramount case findings on the point of what constitutes reasonable clearance, and said that since a television station showing films competes with every theatre in its broadcasting area, the film rental paid by the station would have to be pitted against the combined film rentals of all the theatres. "Unless the Department is going to switch the rules this late in the game," he declared, "the boon which it would confer on TV may be more illusory than real."

Moreover, Myers stated, when it is considered that TV stations have no admission charges and go in heavily for give-aways and premiums, "our firm idea is that judged by approved standards, clearance against that kind of competition should be measured in years, not days."

Finally Myers pointed out that the suit asks the court to affirmatively order the film companies to lease their films to television. This means, he said, that "if the parties cannot arrive at an agreement as to rentals, clearance or any of the many details of film licensing, the court will have to decide such controversies. Suppose under this mandatory order, a film company offers to license a picture to a broadcasting station and the latter complains that the order is being violated because the terms are too high, the clearance unreasonable or the picture is not one of the finer ones. The whole squabble will be dumped into the court's lap. It will have to work out a deal for the parties. And if that isn't governmental control with a vengeance, you name it."

The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.

Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

No Wonder the Telecasters Want Motion Pictures

ducted by the ITOA revealed the marked upsurge in patronage. Said the ITOA:

"Optimistic theatre owners reported unanimously that the political conventions had no effect on business, as was originally feared, and that the heat wave brought many new, and many 'lost' customers back to the luxury and air-conditioned comfort of the theatres."

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, commenting on the survey, stated: "It must be that people are no longer glued to their TV screens. They are escaping the hypnosis induced by the novelty of the medium and are coming back to the theatre for quality entertainment, which Hollywood is providing. Audiences like what they see, and we expect to keep them coming back by presenting a continuous flow of superior motion picture programs."

the deferment of all other industrial and commercial projects. The statement did not even mention theatre and other entertainment projects, and NPA officials said that these projects "are just out of the question" except on an emergency appeal basis in isolated cases.

Some NPA officials have indicated that it might be spring of next year before theatre controls can be relaxed.

NPA Files Charges Vs. Texas Drive-In

WASHINGTON, August 3.—The National Production Authority has charged two Texans with using too much copper wire to build a drive-in theatre in Amarillo.

This is the first non-compliance case in the theatre field, according to NPA officials.

The charges were brought against W. O. Bearden, of Lubbock and I. R. Doyal of Amarillo, partners doing business as the Tascosa Drive-in Theatre in Amarillo. A three-count complaint claims the partners unlawfully used copper wire in excess of authorized quantities in constructing the drive-in. One of the counts charges the respondents with furnishing false information regarding the amount of copper wire used in its construction.

The case will be presented before NPA hearing commissioner H. Bascom Thomas of Dallas later this month. NPA will recommend that the hearing commissioner issue suspension orders denying the firm self-certification privileges, priority assistance, allocations and allotments, and further prohibiting them from acquiring, using or disposition of controlled materials.

Pascal Says Artist Has Freedom Here

The European belief that Hollywood does not offer an artist free expression is not true, Gabriel Pascal declared here at the weekend. Pascal has completed his first Hollywood film, "Androcles and the Lion," for RKO Radio distribution. He said, "You can make better artistic pictures in Hollywood than anywhere else," citing the vast technical resources and the freedom from executive interference.

Pascal's next projects are "The Devil's Disciple" and "The Life of Ghandi," the latter to be made in India. Pascal expects to produce them independently and very likely will release them through RKO Radio. Pascal said he made "Androcles" for $1,600,000.

Pascal expressed enthusiasm over television, calling it "the coming great medium." He saw it as a boon to production in Hollywood, but hurting exhibition.

While in New York Pascal will confer with Theatre Guild executives on a musical based on "Pygmalion" which he hopes eventually to bring to the screen.

He praised the Production Code as "helpful and necessary everywhere," but said he thought it should be modernized. He declared that the Production Code Administration should consider differently "a picture based on a masterpiece."

tion always opened in the past on a note of optimism only to degenerate finally into discord and wrangles. Nonetheless, they were very hopeful that Wednesday could be devoted to recapitulation following two days of work on the blueprint.

Beyond the questions of competitive bidding and damages lie only the mechanics of a system for the Continuations Committee to agree upon. "Mechanics" were described as embracing such points as the constitution of national and local arbitration staffs and appeal boards, financing of a system, the role conciliation is to play, etc. The outlines of these points were agreed to at the initial industry arbitration conference held April 22-25.

Two other items, namely, forcing of pictures and violations of contracts, also will be dealt with at this week's meetings. It is understood, however, that if the bidding question is settled to the satisfaction of all, agreement will be forthcoming quickly on points in connection with these two additional items.

It was explained that when the Continuations Committee, comprised of five representatives each from exhibition and distribution, completes its analysis of the Rules Committee's blueprint of the first conference's work, a Redrafting Committee will be set up to put the Continuations group's concepts in the form of written proposals upon which the Department of Justice and the Statutory Court can pass. However, before the re-drafting unit's work is submitted for the Department's and the court's approval, it will have to be approved by each exhibitor organization and the Distributors' Arbitration Committee, headed by William F. Rodgers.

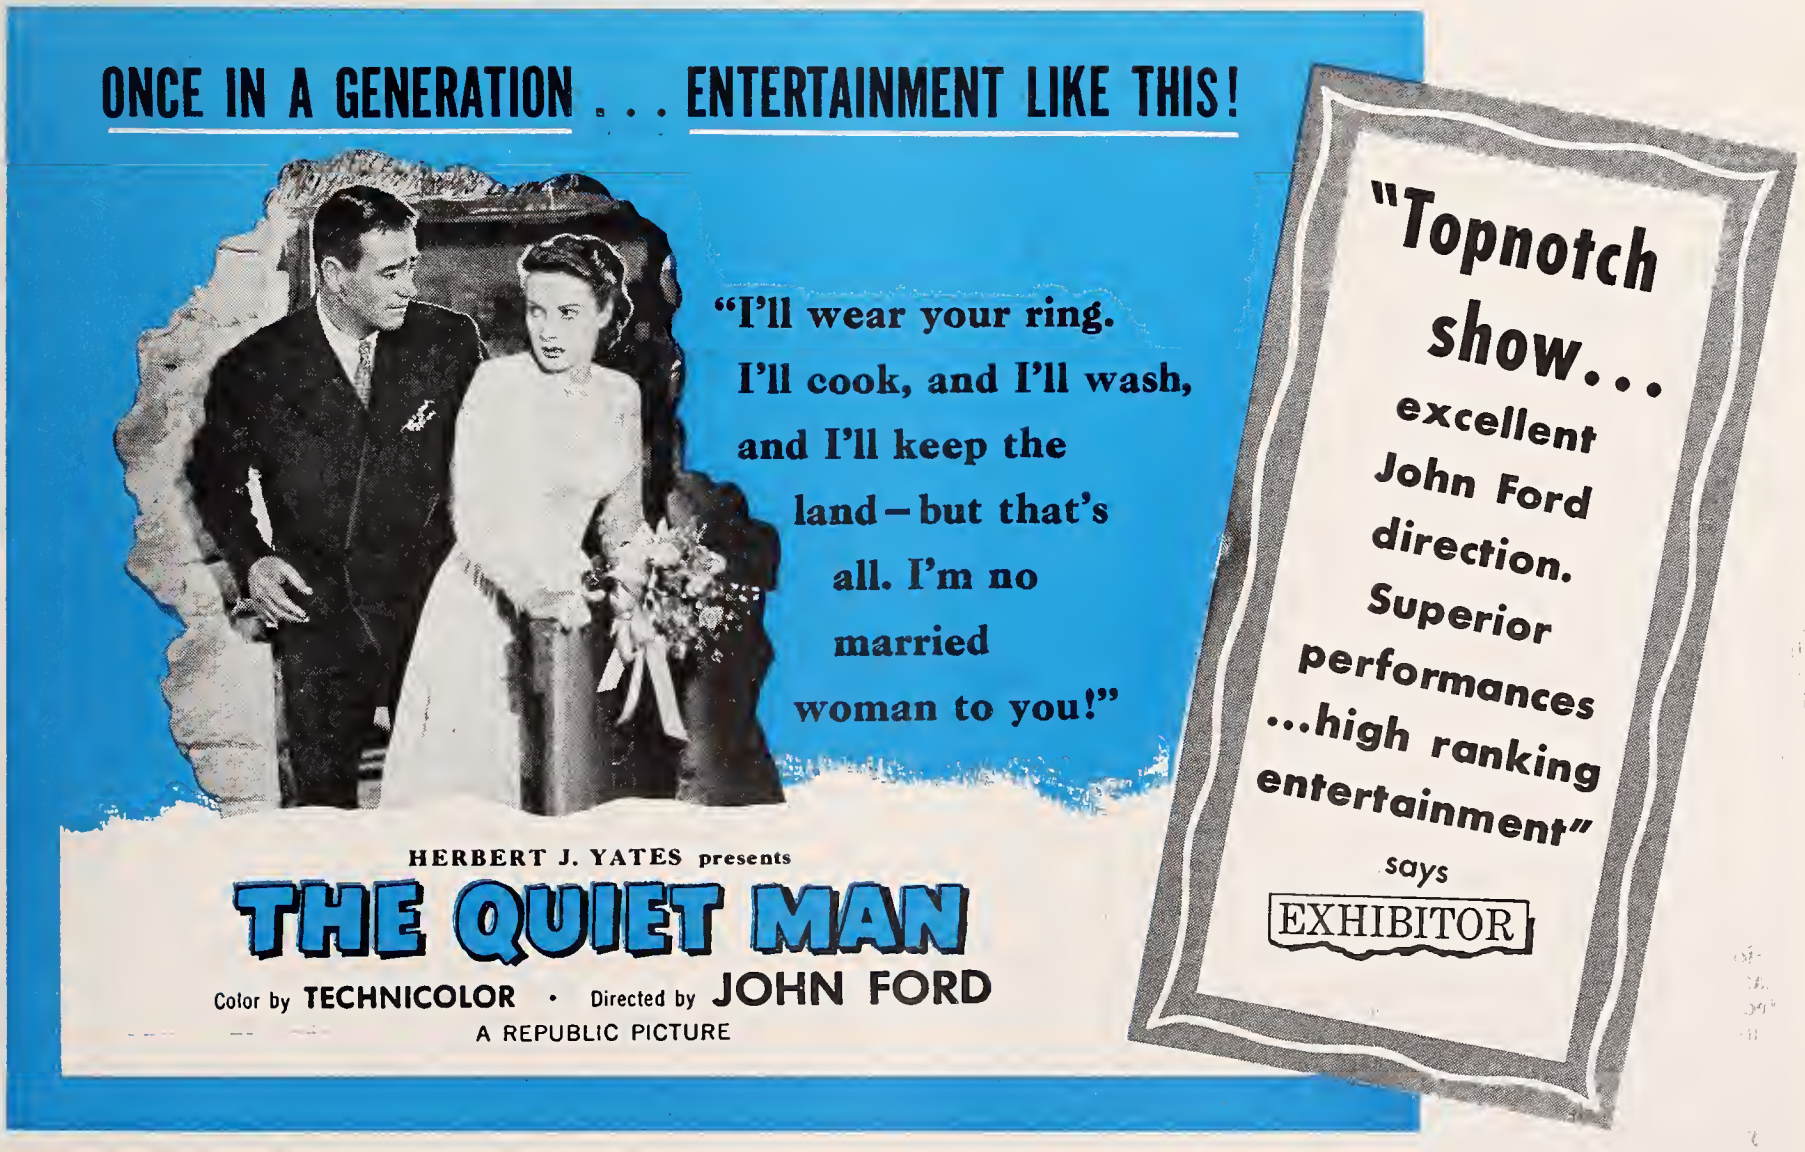
Following action on the draft by the constituent groups, Eric A. Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president, will call another industry arbitration conference, which will precede the submission of any proposals to the Justice Department and the court.

The Continuations Committee was set up on June 18 when the second industry arbitration conference reached an impasse (distributors versus exhibitors) in analyzing and amending the Rules Committee's draft of the first Conference's accomplishments.

On July 2, after meeting two-and-a-half days at Fabian Theatres' home office here, the Continuations group abruptly adjourned with the exhibitor representatives insisting that distribution presidents be present at future discussions relating to bidding and other knotty subjects.

Meanwhile, however, the distributors were reported to have reached agreement among themselves to accede to certain exhibitor demands relating to bidding and the place it should occupy in the arbitration framework. Johnston then set today for the Continuations group's reconvening.

Scheduled to be on hand today are the following: From exhibition: Abram F. Myers, Wilbur Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution: Robert W. Perkins, Adolph Schimel, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague and Rodgers. Due to attend as ex-officio members of the committee are: Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., MPAA vice-president, and Henderson M. Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference.



Wisc. and La. Move To Fight 20% Tax

Organizational activities in the field moving toward a full-scale attack on the Federal 20 per cent ticket tax continued at the weekend, with meetings held in Milwaukee and New Orleans and a second set for the latter city.

At the meeting held in Milwaukee, A. Kvool, of Warner Theatres and Sig Goldberg, Wisconsin Allied president, were named exhibitor co-chairmen, with Jack Lorentz, 20th Century Fox branch manager, as distribution chairman. On the state committee are Dick Saeger, Ben Marcus, Harry Melcher, L. F. Gran, Harry Rosenban and John Schuyler.

The purpose of the meeting was to set up district chairmen. Another meeting will be held in Milwaukee in two weeks to give instructions to the district chairmen on how the campaign will be carried out.

A New Orleans meeting on the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' drive to repeal the tax is scheduled to be held today. Theatre circuit heads, independent owners, distributor representatives and members of Allied Theatre Owners and Mississippi Theatre Owners will be informed of present COMPO action and plans in the drive.

FCC Licenses

panies, since the record of the seven-month hearing conducted to date on the merger shows no evidence of anti-trust activity since August 7, 1948, the deadline date set in the FCC order.

Whether the three-year provision can be called a blanket victory for all industry people applying for television stations or theatre television channels is moot, however. Attorneys say the provision is specifically limited in the FCC order to those who are already licensees, and only a small fraction of the industry people who will be FCC applicants is in this class.

So far as ABC-UPT's request for a speedy decision is concerned, the Commission's ruling throws the merger case right back into the lengthy procedural channels the two companies hoped to avoid. Attorneys involved in the case estimate from two to three months for filing proposed findings, after the close of the hearing, plus an additional two months for hearing examiner Leo Resnick to write an initial decision. The Commission's final decision will follow after this. The hearing, which has been in recess since July 3, has not yet closed, but indications are that it will probably not be resumed. The few witnesses remaining all pertain to anti-trust activity prior to 1948, hearing attorneys point out, and in the light of the FCC order probably will not be called. Resnick is expected to call a conference of attorneys some time next week to decide on the future course of the hearing.

Many industry attorneys felt, however, that the Commission's feeling about the impracticability of delving into what it called "the relatively distant past" was an indication that it might eventually extend the anti-trust time limitation to applicants who were not already licensees, thus benefitting all the industry.

The only possible bar to declaring the hearings closed is the interrupted wind-up testimony of Arthur Levey, current Skiatron and former Scophony Corp. of America head. Testimony on Scophony comes within the radio communications field—in which the Commission order placed no time limitation. On the other hand, the order declares specifically that "in all further proceedings herein no consideration be given to evidence relating to any of the activities of the parties to this proceeding which occurred more than three years before August 7, 1951, the date upon which the renewal licenses were originally designated for hearing."

The Commission order declared that it recognized the fact that ABC's financial position demands a decision as soon as possible, but declared that waiving the hearing examiner's initial decision — which ABC-UPT requested—would not expedite a quick decision. "Due to the examiner's familiarity with the record," the order stated, "greater expedition may be possible in the final determination of these proceedings if an initial decision is prepared by him." The Commission went on to say that it was convinced every possible effort should be made "consistent with a full and fair hearing to all parties concerned," to expedite the proceedings and declared that "the examiner may be be relied upon to secure the cooperation of all participants towards this end." It also said that "limitation of the issues in the manner we have ordered should bring about a substantially earlier conclusion of the proceedings."

As one reason for deciding against waiving the examiner's decision the order stated that "numerous complex issues are raised in this proceeding." Specifically, it mentioned a point raised by the chief of the FCC broadcast bureau—"that the credibility of certain key officials of some of the applicants may be a vital issue." In its opposition to ABC-UPT's request for waiving the examiner's decision and throwing out the anti-trust issue, the broadcast bureau had declared that there were conflicts in the testimony of Leonard Goldenson, UPT president, and A. H. Blank, a UPT director.

"The examiner, who heard the witnesses," the FCC order said, "is in the best position to pass, at least initially, upon the credibility of the witnesses."

Complete Deletion Not Warranted

The commission order stated that the complete deletion of the anti-trust issues was not warranted. "However," the order went on, "we are of the opinion that this proceeding and other recent experiences of the Commission have demonstrated, at least with respect to applicants who are existing licensees with records as broadcasters, the complete impracticability of trying to delve into and evaluate the entire history, remote as well as recent, of such applicants' activities in fields other than radio communications which may have involved violations of the anti-trust laws."

The report declared that activities of "recent vintage" should be considered in determining the applicants' fitness. "However," the report continued, "where these activities took place in the relatively distant past and have not continued, we are of the opinion that their materiality to a determination as to the qualifications of an existing licensee is negligible. Accordingly, in general, we shall not, in passing upon applications of persons who are already licensees, consider any activities involving possible anti-trust violations not directly involving radio communications which occurred more than three years before the filing of said applications."

Commissioner Jones dissented from this portion of the order.

In its order the Commission also denied petitions for severance from the hearing, filed some time ago by both ABC-UPT and Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., also a party to the case.

In denying the ABC-UPT petition for severance, the commission declared that the "petition was improperly premised upon an assumption that the evidence pertaining to the qualifications of Paramount Pictures, Inc., has no connection with the qualifications of any of the parties to the applications sought to be severed." The order pointed out that Paramount Pictures, Inc., was the predecessor company of UPT and that individuals connected with the former were still connected with UPT. The order mentioned the "interrelationship of the issues and the voluminous evidence necessarily bearing upon the qualifications of the applicants" and declared that the process of decision would not be expedited by severing ABC-UPT from the hearing.

Where the DuMont petition for severance was concerned, the Commission declared that the issues relating to DuMont and its possible control by Paramount Pictures Corp., could not be severed from the other issues in the hearing. "The issue of control of DuMont by Paramount Pictures Corp. has primary significance in this proceeding," the order said, "in relation to the question of whether Paramount Pictures Corp. is qualified to control, directly or indirectly, radio broadcast stations in the light of evidence adduced on the issues concerning the past anti-trust conduct of Paramount Pictures, Inc., and the possible illegal transfer of control involved in certain acquisitions of properties by Paramount Pictures Corp. from Paramount Pictures, Inc."

Commission attorneys in the hearing have claimed that the transfer of control of DuMont from the parent company to Paramount Pictures, Inc. might be considered illegal since the request for the transfer was never properly made to the Commission. Commissioners Sterling and Hennock did not participate in the order.

PIRACY ON THE HIGH SEAS and love and intrigue on the island of Jamaica in the year of 1728 provide the tone of this spirited William Pine and William Thomas action drama in color by Technicolor. Made in the conventional format, the story has all of the swashbuckling adventure and excitement that make a hit with the fans. John Payne and Arlene Dahl have the romantic leads with support coming from Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Francis S. Sullivan.

Hardwicke, hard but suave captain of the dreaded pirate ship Black Panther, enlists the aid of Payne in a plan to get revenge on Sullivan. It seems that Sullivan, now a ruler of a stronghold in Jamaica, had long been an enemy of Hardwicke and years previously kidnapped his daughter, Miss Dahl, and reared her as his own child. Hardwicke conditions Payne to impersonate a nephew of Sullivan's, gain admission to the island stronghold, and eventually pave the way for an attack. Complications develop, however, when Payne falls in love with Miss Dahl.

The screenplay by Frank L. Moss and Edward Ludwig evolves against an interesting, scenic Jamaican background which delineates native unrest against the iron rule of Sullivan. Hardwicke finally makes his assault on the island, but in a touch of irony he is killed by his own daughter, she never knowing his identity.

The story, directed by Ludwig, ends on a happy conventional note surrounding Payne and Miss Dahl.

Running time, 97 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

See French Union Affecting New Franco-U.S. Pact

By HENRY KAHN

PARIS, July 31 (By Airmail).—A significant bearing on negotiations for a new Franco-American film agreement is seen by the emergence of the new autonomous French Technicians Union as a power within the framework of the French industry.

Another factor is last week's news that the French government has decided to cut the number of dubbing visas for foreign films by 26 per cent. The total is now definitely placed at 138, against a former 186, but will not include films which win prizes at Cannes. This is one of the fait accomplis that will face the Americans when talks are resumed.

The new group has 300 members already. It is expected to increase its strength to 500 within the next week or two. M. Jeanger, one of the union's officials, told this bureau that the organization was attracting the smaller technicians in particular and he thought this a very good thing.

Hard and Fast Rules

The all-powerful Communist-dominated union is in a serious position. It is said to be in financial trouble. Indeed, a sigh of relief has gone up following the establishment of the new union which, incidentally, is non-political.

The new group has laid down several hard and fast rules. For one, it intends protecting the interests of the French technicians. Also, it will not tolerate politics. The leaders believe their best interests are in international cooperation. For this reason, the union has started with a profound examination of the Franco-U. S. agreement.

A meeting with U. S. Embassy officials has been requested. At that time, union spokesmen will point out that closer cooperation between France and America is essential. It will ask the Americans to try and understand the French position.

And the union intends to ask the Americans not to press for free and unrestricted visas and to accept a cut if necessary. In return, the union will oppose any restriction on the making of foreign films in France. It will oppose the doubling of production teams, and it will in fact ask the Americans to come to France to make their films, using both exteriors and the French studios.

The union also is in favor of co-production and it suggests that part of the American earnings in this country should be used for the production of Franco-American features. The creation of the union has somewhat eased the situation but no visas are given out for new films.

The way it shapes up now, the Americans will get their 121 visas provided they help the French industry. Should they insist on unrestricted visas and no help, then there will be trouble. Exhibitors generally side with the Americans, but they know they must take a stand along with the rest of the industry to help save the French cinema.

VOL. 72. NO. 24 NEW YORK, U. S. A., MONDAY, AUGUST 4, 1952 TEN CENTS

Tradewise . . .

By SHERWIN KANE

THE CONTINUED silence of producer-distributor defendants in the Justice Department's anti-trust suit on behalf of the television industry is feeding suspicion and uneasiness among exhibitors nationally.

In the nearly two weeks which have passed since the filing of the suit in Los Angeles Federal Court, no producer-distributor defendant has given any official indication whatever that the politically colored suit is either distasteful or unwelcome.

This policy, if not reversed immediately and with a show of leadership unmistakably dedicated to an all-out fight against confiscation under the guise of anti-trust prosecution, can end only in a divided and suspicion-ridden industry.

If defendants are to content themselves with going through the legal motions of filing formal answers and denials, an aroused exhibition branch, with all its allies, will not be patient. Those to whom the industry looks for leadership will be discredited. War has been declared and in it there is no room for reluctant or hesitant captains.

This is a battle which must be won. To win it, the fight must be carried to the public. An equally senseless and obnoxious case brought by the Justice Department last year against the A. & P. chain stores was won by the latter by exactly that method. A badly beaten and publicly discredited Justice Department within a matter of weeks gave indication that it rued the day it started that action.

This industry has at its own command a medium of communication with the public not available to the A. & P. stores in waging its justified and successful battle against the Justice Department. That medium—the theatre screens of the nation—can be enlisted by producer-distributor leadership, if that leadership is forthcoming. If it is not, those screens can—and should—be used by exhibition under its own leadership.

Producer-distributor defendants can afford to waste no more time in letting it be known on whose side they are. They must speak out now. They must act quickly. If they do not, they will have forfeited their leadership.

With the way apparently cleared for reasonably prompt agreement on the question of competitive bidding, and with little controversy expected to attend the subject of award damages, the industry arbitration conference's Continuations Committee of 10, which will reconvene today at the Hotel Astor here, was said to be certain to complete by Wednesday its analysis of a blueprint for an industry arbitration system.

The committee spokesmen who on Friday offered this view of what could be expected in the way of accomplishment at the meetings, hastened to remind that confabs on arbitra-

Cases Over 3 Years Old No Bar to TV License; Delay ABC-UPT Merger

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — In a precedent making decision, the Federal Communications Commission ruled over the week-end that it would not consider anti-trust violations more than three years old outside the field of radio communications in passing on applications of persons who are already licensees.

The Commission made this statement in a decision denying to United Paramount Theatres and the American Broadcasting Co. the dual request for a speedy decision on the proposed merger between the two companies and the complete junking of the anti-trust issues involved in the merger.

In the opinion of industry attorneys, however, the three-year limitation on anti-trust involvement represents a substantial victory for the two com-

U. S. Suit An 'Assault on Small Business,' Myers Says

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Allied States Association general counsel Abram F. Myers let loose with another lengthy blast at the government's recent anti-trust suit, declaring it "the most devastating assault on small business ever made."

In a seven-page statement, Myers combined a scalding attack on the suit, aimed at forcing producers to release their films to television, with a legal analysis of various aspects of the government's case.

Myers recalled that his first comment on the suit raised the possibility that it was based on political, rather than legal, considerations. Further opportunity to study the complaint, he said, "confirmed that view." The suit, he stated, "appears to be something that was hastily whipped up for use in the coming campaign—a good-will gesture toward that new and important

TV Editor Fights US Suit For Silent Film Industry

By SHERWIN KANE

While the industry officially, at least, continues to maintain its ill-advised silence on the confiscatory suit brought by the Department of Justice on behalf of the television industry and campaign year voters with home TV sets, segments of the lay press are not hesitating to say on the industry's behalf what the industry should be saying for itself.

The erroneous policy of silence on the suit, it is learned, has been advocated by company lawyers for reasons which appear to be grounded more in timidity and indecision than on sound strategy or coherent thinking. The silent policy of the lawyers is being tolerated by some of their executive superiors who themselves are genuinely and vigorously opposed to the confiscation suit and who favor combating it in the open. How long they will continue to tolerate it is a question urgently in need of an answer.

Even the New York Times' television and radio specialist, Jack Gould, in the issue of Friday, August 1, called to the attention of television set owners some of the evil aspects of the Justice Department action which the industry itself should be pointing out to the public long before now.

Said Gould:

"Eager as the set owner may be to see more of Marilyn Monroe and less of Frankie Darrow, the department's action can hardly be regarded by the layman as a very equitable way of achieving that highly desirable end.

Wants Hari-Kari Committed

"Stripped of all the legal phraseology, the practical effect of the move by Attorney General Joseph McGranery is to ask the film industry to hurry up and commit hari-kari with a smile on its face.

"Under today's economics in the television field, with only 109 stations in operation, the most that a film can earn from TV fees is in the neighborhood of $25,000. For this paltry sum the producer presumably is expected to aggravate the crisis in his own business that has been caused by TV competition. In addition, he is supposed to be willing to sacrifice the $200,000 he could probably earn by showing the film another time in theatres.

"Under such circumstances Hollywood can hardly be blamed for not wanting to jeopardize its own existence merely to provide an attractive jackpot prize for TV. Realism clearly dictates a further waiting spell.

"In short, the Washington agency seems infected with the fever that somehow TV has some preordained right to show on its screen anything that it wants without regard to the economic consequences. Yet in the long run the interests of neither the television viewer nor a competitive economy are going to be served if the fields which can offer TV so much, such as Hollywood and sports, are not assured of their own continuing financial ability."

communication medium, television." He said the suit would enable campaign orators to claim the Administration is taking steps to permit television addicts to see the finest films without having to pay an admission charge or an admission tax.

But merchants are just beginning to realize how much their prosperity depends on successful operation of theatres in their community and how much they are hurt by TV, Myers declared. He predicted that small business all over the country would soon realize that the suit will, if successful, hurt them, and that the Administration, "thinking to step on an anthill, has actually stirred up a hornets' nest."

Myers pointed out that practically all of the defendants have their principal places of business and the pertinent records in New York, and declared the only reason he could see for filing the case in California was that the courts there are less congested and that "by putting on the pressure, the Department might be able to force the case to trial during the political campaign." He said he could not remember "another instance where the Department showed such eagerness to force an anti-trust case to an early trial."

The government's complaint was also attacked for implying that the industry is conspiring to deny film entertainment to the armed services and veterans hospitals. Myers said the Attorney General should be informed of the industry's long record in entertaining the troops and the tributes it has received from military leaders. "Our boys in Korea have their movie shows to entertain them." he said. "Maybe the Attorney General will explain what television is doing for the boys over there."

Another Myers' criticism of the complaint was the vagueness of the charges. He argued that when the government says the companies refused to license 16mm feature films to television, it should also have specified just where and when this happened. The Allied official defended the right of the producers, "as a matter of self-preservation," to refuse to license films to television "for peanuts," and asked that the Administration's stand on this issue be contrasted with the President's approval of the so-called Fair Trade Bill, which permits manufacturers of trade-marked items to set minimum resale prices on their products.

The Justice suit asks that the companies be enjoined from denying films to television other than on the basis of reasonable clearance over theatres. Myers cited the Supreme Court Paramount case findings on the point of what constitutes reasonable clearance, and said that since a television station showing films competes with every theatre in its broadcasting area, the film rental paid by the station would have to be pitted against the combined film rentals of all the theatres. "Unless the Department is going to switch the rules this late in the game," he declared, "the boon which it would confer on TV may be more illusory than real."

Moreover, Myers stated, when it is considered that TV stations have no admission charges and go in heavily for giveaways and premiums, "our firm idea is that judged by approved standards, clearance against that kind of competition should be measured in years, not days."

Finally Myers pointed out that the suit asks the court to affirmatively order the film companies to lease their films to television. This means, he said, that "if the parties cannot arrive at an agreement as to rentals, clearance or any of the many details of film licensing, the court will have to decide such controversies. Suppose under this mandatory order, a film company offers to license a picture to a broadcasting station and the latter complains that the order is being violated because the terms are too high, the clearance unreasonable or the picture is not one of the finer ones. The whole squabble will be dumped into the court's lap. It will have to work out a deal for the parties. And if that isn't governmental control with a vengeance, you name it."

* Pictures featured in M. P. Daily advertising during past 6 weeks.

The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.

Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

No Wonder the Telecasters Want Motion Pictures

N. Y. Business

ducted by the ITOA revealed the marked upsurge in patronage. Said the ITOA:

"Optimistic theatre owners reported unanimously that the political conventions had no effect on business, as was originally feared, and that the heat wave brought many new, and many 'lost' customers back to the luxury and air-conditioned comfort of the theatres."

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, commenting on the survey, stated: "It must be that people are no longer glued to their TV screens. They are escaping the hypnosis induced by the novelty of the medium and are coming back to the theatre for quality entertainment, which Hollywood is providing. Audiences like what they see, and we expect to keep them coming back by presenting a continuous flow of superior motion picture programs."

the deferment of all other industrial and commercial projects. The statement did not even mention theatre and other entertainment projects, and NPA officials said that these projects "are just out of the question" except on an emergency appeal basis in isolated cases.

Some NPA officials have indicated that it might be spring of next year before theatre controls can be relaxed.

NPA Files Charges Vs. Texas Drive-In

WASHINGTON, August 3.—The National Production Authority has charged two Texans with using too much copper wire to build a drive-in theatre in Amarillo.

This is the first non-compliance case in the theatre field, according to NPA officials.

The charges were brought against W. O. Bearden, of Lubbock and I. R. Doyal of Amarillo, partners doing business as the Tascosa Drive-in Theatre in Amarillo. A three-count complaint claims the partners unlawfully used copper wire in excess of authorized quantities in constructing the drive-in. One of the counts charges the respondents with furnishing false information regarding the amount of copper wire used in its construction.

The case will be presented before NPA hearing commissioner H. Bascom Thomas of Dallas later this month. NPA will recommend that the hearing commissioner issue suspension orders denying the firm self-certification privileges, priority assistance, allocations and allotments, and further prohibiting them from acquiring, using or disposition of controlled materials.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 3.—The appointment of Ray M. Copeland to the post of branch manager here of Monogram-Allied Artists, succeeding H. L. Frost, who recently resigned, was announced at the weekend by Harold Wirthwein, Western sales manager.

Pascal Says Artist Has Freedom Here

The European belief that Hollywood does not offer an artist free expression is not true, Gabriel Pascal declared here at the weekend. Pascal has completed his first Hollywood film, "Androcles and the Lion," for RKO Radio distribution. He said, "You can make better artistic pictures in Hollywood than anywhere else," citing the vast technical resources and the freedom from executive interference.

Pascal's next projects are "The Devil's Disciple" and "The Life of Ghandi," the latter to be made in India. Pascal expects to produce them independently and very likely will release them through RKO Radio. Pascal said he made "Androcles" for $1,600,000.

Pascal expressed enthusiasm over television, calling it "the coming great medium." He saw it as a boon to production in Hollywood, but hurting exhibition.

While in New York Pascal will confer with Theatre Guild executives on a musical based on "Pygmalion" which he hopes eventually to bring to the screen.

He praised the Production Code as "helpful and necessary everywhere," but said he thought it should be modernized. He declared that the Production Code Administration should consider differently "a picture based on a masterpiece."

tion always opened in the past on a note of optimism only to degenerate finally into discord and wrangles. Nonetheless, they were very hopeful that Wednesday could be devoted to recapitulation following two days of work on the blueprint.

Beyond the questions of competitive bidding and damages lie only the mechanics of a system for the Continuations Committee to agree upon. "Mechanics" were described as embracing such points as the constitution of national and local arbitration staffs and appeal boards, financing of a system, the role conciliation is to play, etc. The outlines of these points were agreed to at the initial industry arbitration conference held April 22-25.

Two other items, namely, forcing of pictures and violations of contracts, also will be dealt with at this week's meetings. It is understood, however, that if the bidding question is settled to the satisfaction of all, agreement will be forthcoming quickly on points in connection with these two additional items.

It was explained that when the Continuations Committee, comprised of five representatives each from exhibition and distribution, completes its analysis of the Rules Committee's blueprint of the first conference's work, a Redrafting Committee will be set up to put the Continuations group's concepts in the form of written proposals upon which the Department of Justice and the Statutory Court can pass. However, before the re-drafting unit's work is submitted for the Department's and the court's approval, it will have to be approved by each exhibitor organization and the Distributors' Arbitration Committee, headed by William F. Rodgers.

Following action on the draft by the constituent groups, Eric A. Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president, will call another industry arbitration conference, which will precede the submission of any proposals to the Justice Department and the court.

The Continuations Committee was set up on June 18 when the second industry arbitration conference reached an impasse (distributors versus exhibitors) in analyzing and amending the Rules Committee's draft of the first Conference's accomplishments.

On July 2, after meeting two-and-a-half days at Fabian Theatres' home office here, the Continuations group abruptly adjourned with the exhibitor representatives insisting that distribution presidents be present at future discussions relating to bidding and other knotty subjects.

Meanwhile, however, the distributors were reported to have reached agreement among themselves to accede to certain exhibitor demands relating to bidding and the place it should occupy in the arbitration framework. Johnston then set today for the Continuations group's reconvening.

Scheduled to be on hand today are the following: From exhibition: Abram F. Myers, Wilbur Snaper, Herman M. Levy, S. H. Fabian, Emanuel Frisch; from distribution: Robert W. Perkins, Adolph Schimel, Al Lichtman, Abe Montague and Rodgers. Due to attend as ex-officio members of the committee are: Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., MPAA vice-president, and Henderson M. Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference.

Wisc. and La. Move To Fight 20% Tax

Organizational activities in the field moving toward a full-scale attack on the Federal 20 per cent ticket tax continued at the weekend, with meetings held in Milwaukee and New Orleans and a second set for the latter city.

At the meeting held in Milwaukee, A. Kvool, of Warner Theatres and Sig Goldberg, Wisconsin Allied president, were named exhibitor co-chairmen, with Jack Lorentz, 20th Century Fox branch manager, as distribution chairman. On the state committee are Dick Saeger, Ben Marcus, Harry Melcher, L. F. Gran, Harry Rosenban and John Schuyler.

The purpose of the meeting was to set up district chairmen. Another meeting will be held in Milwaukee in two weeks to give instructions to the district chairmen on how the campaign will be carried out.

A New Orleans meeting on the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' drive to repeal the tax is scheduled to be held today. Theatre circuit heads, independent owners, distributor representatives and members of Allied Theatre Owners and Mississippi Theatre Owners will be informed of present COMPO action and plans in the drive.

FCC Licenses

panies, since the record of the seven-month hearing conducted to date on the merger shows no evidence of anti-trust activity since August 7, 1948, the deadline date set in the FCC order.

Whether the three-year provision can be called a blanket victory for all industry people applying for television stations or theatre television channels is moot, however. Attorneys say the provision is specifically limited in the FCC order to those who are already licensees, and only a small fraction of the industry people who will be FCC applicants is in this class.

So far as ABC-UPT's request for a speedy decision is concerned, the Commission's ruling throws the merger case right back into the lengthy procedural channels the two companies hoped to avoid. Attorneys involved in the case estimate from two to three months for filing proposed findings, after the close of the hearing, plus an additional two months for hearing examiner Leo Resnick to write an initial decision. The Commission's final decision will follow after this. The hearing, which has been in recess since July 3, has not yet closed, but indications are that it will probably not be resumed. The few witnesses remaining all pertain to anti-trust activity prior to 1948, hearing attorneys point out, and in the light of the FCC order probably will not be called. Resnick is expected to call a conference of attorneys some time next week to decide on the future course of the hearing.

Many industry attorneys felt, however, that the Commission's feeling about the impracticability of delving into what it called "the relatively distant past" was an indication that it might eventually extend the anti-trust time limitation to applicants who were not already licensees, thus benefitting all the industry.

The only possible bar to declaring the hearings closed is the interrupted wind-up testimony of Arthur Levey, current Skiatron and former Scophony Corp. of America head. Testimony on Scophony comes within the radio communications field—in which the Commission order placed no time limitation. On the other hand, the order declares specifically that "in all further proceedings herein no consideration be given to evidence relating to any of the activities of the parties to this proceeding which occurred more than three years before August 7, 1951, the date upon which the renewal licenses were originally designated for hearing."

The Commission order declared that it recognized the fact that ABC's financial position demands a decision as soon as possible, but declared that waiving the hearing examiner's initial decision — which ABC-UPT requested—would not expedite a quick decision. "Due to the examiner's familiarity with the record," the order stated, "greater expedition may be possible in the final determination of these proceedings if an initial decision is prepared by him." The Commission went on to say that it was convinced every possible effort should be made "consistent with a full and fair hearing to all parties concerned," to expedite the proceedings and declared that "the examiner may be be relied upon to secure the cooperation of all participants towards this end." It also said that "limitation of the issues in the manner we have ordered should bring about a substantially earlier conclusion of the proceedings."

As one reason for deciding against waiving the examiner's decision the order stated that "numerous complex issues are raised in this proceeding." Specifically, it mentioned a point raised by the chief of the FCC broadcast bureau—"that the credibility of certain key officials of some of the applicants may be a vital issue." In its opposition to ABC-UPT's request for waiving the examiner's decision and throwing out the anti-trust issue, the broadcast bureau had declared that there were conflicts in the testimony of Leonard Goldenson, UPT president, and A. H. Blank, a UPT director.

"The examiner, who heard the witnesses," the FCC order said, "is in the best position to pass, at least initially, upon the credibility of the witnesses."

Complete Deletion Not Warranted

The commission order stated that the complete deletion of the anti-trust issues was not warranted. "However," the order went on, "we are of the opinion that this proceeding and other recent experiences of the Commission have demonstrated, at least with respect to applicants who are existing licensees with records as broadcasters, the complete impracticability of trying to delve into and evaluate the entire history, remote as well as recent, of such applicants' activities in fields other than radio communications which may have involved violations of the anti-trust laws."

The report declared that activities of "recent vintage" should be considered in determining the applicants' fitness. "However," the report continued, "where these activities took place in the relatively distant past and have not continued, we are of the opinion that their materiality to a determination as to the qualifications of an existing licensee is negligible. Accordingly, in general, we shall not, in passing upon applications of persons who are already licensees, consider any activities involving possible anti-trust violations not directly involving radio communications which occurred more than three years before the filing of said applications."

Commissioner Jones dissented from this portion of the order.

In its order the Commission also denied petitions for severance from the hearing, filed some time ago by both ABC-UPT and Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., also a party to the case.

In denying the ABC-UPT petition for severance, the commission declared that the "petition was improperly premised upon an assumption that the evidence pertaining to the qualifications of Paramount Pictures, Inc., has no connection with the qualifications of any of the parties to the applications sought to be severed." The order pointed out that Paramount Pictures, Inc., was the predecessor company of UPT and that individuals connected with the former were still connected with UPT. The order mentioned the "interrelationship of the issues and the voluminous evidence necessarily bearing upon the qualifications of the applicants" and declared that the process of decision would not be expedited by severing ABC-UPT from the hearing.

Where the DuMont petition for severance was concerned, the Commission declared that the issues relating to DuMont and its possible control by Paramount Pictures Corp., could not be severed from the other issues in the hearing. "The issue of control of DuMont by Paramount Pictures Corp. has primary significance in this proceeding," the order said, "in relation to the question of whether Paramount Pictures Corp. is qualified to control, directly or indirectly, radio broadcast stations in the light of evidence adduced on the issues concerning the past anti-trust conduct of Paramount Pictures, Inc., and the possible illegal transfer of control involved in certain acquisitions of properties by Paramount Pictures Corp. from Paramount Pictures, Inc."

Commission attorneys in the hearing have claimed that the transfer of control of DuMont from the parent company to Paramount Pictures, Inc. might be considered illegal since the request for the transfer was never properly made to the Commission. Commissioners Sterling and Hennock did not participate in the order.

PIRACY ON THE HIGH SEAS and love and intrigue on the island of Jamaica in the year of 1728 provide the tone of this spirited William Pine and William Thomas action drama in color by Technicolor. Made in the conventional format, the story has all of the swashbuckling adventure and excitement that make a hit with the fans. John Payne and Arlene Dahl have the romantic leads with support coming from Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Francis S. Sullivan.

Hardwicke, hard but suave captain of the dreaded pirate ship Black Panther, enlists the aid of Payne in a plan to get revenge on Sullivan. It seems that Sullivan, now a ruler of a stronghold in Jamaica, had long been an enemy of Hardwicke and years previously kidnapped his daughter, Miss Dahl, and reared her as his own child. Hardwicke conditions Payne to impersonate a nephew of Sullivan's, gain admission to the island stronghold, and eventually pave the way for an attack. Complications develop, however, when Payne falls in love with Miss Dahl.

The screenplay by Frank L. Moss and Edward Ludwig evolves against an interesting, scenic Jamaican background which delineates native unrest against the iron rule of Sullivan. Hardwicke finally makes his assault on the island, but in a touch of irony he is killed by his own daughter, she never knowing his identity.

The story, directed by Ludwig, ends on a happy conventional note surrounding Payne and Miss Dahl.

Running time, 97 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

See French Union Affecting New Franco-U.S. Pact

By HENRY KAHN

PARIS, July 31 (By Airmail).—A significant bearing on negotiations for a new Franco-American film agreement is seen by the emergence of the new autonomous French Technicians Union as a power within the framework of the French industry.

Another factor is last week's news that the French government has decided to cut the number of dubbing visas for foreign films by 26 per cent. The total is now definitely placed at 138, against a former 186, but will not include films which win prizes at Cannes. This is one of the fait accomplis that will face the Americans when talks are resumed.

The new group has 300 members already. It is expected to increase its strength to 500 within the next week or two. M. Jeanger, one of the union's officials, told this bureau that the organization was attracting the smaller technicians in particular and he thought this a very good thing.

Hard and Fast Rules

The all-powerful Communist-dominated union is in a serious position. It is said to be in financial trouble. Indeed, a sigh of relief has gone up following the establishment of the new union which, incidentally, is non-political.

The new group has laid down several hard and fast rules. For one, it intends protecting the interests of the French technicians. Also, it will not tolerate politics. The leaders believe their best interests are in international cooperation. For this reason, the union has started with a profound examination of the Franco-U. S. agreement.

A meeting with U. S. Embassy officials has been requested. At that time, union spokesmen will point out that closer cooperation between France and America is essential. It will ask the Americans to try and understand the French position.

And the union intends to ask the Americans not to press for free and unrestricted visas and to accept a cut if necessary. In return, the union will oppose any restriction on the making of foreign films in France. It will oppose the doubling of production teams, and it will in fact ask the Americans to come to France to make their films, using both exteriors and the French studios.

The union also is in favor of co-production and it suggests that part of the American earnings in this country should be used for the production of Franco-American features. The creation of the union has somewhat eased the situation but no visas are given out for new films.

The way it shapes up now, the Americans will get their 121 visas provided they help the French industry. Should they insist on unrestricted visas and no help, then there will be trouble. Exhibitors generally side with the Americans, but they know they must take a stand along with the rest of the industry to help save the French cinema.

"It is inconceivable that the Government would institute an anti-trust action against major motion picture producers and distributors to compel them to supply 16 millimeter movies to television, which, by the nature of its free presentation to the public, would bankrupt the movie theatres of the Nation.

Deal Set for Lease Of Broadway Theatre

The conclusion of negotiations for the leasing of the Broadway Theatre here for the public demonstration of Cinerama was disclosed yesterday by a spokesman for Thomas-Todd Productions, which controls the "three-dimensional" sound and sight process. The formal signing of the lease is due today.

Terms of the lease, it was learned, provide for a 10-week guarantee of $3,000 per week against a percentage of the gross for the owners of the theatre, Lee and J. J. Shubert.

Pasadena Exhibitor Hits Censor Law

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 4.—Al O'Keefe, operating the Colorado Theatre, Pasadena, has appealed informally to that city's board of directors to nullify Pasadena's 20-year-old censorship ordinance under which, according to O'Keefe, "The Miracle," "Latuko," and "La Ronde" were disapproved recently. In a letter to the city board, O'Keefe argued that the Supreme Court ruling outlawed the Pasadena ordinance.

of the theatre, which is not involved in the dispute.

Edward Meyerding, speaking for the ACLU, said that he would ask Mayor Kennelly to reverse the censor Board's ban of the film, but the mayor has indicated that he will not enter the fight.

Although admission to the screening was free and by invitation only, the Commissioner contended that it was a public showing and therefore a violation of the censor board's banning of the picture. O'Connor contends that the movie "ridicules any branch of Christianity, not just Catholics."

Foreign Business Good, Says Weltner

Sue Tri-States, Central States

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Two suits were filed against major film companies and Tri-States and Central States circuits in Southern Iowa Federal District Court by Seymour Simon, Chicago film attorney. One asks for $450,000 treble damages because, the brief alleges, distributors and the circuits conspired from June 5, 1946 until now to keep first-run films from the Capitol Theatre at Iowa City.

The second suit says the film companies with the exception of United Artists and Columbia, along with the same two circuits, conspired to keep first-run releases from the Coronet Theatre in Davenport, Iowa.

Review

"Arctic Flight"

(Monogram) Hollywood, Aug. 4

ALL CONCERNED with the making of this adventure film about life in the Arctic—executives, cast and crew—journeyed to precisely that place to film it. The result of this investment in authenticity is strikingly shown in the finished product. Although the romantic adventure story played out by Wayne Morris, Alan Hale, Jr., Carol Thurston and Lola Albright is a work of fiction, the genuine setting, customs and manners, and the many Eskimaux seen as participants, give the whole the unmistakable stamp of reality. Advertising copy and advance publicity stressing the validity of the setting, and outlining the production circumstances, can be figured to yield an extra margin of revenue.

In the screenplay by Robert Hill and George Bricker, from a story by Ewing Scott, who is associate producer, Morris portrays a bush pilot operating a single-plane line headquartered at Kotzebue, Alaska, and flying passenger and freight as far North as Little Diomede, on the Arctic Circle, but not to Big Diomede, next door, and across the patrolled Russian border.

An American school teacher (Miss Albright) and a supposed American millionaire (Hale) bring Morris romance and trouble, the latter developing when he finds out Hale is a Russian agent smuggling military information to the "Commies" at Big Diomede. Apart from a surprise ending, the story is about what would be expected from that beginning, but in view of the special advantages mentioned, that's good enough.

Lindsley Parsons produced, with Morris as his assistant, in addition to starring. Lew Landers directed.

Running time, 78 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, October 19.

way to a high $102,000, while at the Roxy, "Dreamboat" was slated for a healthy $100,000 for its second week, after drawing a solid $58,000, during the Friday-through-Sunday period.

"High Noon" at the Mayfair was setting a solid pace with $39,500 indicated for the second week. At the Criterion, Walt Disney's "Story of Robin Hood" was showing stamina in its sixth week with an expected $21,000.

At the Astor the third week of "The Story of Will Rogers" was seen chalking up $13,000, a so-so figure.

"Don't Bother to Knock" in its third and last week at the Globe was heading for a good $14,500. "Francis Goes to West Point" will bow in Friday.

Still indicating strength in a third week at the Capitol is "Carrie" which is expected to show $33,000. At Loew's State, "Glory Alley" was scheduled for a poor $9,000 in its first and final week. "Sudden Fear" opens Thursday.

The off-Broadway Sutton did a good $7,600 for the 18th week of "The Man in the White Suit." At the Normandie, "Encore" in its 17th week also was heading for a good $6,200.

Drop in Taxes

083, compared with $25,516,809 in June, 1951.

General admission tax collections include receipts from taxes on admissions to sports events, legitimate theatres, concerts and other general admission events, as well as motion picture theatres. They do not, however, include taxes on roof garden and cabaret bills nor on various seat leases, brokers' sales and other "overcharges." Total admission tax collections in June this year amounted to $26,497,849, against $29,418,229 in June, 1951.

Tax Collections in Chicago Are Down

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—City amusement tax collections for the month of July (on June receipts) show another decline in theatre business from last year, with theatre tax collections for the month being $79,538.84 this year against $98,389.70 for the same month last year. Totals for the year to date are $589,223.80, against $647,061.46 last year.

These figures, for June business, do not reflect the solid upturn in business felt throughout the city in July.

In contrast to theatre receipts, down roughly nine per cent for the year to date, other amusements are up about one per cent.

James Cassidy, 39, Film Producer

James B. Cassidy, 39, independent producer, died in Memorial Hospital here Saturday night. Cassidy had returned from Norway several weeks ago after shooting scenes for a film version of Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll's House." He also recently acquired film rights to all of Ibsen's plays except "Peer Gynt." Last year he married Dale Melbourne, concert pianist and actress, who survives. He also leaves his father, Patrick H. Cassidy of Springfield, Mass., and two sisters, Mrs. James Parnell, also of Springfield, and Mrs. Frank Roberts of Greenfield, Mass.

ing would seek to iron out the questions of competitive bidding and damages, in addition to the mechanics of the proposed arbitration system. The meetings were also expected to take up two other items, the forcing of pictures and violations of contracts.

Attending yesterday's meeting were: From exhibition, Herman Levy, Si Fabian, Emanuel Frisch, Wilbur Snaper and Abram F. Myers; from distribution: Robert Perkins, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers and Al Schwalberg. Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., Motion Picture Association of America vice-president, and Henderson Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference, attended as ex-officio members of the committee.

The last session of the committee was held early in July and adjourned without having made progress on the issues of competittive bidding, which also stymied the previous session a month earlier. Exhibitor members of the committee felt then that further meetings would be fruitless unless they could meet with company presidents or that more authority could be delegated to the sales executives with whom the negotiations were being conducted.

Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president, interceded with the result that the way was cleared for distributor agreement on the competitive bidding issues and the current meetings were arranged.

distributors to make available to television their products and stars, which is the only stock in trade of the movie industry, for which the movie theatres have paid hundreds of millions of dollars in film rentals since the founding of our industry. Television has made no contribution either artistically, creatively or monetarily to the development and growth of the movies and it appears that through this action it is seeking a special privilege without any inherent right or interest.

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the movie theatres have suffered tremendously since the advent of television, particularly from the free televising of movies over that medium. In the Chicago area alone, more than 100 theatres have closed, due, in large measure, to the free presentation of movies on television.

"How long could any business survive on an economically sound basis if, on the one hand, a retail establishment selling a product at a price, would have to compete with others giving that same product away for nothing? If the Government should succeed in this instance it would have the effect of destroying every vestige of the profit system in this country.

"As independent business men whose investments in theatre properties are placed in jeopardy by virtue of the Government's action and in the interest of the thousands of persons whose jobs are at stake, our association, representing more than 100 theatres in the State of Illinois, begs that the Justice Department reconsider its action in this respect."

Television is one phase of the advertising business and any entertainment that creeps onto the television screen is purely incidental to the huckstering of the sponsor's wares."

Miller Calls TV Boon to Hollywood

David Miller, here from the Coast in connection with "Sudden Fear," which he directed, stated at a press interview yesterday that he feels television is a boon to Hollywood.

TV is making the second feature vanish, he says, and has heightened the competition in Hollywood so that technicians and talent and writers must be at their best to produce the kind of films that will survive.

Miller revealed that he will shortly embark on his first independent production, a story of the lives and trials of 20 young artists striving for success, tentatively entitled "The Paris Story." It will be made in France and partly in England. The script will be worked upon when he returns to the Coast shortly, after which, probably in October, he will go to Europe. As for financing, Miller would disclose nothing beyond the fact that he has pre-production money. He said he would make the film without releasing arrangements.

'Ivanhoe' and 'Trinidad' Heading for Records

A mixture of sturdy openings and strong holdovers attracted the customers in droves to most of New York's first-run situations.

Heading the robust box-office parade are two newcomers: "Ivanhoe," which is at Radio City Music Hall with a stage presentation, and "Affair in Trinidad" at the Victoria. In the four days at the Hall ending Sunday, "Ivanhoe" set an all-time non-holiday record for the period with a gross of $105,000. The film was heading for an estimated weekly gross of $175,000, which would be an all-time non-holiday record. "Affair" set a house record at regular admission prices with $44,000.

Production possibilities in England and Italy for U. S. exhibition are "lining up very nicely," Leonard Goldenson, president of United Paramount Theatres, declared here yesterday on his return on the S. S. Queen Elizabeth after six weeks abroad. He said some of the films have a good chance of playing UPT.

Goldenson observed that exhibition abroad was off somewhat. He declined comment on developments at home, declaring he was not too familiar with them in the light of his absence.

U. S. Reports Drop In Admission Taxes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—General admission tax collections in the first six months of this year were just slightly over 10 per cent below those for the same 1951 period, Bureau of Internal Revenue figures released today show.

Collections for the January-June period, reflecting box-office business from December through May, amounted to $140,656,958 this year compared with $156,439,186 last year. In only one 1952 month, February, were collections greater than in 1951.

The June figures, reflecting May business, were also released today and show a drop of $2,500,000 from June last year. General tax collections in June this year amounted to $23,039,-

Walsh Says He'll Support Brennan

MINNEAPOLIS, August 4.—Richard F. Walsh, president of the IATSE, on Saturday issued the following statement:

"An item published in the July 31 issue of MOTION PICTURE DAILY, New York City, has come to my attention. It states that Vincent Jacobi, president of New York Local No. 1, will be a candidate for the office of third vice-president of the I.A.T.S.E. in the election to be held at our convention here next week. It further states that 'reports circulating in Minneapolis film labor circles' have indicated that I would not support James J. Brennan, the incumbent third International vice-president, for reelection.

"I deplore irresponsible statements of this kind. The fact is—and I assert

16mm. Films to TV Would Bankrupt Theatres: Kirsch

CHICAGO, August 4.—Bankrupt theatres would follow if 16mm. productions were made available to telecasters, warns Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied. The organization has released the text of the following letter sent by Kirsch to U.S. Attorney General James P. McGranery regarding the Department of Justice's recent anti-trust suit to compel some producers and distributors to make 16mm. films available to television:

"It is inconceivable that the Government would institute an anti-trust action against major motion picture producers and distributors to compel them to supply 16 millimeter movies to television, which, by the nature of its free presentation to the public, would bankrupt the movie theatres of the Nation.

"It is also inconceivable that the Government should instigate an action that would compel these producers and

NCA Tells US Suit Will Ruin Theatres

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 4.—Seven-hundred theatres in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, including the neighborhood suburban houses of Minneapolis and St. Paul, face the prospect of going into bankruptcy unless the Department of Justice dismisses its pending suit which would compel the film companies to release pictures to television, Stanley D. Kane, executive counsel of North Central Allied, told James P. McGranery, U. S. Attorney General, in a letter directed by the Allied organization's board.

"Television is beset with the problem of poor programs," Kane wrote,

Discussions of "various aspects" of setting up an arbitration system held the attention of delegates at yesterday's three-and-a-half hour session, which broke up at 5:30 P.M. Committee members declined to detail the discussions, but reported that progress is being made.

Preliminary reports of the three-day agenda indicated that the meet-

Chicago Papers Give Kind Words to Film Industry

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Adverse publicity for the motion picture industry may be becoming unfashionable. In any event, it received friendly attention from two Chicago newspapers in as many days.

Yesterday, Mae Tinee, Chicago Tribune film critic, discussed the government's anti-trust suit to obtain films for TV and in doing so, quoted at length from a Motion Picture Herald editorial scoring the government's action in filing the suit.

Today, the Daily News published an upbeat article on local theatre business, citing continuing improvement in attendance over a span of more than a month.

Pasadena Exhibitor Hits Censor Law

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 4.—Al O'Keefe, operating the Colorado Theatre, Pasadena, has appealed informally to that city's board of directors to nullify Pasadena's 20-year-old censorship ordinance under which, according to O'Keefe, "The Miracle," "Latuko," and "La Ronde" were disapproved recently. In a letter to the city board, O'Keefe argued that the Supreme Court ruling outlawed the Pasadena ordinance.

of the theatre, which is not involved in the dispute.

Edward Meyerding, speaking for the ACLU, said that he would ask Mayor Kennelly to reverse the censor Board's ban of the film, but the mayor has indicated that he will not enter the fight.

Although admission to the screening was free and by invitation only, the Commissioner contended that it was a public showing and therefore a violation of the censor board's banning of the picture. O'Connor contends that the movie "ridicules any branch of Christianity, not just Catholics."

Sue Tri-States, Central States

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Two suits were filed against major film companies and Tri-States and Central States circuits in Southern Iowa Federal District Court by Seymour Simon, Chicago film attorney. One asks for $450,000 treble damages because, the brief alleges, distributors and the circuits conspired from June 5, 1946 until now to keep first-run films from the Capitol Theatre at Iowa City.

The second suit says the film companies with the exception of United Artists and Columbia, along with the same two circuits, conspired to keep first-run releases from the Coronet Theatre in Davenport, Iowa.

Review

"Arctic Flight"

(Monogram) Hollywood, Aug. 4

ALL CONCERNED with the making of this adventure film about life in the Arctic—executives, cast and crew—journeyed to precisely that place to film it. The result of this investment in authenticity is strikingly shown in the finished product. Although the romantic adventure story played out by Wayne Morris, Alan Hale, Jr., Carol Thurston and Lola Albright is a work of fiction, the genuine setting, customs and manners, and the many Eskimaux seen as participants, give the whole the unmistakable stamp of reality. Advertising copy and advance publicity stressing the validity of the setting, and outlining the production circumstances, can be figured to yield an extra margin of revenue.

In the screenplay by Robert Hill and George Bricker, from a story by Ewing Scott, who is associate producer, Morris portrays a bush pilot operating a single-plane line headquartered at Kotzebue, Alaska, and flying passenger and freight as far North as Little Diomede, on the Arctic Circle, but not to Big Diomede, next door, and across the patrolled Russian border.

An American school teacher (Miss Albright) and a supposed American millionaire (Hale) bring Morris romance and trouble, the latter developing when he finds out Hale is a Russian agent smuggling military information to the "Commies" at Big Diomede. Apart from a surprise ending, the story is about what would be expected from that beginning, but in view of the special advantages mentioned, that's good enough.

Lindsley Parsons produced, with Morris as his assistant, in addition to starring. Lew Landers directed.

Running time, 78 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, October 19.

way to a high $102,000, while at the Roxy, "Dreamboat" was slated for a healthy $100,000 for its second week, after drawing a solid $58,000, during the Friday-through-Sunday period.

"High Noon" at the Mayfair was setting a solid pace with $39,500 indicated for the second week. At the Criterion, Walt Disney's "Story of Robin Hood" was showing stamina in its sixth week with an expected $21,000.

At the Astor the third week of "The Story of Will Rogers" was seen chalking up $13,000, a so-so figure.

"Don't Bother to Knock" in its third and last week at the Globe was heading for a good $14,500. "Francis Goes to West Point" will bow in Friday.

Still indicating strength in a third week at the Capitol is "Carrie" which is expected to show $33,000. At Loew's State, "Glory Alley" was scheduled for a poor $9,000 in its first and final week. "Sudden Fear" opens Thursday.

The off-Broadway Sutton did a good $7,600 for the 18th week of "The Man in the White Suit." At the Normandie, "Encore" in its 17th week also was heading for a good $6,200.

Drop in Taxes

083, compared with $25,516,809 in June, 1951.

General admission tax collections include receipts from taxes on admissions to sports events, legitimate theatres, concerts and other general admission events, as well as motion picture theatres. They do not, however, include taxes on roof garden and cabaret bills nor on various seat leases, brokers' sales and other "overcharges." Total admission tax collections in June this year amounted to $26,497,849, against $29,418,229 in June, 1951.

Tax Collections in Chicago Are Down

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—City amusement tax collections for the month of July (on June receipts) show another decline in theatre business from last year, with theatre tax collections for the month being $79,538.84 this year against $98,389.70 for the same month last year. Totals for the year to date are $589,223.80, against $647,061.46 last year.

These figures, for June business, do not reflect the solid upturn in business felt throughout the city in July.

In contrast to theatre receipts, down roughly nine per cent for the year to date, other amusements are up about one per cent.

James Cassidy, 39, Film Producer

James B. Cassidy, 39, independent producer, died in Memorial Hospital here Saturday night. Cassidy had returned from Norway several weeks ago after shooting scenes for a film version of Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll's House." He also recently acquired film rights to all of Ibsen's plays except "Peer Gynt." Last year he married Dale Melbourne, concert pianist and actress, who survives. He also leaves his father, Patrick H. Cassidy of Springfield, Mass., and two sisters, Mrs. James Parnell, also of Springfield, and Mrs. Frank Roberts of Greenfield, Mass.

ing would seek to iron out the questions of competitive bidding and damages, in addition to the mechanics of the proposed arbitration system. The meetings were also expected to take up two other items, the forcing of pictures and violations of contracts.

Attending yesterday's meeting were: From exhibition, Herman Levy, Si Fabian, Emanuel Frisch, Wilbur Snaper and Abram F. Myers; from distribution: Robert Perkins, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers and Al Schwalberg. Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., Motion Picture Association of America vice-president, and Henderson Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference, attended as ex-officio members of the committee.

The last session of the committee was held early in July and adjourned without having made progress on the issues of competittive bidding, which also stymied the previous session a month earlier. Exhibitor members of the committee felt then that further meetings would be fruitless unless they could meet with company presidents or that more authority could be delegated to the sales executives with whom the negotiations were being conducted.

Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president, interceded with the result that the way was cleared for distributor agreement on the competitive bidding issues and the current meetings were arranged.

distributors to make available to television their products and stars, which is the only stock in trade of the movie industry, for which the movie theatres have paid hundreds of millions of dollars in film rentals since the founding of our industry. Television has made no contribution either artistically, creatively or monetarily to the development and growth of the movies and it appears that through this action it is seeking a special privilege without any inherent right or interest.

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the movie theatres have suffered tremendously since the advent of television, particularly from the free televising of movies over that medium. In the Chicago area alone, more than 100 theatres have closed, due, in large measure, to the free presentation of movies on television.

"How long could any business survive on an economically sound basis if, on the one hand, a retail establishment selling a product at a price, would have to compete with others giving that same product away for nothing? If the Government should succeed in this instance it would have the effect of destroying every vestige of the profit system in this country.

"As independent business men whose investments in theatre properties are placed in jeopardy by virtue of the Government's action and in the interest of the thousands of persons whose jobs are at stake, our association, representing more than 100 theatres in the State of Illinois, begs that the Justice Department reconsider its action in this respect."

Television is one phase of the advertising business and any entertainment that creeps onto the television screen is purely incidental to the huckstering of the sponsor's wares."

Miller Calls TV Boon to Hollywood

David Miller, here from the Coast in connection with "Sudden Fear," which he directed, stated at a press interview yesterday that he feels television is a boon to Hollywood.

TV is making the second feature vanish, he says, and has heightened the competition in Hollywood so that technicians and talent and writers must be at their best to produce the kind of films that will survrive.

Miller revealed that he will shortly embark on his first independent production, a story of the lives and trials of 20 young artists striving for success, tentatively entitled "The Paris Story." It will be made in France and partly in England. The script will be worked upon when he returns to the Coast shortly, after which, probably in October, he will go to Europe. As for financing, Miller would disclose nothing beyond the fact that he has pre-production money. He said he would make the film without releasing arrangements.

Agreement in Principle Reached on Arbitration

Basis Is Set for Agreement on Competitive Bidding, Damage Awards, Other Difficult Issues in Swift Day and a Half Meeting

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

Agreement in principle on all phases of the proposed industry-wide arbitration system was reached here yesterday by the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee of 10.

The committee, following an all-day meeting at the Hotel Astor, announced that it had "completed consideration of all matters involved in the arbitration system." The sub-committee of the Industry Arbitration Conference closed its sessions one day ahead of schedule, which served as another indication of the climate of agreement reached by exhibitor-distributor delegates.

The two-day meeting of the continuations committee brought about the following results:

The appointment of a legal drafting committee to put in final form the work thus far completed for submission to the general Arbitration Con-

D of J Grants Delay; No Trial Before Elections

The Department of Justice has agreed to an extension to October 15 of the time for filing of answers by producer-distributor defendants to the government's anti-trust suit designed to force the sale of 16mm. films to television and other miscellaneous users.

Defendants' answers would have been due next Tuesday. The extension of time, it was learned, was requested by attorneys for RKO Pictures and was granted by the Justice Department without objection. At the same time, the Department said the time extension would apply to all defendants.

The additional time will give defense attorneys further opportunity to study the government's complaint and formulate defense strategy. Among the decisions still to be made are

To Ask FCC to End Its Hearings on UPT-ABC

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The Federal Communications Commission will probably be asked shortly to decide whether or not the United Paramount Theatres—American Broadcasting Co. merger hearings should close pending the filing of proposed findings or should continue.

An FCC order issued on Friday cut out as an issue in the case any anti-trust activity prior to August 7, 1948, outside the field of radio communications. When the hearing recessed on July 3, however, several witnesses still remained to be heard on testimony about Scophony Corp. of America and its six-year tie-in with Paramount Pictures.

What attorneys for all parties in the case will ask the Commission is whether testimony on SCA falls within the field of radio communications,

U. A. Wins Action to Halt Nasser Film Telecasts

United Artists claims the victory of "an important decision" clarifying the status of residual television rights in motion pictures still in theatrical release by major companies.

The company reported that Federal Judge Harry C. Westover in the Southern District Court of California ruled yesterday that television distribution of motion pictures originally produced for major theatrical release is not a "commercial practice" within the meaning of a 1948 contract between United Artists and Nasser Brothers. The judge's decision overruled a recent decision by Benno M. Brink, referee in bankruptcy, it was disclosed by Seymour M. Peyser, vice-president and general counsel of UA.

As a result, the recent televising of four Nasser pictures has been ruled unauthorized and must be discontinued, said U. A.

"The decision of Judge Westover has the effect of settling the television status of many films still being released by United Artists under contracts executed prior to February, 1951. Since that time a new contract clause has fully clarified the question," said U. A.

The law firm of Wright, Wright, Green and Wright argued the petition for review for United Artists.

"The threat to revoke the license of the theatre," he continued, "reveals the true nature of censorship. People in whom the public has no reason to place confidence have power not only to say what people will or will not see, but to step in and control the motion picture industry through their right to close theatres."

Replies to U. S. Suit

whether or not it would be advisable to seek a change of venue from the Los Angeles Federal court where the government filed the suit to the New York Federal court district, where the principal defendants have their places of business, and whether the defendants should endeavor to obtain a severance from the joint action and contest the government case separately.

Indications are that if decisions have not been reached on these and other issues by October 15, the defendants will seek additional time before filing their answers.

The government's readiness to agree to the extension of time for filing answers came as a surprise to many trade circles which were convinced that the television film suit is basically political in nature and that the Justice Department would bend every effort to force it to trial before the November elections.

Support for that view was found in the fact that the Department chose to file the suit in Los Angeles rather than in New York, where the defendants maintain business headquarters. The only apparent reason for the government's choice was that the Los Angeles court docket is much less crowded than in New York, which circumstance promised the government the earliest possible trial date.

With the time extension to October 15 having been granted without objection and with the possibility of further extensions being sought and obtained, together with other legal preliminaries besides the filing of answers certain to arise and to require time for disposition before actual trial of the government suit could be begun, legal observers here yesterday said they saw no possibility whatever of the suit coming to trial before the November elections.

Some individual defendants, it is learned, favor a change of venue to the New York Federal court. Should they prevail, it would be several years before the suit could be tried and disposed of. However, other defendants feel that the Los Angeles court may be more familiar with industry problems involved in the case and that a better understanding of the fatal consequences of the action to the industry, should it be won by the government, might prevail on the West Coast than here.

Meanwhile, it was learned, at least one major company defendant is preparing a statement scoring the government suit. It is expected to be released within the week and will be the first of its kind from any of the producer-distributor defendants since the filing of the suit two weeks ago. The statement is expected to be of an unequivocal nature certain to be reassuring to exhibitors who, under the defendants' protracted silence on the suit, have been growing increasingly uneasy.

These engagements will be offered in competitive negotiation on the same basis as Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show on Earth," Hal Wallis' "Jumping Jacks" and "Son of Paleface," Bob Hope-Jane Russell-Roy Rogers starrer, initial films to be released under the new plan which calls for seven simultaneous first-runs in Los Angeles and contiguous municipalities and joint ad campaigns participated in by the theatres and the distributor.

FCC Hearings

in which case it must be heard, or whether it does not, in which case it is outlawed by the three-year anti-trust limitation .

If the Commission rules that there should be further SCA testimony estimates are that the hearing will last another five to seven weeks. The recess interrupted the testimony of Arthur Levey, former SCA and current Skiatron president, who would have to continue. He would be followed by Paul Raibourn, Paramount Pictures director and president of Paramount Television Productions, Inc., and Paramount attorneys have said they would put still other SCA witnesses on the stand.

The question of asking the Commission to clarify the status of SCA testimony in the hearing came up today at a conference of attorneys representing all parties in the case. They expect to meet again tomorrow to decide just how they will ask the FCC to clarify the question.

At today's meeting hearing examiner Leo Resnick ruled on several other, but minor, questionable points in the Commission's Friday order. He declared that for the purpose of the hearing all parties should be regarded as licensees, although technically some of them are not. The FCC three-year limitation applies only to applicants who are existing licensees.

Resnick also ruled out the question of credibility of some of the witnesses who have already appeared in the hearing. In its order the Commission referred to the fact that Commission counsel had questioned the credibility of some of the testimony given by UPT president Leonard Goldenson and UPT director A. H. Blank. Since their testimony covered periods prior to 1948, Resnick indicated that he would not look into the question.

Finally, in order to expedite an early decision from the Commission, Resnick suggested that attorneys file proposed findings on the issues relating to Allen B. DuMont laboratories—chief of which is the question of Paramount's control of DuMont—within 20 days.

Arbitration

ference.

The newly-appointed drafting committee was also charged with blueprinting a system of conciliation to supplement the arbitration system along lines agreed upon by the continuations committee.

Agreement in principle came on such thorny issues as competitive bidding, forcing of pictures, violation of contracts, clearances, runs, damages and procedural matters, including appeals and the setting up of machinery for arbitration.

Named to the drafting committee, which is expected to meet in about 10 days, were Herman Levy and Abram F. Myers, representing exhibition, and Robert Perkins and Adolph Schimel, representing distribution.

As soon as the drafting work is completed, it was announced, the blueprint will be submitted to the arbitration conference for approval.

Complete optimism that the newly-formed drafting committee will not hit any snags was expressed in informed quarters. Another indication of confidence is that no date has been set for reconvening the continuations committee.

Yesterday's meeting climaxed months of effort to inaugurate an arbitration system which began in the spring with the convening of the arbitration conference. The hurdles yet to be met include the submission of the proposed system to the full arbitration conference, its individual member organizations, the courts and the Department of Justice for their approval.

Present at yesterday's meeting were: from exhibition, Levy, Si Fabian, Emanuel Frisch, Wilbur Snaper and Myers; from distribution, Perkins, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers and Al Schwalberg. Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., Motion Picture Association of America vice-president, and Henderson Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference, attended as ex-officio members of the committee.

Review

"Park Row"

(Samuel Fuller—United Artists) Hollywood, Aug. 5

HERE THE SAMUEL FULLER who wrote, produced and directed "The Steel Helmet," the first great story of the Korean war, performs those three services and one more, equally vital, for a composite story of the great American newspaper and the men who made it great. The fourth Fuller service performed for this picture was its selling, and the exhibitor is thereby given, for the first time in his life, a chance to go down to his newspaper office and ask the editor and publisher about the picture before he plays it! For the writer-producer-director has been in direct touch with every publisher and editor in the country for many months, beginning before and continuing through the start of production and afterward, in a one-newspaper-man-to-another promotional campaign without precedent. If ever a picture came to market with a pre-conditioned press, this is it.

The story which Samuel Fuller, one-time copy boy for the late Arthur Brisbane and forever a newsman at heart, utilizes to wrap up precedental incidents and events in the careers of Joseph Pulitzer, Arnold Bennett, Horace Greeley, Charles A. Dana, Ottmar Mergenthaler and other memorable men of ink concerns one Phineas Mitchell, who in 1866 launches a newspaper, without funds but with principle, in competition with the New York Star, a rich publication owned by Charity Hackett, descendent of great newsmen but herself a journalistic misfit. The struggle between the newspapers, and between their publishers, ranges from legitimate competition to violence and riot, with the romantic element present but kept in the background. The leap of Steve Brodie from Brooklyn Bridge and the raising of a fund to build a base for the Statue of Liberty are among the historical incidents dealt with.

Gene Evans, the unforgettable "Steel Helmet" discovery, plays the poor but principled newspaper man, and Marcy Welch portrays the publisher of the powerful publication which tries to run him out of business. Others in the cast are Bela Kovacs, Herbert Heyes, Tina Rome, George O'Hanlon, J. M. Kerrigan, Forrest Taylor, Don Orlando, Neyle Morrow, Dick Elliott, Stuart Randall, Dee Pollock and Hal K. Dawson.

Running time, 84 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, August 12.

Agreement in Principle Reached on Arbitration

Basis Is Set for Agreement on Competitive Bidding, Damage Awards, Other Difficult Issues in Swift Day and a Half Meeting

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

Agreement in principle on all phases of the proposed industry-wide arbitration system was reached here yesterday by the Industry Arbitration Conference's Continuations Committee of 10.

The committee, following an all-day meeting at the Hotel Astor, announced that it had "completed consideration of all matters involved in the arbitration system." The sub-committee of the Industry Arbitration Conference closed its sessions one day ahead of schedule, which served as another indication of the climate of agreement reached by exhibitor-distributor delegates.

The two-day meeting of the continuations committee brought about the following results:

The appointment of a legal drafting committee to put in final form the work thus far completed for submission to the general Arbitration Con-

Replies to US Suit Now Off Until Oct. 15

D of J Grants Delay; No Trial Before Elections

The Department of Justice has agreed to an extension to October 15 of the time for filing of answers by producer-distributor defendants to the government's anti-trust suit designed to force the sale of 16mm. films to television and other miscellaneous users.

Defendants' answers would have been due next Tuesday. The extension of time, it was learned, was requested by attorneys for RKO Pictures and was granted by the Justice Department without objection. At the same time, the Department said the time extension would apply to all defendants.

The additional time will give defense attorneys further opportunity to study the government's complaint and formulate defense strategy. Among the decisions still to be made are

To Ask FCC to End Its Hearings on UPT-ABC

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The Federal Communications Commission will probably be asked shortly to decide whether or not the United Paramount Theatres—American Broadcasting Co. merger hearings should close pending the filing of proposed findings or should continue.

An FCC order issued on Friday cut out as an issue in the case any anti-trust activity prior to August 7, 1948, outside the field of radio communications. When the hearing recessed on July 3, however, several witnesses still remained to be heard on testimony about Scophony Corp. of America and its six-year tie-in with Paramount Pictures.

What attorneys for all parties in the case will ask the Commission is whether testimony on SCA falls within the field of radio communications,

U. A. Wins Action to Halt Nasser Film Telecasts

United Artists claims the victory of "an important decision" clarifying the status of residual television rights in motion pictures still in theatrical release by major companies.

The company reported that Federal Judge Harry C. Westover in the Southern District Court of California ruled yesterday that television distribution of motion pictures originally produced for major theatrical release is not a "commercial practice" within the meaning of a 1948 contract between United Artists and Nasser Brothers. The judge's decision overruled a recent decision by Benno M. Brink, referee in bankruptcy, it was disclosed by Seymour M. Peyser, vice-president and general counsel of UA.

As a result, the recent televising of four Nasser pictures has been ruled unauthorized and must be discontinued, said U. A.

"The decision of Judge Westover has the effect of settling the television status of many films still being released by United Artists under contracts executed prior to February, 1951. Since that time a new contract clause has fully clarified the question," said U. A.

The law firm of Wright, Wright, Green and Wright argued the petition for review for United Artists.

to work things out without going to court, but we have gotten the run-around from Mayor Kennelly on down and we may be forced to take legal action to place the issue before the people of Chicago. We do not want to endanger the license of the Surf Theatre, so we are seeking another place to screen the picture for a representative group of leading Chicago citizens.

"The threat to revoke the license of the theatre," he continued, "reveals the true nature of censorship. People in whom the public has no reason to place confidence have power not only to say what people will or will not see, but to step in and control the motion picture industry through their right to close theatres."

Replies to U. S. Suit

whether or not it would be advisable to seek a change of venue from the Los Angeles Federal court where the government filed the suit to the New York Federal court district, where the principal defendants have their places of business, and whether the defendants should endeavor to obtain a severance from the joint action and contest the government case separately.

Indications are that if decisions have not been reached on these and other issues by October 15, the defendants will seek additional time before filing their answers.

The government's readiness to agree to the extension of time for filing answers came as a surprise to many trade circles which were convinced that the television film suit is basically political in nature and that the Justice Department would bend every effort to force it to trial before the November elections.

Support for that view was found in the fact that the Department chose to file the suit in Los Angeles rather than in New York, where the defendants maintain business headquarters. The only apparent reason for the government's choice was that the Los Angeles court docket is much less crowded than in New York, which circumstance promised the government the earliest possible trial date.

With the time extension to October 15 having been granted without objection and with the possibility of further extensions being sought and obtained, together with other legal preliminaries besides the filing of answers certain to arise and to require time for disposition before actual trial of the government suit could be begun, legal observers here yesterday said they saw no possibility whatever of the suit coming to trial before the November elections.

Some individual defendants, it is learned, favor a change of venue to the New York Federal court. Should they prevail, it would be several years before the suit could be tried and disposed of. However, other defendants feel that the Los Angeles court may be more familiar with industry problems involved in the case and that a better understanding of the fatal consequences of the action to the industry, should it be won by the government, might prevail on the West Coast than here.

Meanwhile, it was learned, at least one major company defendant is preparing a statement scoring the government suit. It is expected to be released within the week and will be the first of its kind from any of the producer-distributor defendants since the filing of the suit two weeks ago. The statement is expected to be of an unequivocal nature certain to be reassuring to exhibitors who, under the defendants' protracted silence on the suit, have been growing increasingly uneasy.

FCC Hearings

in which case it must be heard, or whether it does not, in which case it is outlawed by the three-year anti-trust limitation .

If the Commission rules that there should be further SCA testimony estimates are that the hearing will last another five to seven weeks. The recess interrupted the testimony of Arthur Levey, former SCA and current Skiatron president, who would have to continue. He would be followed by Paul Raibourn, Paramount Pictures director and president of Paramount Television Productions, Inc., and Paramount attorneys have said they would put still other SCA witnesses on the stand.

The question of asking the Commission to clarify the status of SCA testimony in the hearing came up today at a conference of attorneys representing all parties in the case. They expect to meet again tomorrow to decide just how they will ask the FCC to clarify the question.

At today's meeting hearing examiner Leo Resnick ruled on several other, but minor, questionable points in the Commission's Friday order. He declared that for the purpose of the hearing all parties should be regarded as licensees, although technically some of them are not. The FCC three-year limitation applies only to applicants who are existing licensees.

Resnick also ruled out the question of credibility of some of the witnesses who have already appeared in the hearing. In its order the Commission referred to the fact that Commission counsel had questioned the credibility of some of the testimony given by UPT president Leonard Goldenson and UPT director A. H. Blank. Since their testimony covered periods prior to 1948, Resnick indicated that he would not look into the question.

Finally, in order to expedite an early decision from the Commission, Resnick suggested that attorneys file proposed findings on the issues relating to Allen B. DuMont laboratories—chief of which is the question of Paramount's control of DuMont—within 20 days.

Arbitration

ference.

The newly-appointed drafting committee was also charged with blueprinting a system of conciliation to supplement the arbitration system along lines agreed upon by the continuations committee.

Agreement in principle came on such thorny issues as competitive bidding, forcing of pictures, violation of contracts, clearances, runs, damages and procedural matters, including appeals and the setting up of machinery for arbitration.

Named to the drafting committee, which is expected to meet in about 10 days, were Herman Levy and Abram F. Myers, representing exhibition, and Robert Perkins and Adolph Schimel, representing distribution.

As soon as the drafting work is completed, it was announced, the blueprint will be submitted to the arbitration conference for approval.

Complete optimism that the newly-formed drafting committee will not hit any snags was expressed in informed quarters. Another indication of confidence is that no date has been set for reconvening the continuations committee.

Yesterday's meeting climaxed months of effort to inaugurate an arbitration system which began in the spring with the convening of the arbitration conference. The hurdles yet to be met include the submission of the proposed system to the full arbitration conference, its individual member organizations, the courts and the Department of Justice for their approval.

Present at yesterday's meeting were: from exhibition, Levy, Si Fabian, Emanuel Frisch, Wilbur Snaper and Myers; from distribution, Perkins, Abe Montague, William F. Rodgers and Al Schwalberg. Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., Motion Picture Association of America vice-president, and Henderson Richey, secretary of the Arbitration Conference, attended as ex-officio members of the committee.

Review

"Park Row"

(Samuel Fuller—United Artists) Hollywood, Aug. 5

HERE THE SAMUEL FULLER who wrote, produced and directed "The Steel Helmet," the first great story of the Korean war, performs those three services and one more, equally vital, for a composite story of the great American newspaper and the men who made it great. The fourth Fuller service performed for this picture was its selling, and the exhibitor is thereby given, for the first time in his life, a chance to go down to his newspaper office and ask the editor and publisher about the picture before he plays it! For the writer-producer-director has been in direct touch with every publisher and editor in the country for many months, beginning before and continuing through the start of production and afterward, in a one-newspaper-man-to-another promotional campaign without precedent. If ever a picture came to market with a pre-conditioned press, this is it.

The story which Samuel Fuller, one-time copy boy for the late Arthur Brisbane and forever a newsman at heart, utilizes to wrap up precedental incidents and events in the careers of Joseph Pulitzer, Arnold Bennett, Horace Greeley, Charles A. Dana, Ottmar Mergenthaler and other memorable men of ink concerns one Phineas Mitchell, who in 1866 launches a newspaper, without funds but with principle, in competition with the New York Star, a rich publication owned by Charity Hackett, descendent of great newsmen but herself a journalistic misfit. The struggle between the newspapers, and between their publishers, ranges from legitimate competition to violence and riot, with the romantic element present but kept in the background. The leap of Steve Brodie from Brooklyn Bridge and the raising of a fund to build a base for the Statue of Liberty are among the historical incidents dealt with.

Gene Evans, the unforgettable "Steel Helmet" discovery, plays the poor but principled newspaper man, and Marcy Welch portrays the publisher of the powerful publication which tries to run him out of business. Report Prices Not Part of Arbitration

Restrictions on Bidding Curb Distributor Action

Distributors have remained adamant in their refusal to agree to submit disputes over film prices and terms to arbitration, company sources indicated yesterday.

The fact that an agreement in principle on all subjects at issue had been announced at the close of the two-day arbitration conference here Tuesday led many to wonder whether or not distributors had retreated from their position against the inclusion of price complaints in any arbitration system set up for the industry. Semi-official responses to inquiries indicated they had not.

Allied States is on record as unequivocally asking the inclusion of price complaints among arbitrable subjects and the Theatre Owners of

Rembusch Seeks Aid for 5,000 'Hardship Cases'

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—A plea that Council of Motion Picture Organizations differences be submerged for industry unity to accomplish repeal of the Federal admission tax in order to keep open approximately 5,000 hardship-case theatres, was made here at an industry anti-tax meeting, by Trueman Rembusch, of the COMPO ruling triumvirate.

The 5,000 hardship cases "can survive only by the repeal of this discriminatory tax," Rembusch stated. He was accompanied here by Robert Wile, secretary of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners.

"It is necessary that industry unity at the local level be established in order to accomplish our goal," Rembusch told the branch managers, film salesmen and exhibitors present. In the absence from town of Lester Zucker, local COMPO chairman, I. J. Schmertz conducted the general meeting, which, following Rembusch's plea for united effort, split into two meetings, of exchange managers and salesmen, and exhibitors. The exhibi-

Wage Demands of Equity Cancel Todd TV Show

The experimental theatre telecast of Michael Todd's "Night in Venice" show from Jones' Beach, slated for tonight, has been called off due to a last-minute hitch with Actors Equity, it was learned here yesterday.

Actors Equity, it was reported, had demanded a full week's salary for each member of the cast for the half-hour test, arranged by Fabian Theatres, for tele-screening at the Warner Theatre here. The cost of paying a week's salary to over 200 members of the cast, in addition to reimbursing members of the orchestra, made the test economically prohibitive, it was pointed out.

The hitch developed after invitations had gone out to leading circuit executives, set manufacturers and pro-

Outline 'Texas' Tax Plan at Minn. Meet

Minneapolis, Aug. 6.—H. A. Cole outlined the "Texas plan" to fight the government's 20 per cent admission tax to 40 guests of North Central Allied at a luncheon here today at the Nicollet Hotel.

Adoption of the plan was delayed, it was reported, because primaries in this area still pend and it would be confusing and a waste of effort to buttonhole losing candidates.

Para. Earnings Up; Maintains Dividend Rate

$1,430,000 Profit Is Listed for 2nd Quarter

Maintaining its common stock dividend annual $2 rate, Paramount Pictures yesterday announced that its board had declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share. At the same time the company reported an increase in earnings in the second quarter, ended June 28, to an estimated $1,430,000 after provision for taxes, compared with a net of $1,421,000 for the same period in 1951. The dividend is payable on Sept. 26 to stockholders of record on Sept. 12.

The earnings represent 61 cents a share on 2,342,096 shares outstanding, compared with 62 cents on 2,302,000 shares outstanding one year ago.

Consolidated earnings for the six months ended June 28, computed on the same basis, are estimated at $2,785,000, which is at the rate of $1.19 per share on shares outstanding. Consolidated earnings for the first six months of 1951 were estimated at

Calls on 'IA' Membership

placed on the industry was decried by Johnston. He called the heavy tax load and rising costs "two of the top reasons" for the weakening of the movie-going habit of the American people.

On the cost front, Johnston urged all segments of the industry—production, distribution and exhibition—to eliminate waste and promote efficiency.

The MPAA president acknowledged that box-office receipts have declined from 15 to 20 per cent, approximately $250,000,000, below the 1946 record of $1,600,000,000, a figure which included the admission tax take. Johnston pointed out, however, that today the total number of admissions each week runs close to 55,000,000, indicating the vitality of the industry.

He scored "alarmists" who stress the number of theatre closings without mentioning the hundreds of new conventional and drive-in theatres which have opened in replacement. He called the growth of drive-ins "one of the most dynamic and encouraging developments in exhibition in our times."

Johnston forecast that the period of transition the industry finds itself in, highlighted by home TV competition, would be met by the same fortitude which licked past industry problems.

Cole, Thompson Ask 'IA' Aid In Tax, Business Efforts

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 6.—Cooperation of all of its members in the nght to eliminate the 20 per cent Federal admissions tax was urged by H. A. Cole, co-chairman of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' tax repeal campaign, at the annual convention of the IATSE being held here this week.

Cole suggested that the IATSE form a small national committee and a state committee in every state, and that state committees should contact COMPO committes which are already functioning. From there, perhaps, Cole said, IA district members might operate with COMPO district committeemen who also are already working.

"In other words," Cole continued, "we will have to apply argument, persuasion, good common sense, and sell some 500 or 600 of our legislators, Senators and Representatives, and that is quite a job. I think, gentlemen, it will be well repaid if you will undertake it."

Cole also told the delegates that exhibitors face the probable necessity of installing television in their theatres within five or 10 years.

"It may take considerable time, not because of the machinery involved, but because of the fact that programming that will attract customers at a profit is going to be very, very difficult to work out, but inevitably, sooner or later, we have to be prepared to install television in many, if not most of our theatres," Cole said.

At yesterday's session, Rev. F. J. Gilligan, St. Paul, Minn., and Leslie E. Thompson, labor relations executive for RKO Pictures, were the featured speakers.

Rev. Gilligan commended unions for their patriotism and said that not only is it the workers' right to organize but that they have been good for the country because they have protected it from the spread of Communism. This, he added, has been accomplished by a more even distribution of wealth, thereby eliminating one of the avenues of approach that Communism customarily thrives on.

Thompson told the convention that the union "can do a lot to attack the mistaken belief that the motion picture industry is dying." Management and labor will have to cooperate in convincing the public that theatres offer the best entertainment. He also tackled the problem of government interference, pointing out that television alone was not entirely responsible for the slump in business, but that such things as the government's admission tax and the recent "divorcement" decree were hampering the industry.

At the conclusion of Thompson's speech, International president Richard F. Walsh told the delegates that the union would do its share but that in his opinion good films, good equipment and good theatres would do much to cure the industry's ills.

Ben Berger, president of North Central Allied, told the "IA" that he was "purposely skipping" any detailed account of the present plight of exhibitors in view of the fact the subject was covered by C. W. Perrine, Minnesota Amusement Co. executive in an earlier speech, and that Eric Johnston will dwell extensively on the theatreman's problems in a subsequent speech.

Berger welcomed the delegates on behalf of NCA and the Northwest Variety Club and drew a round of applause when he said that he had always enjoyed "the finest relations" with the IA membership in negotiations, both as an individual and as head of the NCA.

Industry in New Haven Area Enters Tax Battle

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 6.—Some 105 of Connecticut's 192 theatres were represented at a meeting here to enter the fight for the repeal of the Federal amusement tax. Sixty-seven owners signed the pledges to participate in the movement.

Charles McCarthy of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations made the keynote address, with Maurice Bailey and Dr. Jack Fishman of Allied urging every theatre to do its best in contacting members of Congress and others. Other speakers included Al Pickus of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut and Carl Reardon, branch manager of Universal International, who is in charge of collections for participation in the campaign.

Johnston Says Ohio Fair 'Great Thing'

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said that the exhibitors of Ohio are doing a "great and grand thing" in bringing a motion picture exhibit to the Ohio State Fair.

"It means that they are bringing the story of our industry right where it needs the telling—the grass roots of America. That's where it reaches the people and I hope the Ohio example may spread across the country," Johnston added.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio is sponsoring a "Hollywood at the Fair" exhibit at the state fair Aug. 22-29.

Anti-trust

to decide whether or not testimony on Scophony Corp. of America should be included in the record of the hearing.

In an order issued last Friday the FCC outlawed as evidence in the case of any anti-trust involvement occurring before that date. Since there has been no development in the hearing record of any anti-trust activity since August, 1948, many observers here though that the anti-trust question was a dead duck.

In Resnick's petition he mentioned three specific anti-trust suits which Commission counsel thought should be part of the post-1948 anti-trust portion of the record. They were: the government's suit against the Madison Square Garden Corp., three of whose directors are directors of Paramount Pictures Corp.; the suit brought against National Screen Service and Paramount Pictures, among others; and the Milgrim Drive-in case where the final decision gave drive-in theatres the right to bid against indoor theatres for first-run product.

The request for clarification also mentioned "a number of pending private anti-trust proceedings which have not been explored to determine whether the anti-trust activities alleged occurred since Aug. 7, 1948."

Resnick pointed out that Commission counsel proposes to investigate the anti-trust activities involved in the government complaints and in several of the pending private cases. This process, he said, would involve a continuance of the hearing to permit the investigation and then further hearings which might take several months.

The SCA question revolved around the part of the FCC order which put a three-year limitation on anti-trust activity outside the field of radio communications, and Resnick requested the Commission to decide whether or not SCA testimony was within that field. If the FCC rules that it is, SCA witnesses would probably take up from five to seven weeks of hearing time.

The procedure of a hearing examiner's requesting the Commission for clarification of an order is rather unusual, but Resnick declared in his request that he felt it would be more time-saving than if attorneys for all the parties filed individual petitions.

The hearing will remain in recess pending the FCC's clarification.

Public Stand

part of industry leaders. This is a suit calculated to destroy the motion picture industry and it's time for segments other than exhibition to meet the issue squarely and with forthrightness. We are confident that the defendants will defend themselves to the hilt in court for vindication on these preposterous charges but if the industry remains quiet until that time we will have lost our case with the public.

"It's high time the MPAA publicly denounced this government action for what it is—a high-handed attempt to have the industry commit suicide to give its life blood to a competitive medium. The film company presidents must likewise meet the issue squarely and assure theatrical exhibition that the television industries are not going to be ceded public support and our stock in trade by default. As one board member remarked, let them stand up and be counted."

Not Part of Arbitration

America took a comparable but less specific stand. Abram Myers, Allied general counsel and chairman, and Herman Levy, TOA counsel, are members of the four-man drafting committee named on Tuesday to complete preparation of the subjects agreed upon.

The formula for the restriction of competitive bidding which appears to have made possible the complete agreement in principle on Tuesday is believed to virtually eliminate the imposition of competitive bidding by a distributor in any situation in which it may be resisted by exhibitors. It was reported that arbitrary attempts to impose bidding in such situations would form the basis for a complaint by exhibitors involved to have the distributor's action subjected to arbitration.

No limitations would apply in situations where exhibitors request bidding or where it is not resisted, it is understood.

The terms of bids may be subject to disclosure but indications are there will be recognition of distributor's right to award a picture to other than the highest bidder for valid reasons, such as location and condition of theatre, its reputation, operating policies, etc.

Thus, the proposed industry arbitration plan would include such restrictions on bidding as above and make departures from them subject to arbitration as well as any claims that there had been discrimination in awarding pictures under competitive bidding and charges that any exhibitor had over-bid or over-paid to deprive a competitor of pictures in bidding. Under such circumstances, the disputed bids would have to be disclosed to the disputants.

Previously agreed upon also were arbitration of complaints of forcing or conditioning, clearance, runs or violations of contracts. The right to award damages in arbitration proceedings is recognized. Conciliation, to be employed prior to arbitration, is approved and the use of lawyers in arbitration proceedings is regulated.

The drafting committee is expected to begin its work in about a week and a general conference meeting will be set thereafter to consider and approve the proposals.

Tax Reduction for Minneapolis House

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 6.—The Edina Theatre, Minneapolis suburban house operated by Ben Friedman, was granted a 20 per cent reduction in assessed valuation by the Edina board of review after hearing testimony that the theatre was having rough going due to the large number of television sets owned by Edina residents.

Stanley D. Kane, attorney for Friedman at the hearing, explained the many difficulties that are confronting theatre owners throughout the United States.

New Pact Staves Off Mexican Strike

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—The strike threatened against the Churubusco-Azteca, San Angel Inn and Tepeyac studios here for tomorrow by the technical and manual workers' sections of the Picture Production Union to enforce demands for a 75 per cent wage increase and some other economic concessions, was averted by the signing of a pact to run until July 31, 1953.

The union accepted a five per cent pay hike but won such concessions as more paid holidays—each worker to have time off on his or her birthday, workers of more than 15 years' service, 25 days vacation yearly, and Good Friday to be a day off for all.

Report Prices Not Part of Arbitration

Restrictions on Bidding Curb Distributor Action

Distributors have remained adamant in their refusal to agree to submit disputes over film prices and terms to arbitration, company sources indicated yesterday.

The fact that an agreement in principle on all subjects at issue had been announced at the close of the two-day arbitration conference here Tuesday led many to wonder whether or not distributors had retreated from their position against the inclusion of price complaints in any arbitration system set up for the industry. Semi-official responses to inquiries indicated they had not.

Allied States is on record as unequivocally asking the inclusion of price complaints among arbitrable subjects and the Theatre Owners of

Rembusch Seeks Aid for 5,000 'Hardship Cases'

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—A plea that Council of Motion Picture Organizations differences be submerged for industry unity to accomplish repeal of the Federal admission tax in order to keep open approximately 5,000 hardship-case theatres, was made here at an industry anti-tax meeting, by Trueman Rembusch, of the COMPO ruling triumvirate.

The 5,000 hardship cases "can survive only by the repeal of this discriminatory tax," Rembusch stated. He was accompanied here by Robert Wile, secretary of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners.

"It is necessary that industry unity at the local level be established in order to accomplish our goal," Rembusch told the branch managers, film salesmen and exhibitors present. In the absence from town of Lester Zucker, local COMPO chairman, I. J. Schmertz conducted the general meeting, which, following Rembusch's plea for united effort, split into two meetings, of exchange managers and salesmen, and exhibitors. The exhibi-

Wage Demands of Equity Cancel Todd TV Show

The experimental theatre telecast of Michael Todd's "Night in Venice" show from Jones' Beach, slated for tonight, has been called off due to a last-minute hitch with Actors Equity, it was learned here yesterday.

Actors Equity, it was reported, had demanded a full week's salary for each member of the cast for the half-hour test, arranged by Fabian Theatres, for tele-screening at the Warner Theatre here. The cost of paying a week's salary to over 200 members of the cast, in addition to reimbursing members of the orchestra, made the test economically prohibitive, it was pointed out.

The hitch developed after invitations had gone out to leading circuit executives, set manufacturers and pro-

Outline 'Texas' Tax Plan at Minn. Meet

Minneapolis, Aug. 6.—H. A. Cole outlined the "Texas plan" to fight the government's 20 per cent admission tax to 40 guests of North Central Allied at a luncheon here today at the Nicollet Hotel.

Para. Earnings Up; Maintains Dividend Rate

$1,430,000 Profit Is Listed for 2nd Quarter

Maintaining its common stock dividend annual $2 rate, Paramount Pictures yesterday announced that its board had declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share. At the same time the company reported an increase in earnings in the second quarter, ended June 28, to an estimated $1,430,000 after provision for taxes, compared with a net of $1,421,000 for the same period in 1951. The dividend is payable on Sept. 26 to stockholders of record on Sept. 12.

The earnings represent 61 cents a share on 2,342,096 shares outstanding, compared with 62 cents on 2,302,000 shares outstanding one year ago.

Consolidated earnings for the six months ended June 28, computed on the same basis, are estimated at $2,785,000, which is at the rate of $1.19 per share on shares outstanding. Consolidated earnings for the first six months of 1951 were estimated at

Calls on 'IA' Membership

placed on the industry was decried by Johnston. He called the heavy tax load and rising costs "two of the top reasons" for the weakening of the movie-going habit of the American people.

On the cost front, Johnston urged all segments of the industry—production, distribution and exhibition—to eliminate waste and promote efficiency.

The MPAA president acknowledged that box-office receipts have declined from 15 to 20 per cent, approximately $250,000,000, below the 1946 record of $1,600,000,000, a figure which included the admission tax take. Johnston pointed out, however, that today the total number of admissions each week runs close to 55,000,000, indicating the vitality of the industry.

He scored "alarmists" who stress the number of theatre closings without mentioning the hundreds of new conventional and drive-in theatres which have opened in replacement. He called the growth of drive-ins "one of the most dynamic and encouraging developments in exhibition in our times."

Johnston forecast that the period of transition the industry finds itself in, highlighted by home TV competition, would be met by the same fortitude which licked past industry problems.

Cole, Thompson Ask 'IA' Aid In Tax, Business Efforts

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 6.—Cooperation of all of its members in the fight to eliminate the 20 per cent Federal admissions tax was urged by H. A. Cole, co-chairman of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' tax repeal campaign, at the annual convention of the IATSE being held here this week.

Cole suggested that the IATSE form a small national committee and a state committee in every state, and that state committees should contact COMPO committes which are already functioning. From there, perhaps, Cole said, IA district members might operate with COMPO district committeemen who also are already working.

"In other words," Cole continued, "we will have to apply argument, persuasion, good common sense, and sell some 500 or 600 of our legislators, Senators and Representatives, and that is quite a job. I think, gentlemen, it will be well repaid if you will undertake it."

Cole also told the delegates that exhibitors face the probable necessity of installing television in their theatres within five or 10 years.

"It may take considerable time, not because of the machinery involved, but because of the fact that programming that will attract customers at a profit is going to be very, very difficult to work out, but inevitably, sooner or later, we have to be prepared to install television in many, if not most of our theatres," Cole said.

At yesterday's session, Rev. F. J. Gilligan, St. Paul, Minn., and Leslie E. Thompson, labor relations executive for RKO Pictures, were the featured speakers.

Rev. Gilligan commended unions for their patriotism and said that not only is it the workers' right to organize but that they have been good for the country because they have protected it from the spread of Communism. This, he added, has been accomplished by a more even distribution of wealth, thereby eliminating one of the avenues of approach that Communism customarily thrives on.

Thompson told the convention that the union "can do a lot to attack the mistaken belief that the motion picture industry is dying." Management and labor will have to cooperate in convincing the public that theatres offer the best entertainment. He also tackled the problem of government interference, pointing out that television alone was not entirely responsible for the slump in business, but that such things as the government's admission tax and the recent "divorcement" decree were hampering the industry.

At the conclusion of Thompson's speech, International president Richard F. Walsh told the delegates that the union would do its share but that in his opinion good films, good equipment and good theatres would do much to cure the industry's ills.

Ben Berger, president of North Central Allied, told the "IA" that he was "purposely skipping" any detailed account of the present plight of exhibitors in view of the fact the subject was covered by C. W. Perrine, Minnesota Amusement Co. executive in an earlier speech, and that Eric Johnston will dwell extensively on the theatreman's problems in a subsequent speech.

Berger welcomed the delegates on behalf of NCA and the Northwest Variety Club and drew a round of applause when he said that he had always enjoyed "the finest relations" with the IA membership in negotiations, both as an individual and as head of the NCA.

Industry in New Haven Area Enters Tax Battle

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 6.—Some 105 of Connecticut's 192 theatres were represented at a meeting here to enter the fight for the repeal of the Federal amusement tax. Sixty-seven owners signed the pledges to participate in the movement.

Charles McCarthy of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations made the keynote address, with Maurice Bailey and Dr. Jack Fishman of Allied urging every theatre to do its best in contacting members of Congress and others. Other speakers included Al Pickus of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut and Carl Reardon, branch manager of Universal International, who is in charge of collections for participation in the campaign.

Johnston Says Ohio Fair 'Great Thing'

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said that the exhibitors of Ohio are doing a "great and grand thing" in bringing a motion pieture exhibit to the Ohio State Fair.

"It means that they are bringing the story of our industry right where it needs the telling—the grass roots of Ameriea. That's where it reaches the people and I hope the Ohio example may spread across the country," Johnston added.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio is sponsoring a "Hollywood at the Fair" exhibit at the state fair Aug. 22-29.

Anti-trust

to decide whether or not testimony on Scophony Corp. of America should be included in the record of the hearing.

In an order issued last Friday the FCC outlawed as evidence in the case of any anti-trust involvement occurring before that date. Since there has been no development in the hearing record of any anti-trust activity since August, 1948, many observers here though that the anti-trust question was a dead duck.

In Resnick's petition he mentioned three specific anti-trust suits which Commission counsel thought should be part of the post-1948 anti-trust portion of the record. They were: the government's suit against the Madison Square Garden Corp., three of whose directors are directors of Paramount Pictures Corp.; the suit brought against National Screen Service and Paramount Pictures, among others; and the Milgrim Drive-in case where the final decision gave drive-in theatres the right to bid against indoor theatres for first-run product.

The request for clarification also mentioned "a number of pending private anti-trust proceedings which have not been explored to determine whether the anti-trust activities alleged occurred since Aug. 7, 1948."

Resnick pointed out that Commission counsel proposes to investigate the anti-trust activities involved in the government complaints and in several of the pending private cases. This process, he said, would involve a continuance of the hearing to permit the investigation and then further hearings which might take several months.

The SCA question revolved around the part of the FCC order which put a three-year limitation on anti-trust activity outside the field of radio communications, and Resnick requested the Commission to decide whether or not SCA testimony was within that field. If the FCC rules that it is, SCA witnesses would probably take up from five to seven weeks of hearing time.

The procedure of a hearing examiner's requesting the Commission for clarification of an order is rather unusual, but Resnick declared in his request that he felt it would be more time-saving than if attorneys for all the parties filed individual petitions.

The hearing will remain in recess pending the FCC's clarification.

Public Stand

part of industry leaders. This is a suit calculated to destroy the motion picture industry and it's time for segments other than exhibition to meet the issue squarely and with forthrightness. We are confident that the defendants will defend themselves to the hilt in court for vindication on these preposterous charges but if the industry remains quiet until that time we will have lost our case with the public.

"It's high time the MPAA publicly denounced this government action for what it is—a high-handed attempt to have the industry commit suicide to give its life blood to a competitive medium. The film company presidents must likewise meet the issue squarely and assure theatrical exhibition that the television industries are not going to be ceded public support and our stock in trade by default. As one board member remarked, let them stand up and be counted."

Not Part of Arbitration

America took a comparable but less specific stand. Abram Myers, Allied general counsel and chairman, and Herman Levy, TOA counsel, are members of the four-man drafting committee named on Tuesday to complete preparation of the subjects agreed upon.

The formula for the restriction of competitive bidding which appears to have made possible the complete agreement in principle on Tuesday is believed to virtually eliminate the imposition of competitive bidding by a distributor in any situation in which it may be resisted by exhibitors. It was reported that arbitrary attempts to impose bidding in such situations would form the basis for a complaint by exhibitors involved to have the distributor's action subjected to arbitration.

No limitations would apply in situations where exhibitors request bidding or where it is not resisted, it is understood.

The terms of bids may be subject to disclosure but indications are there will be recognition of distributor's right to award a picture to other than the highest bidder for valid reasons, such as location and condition of theatre, its reputation, operating policies, etc.

Thus, the proposed industry arbitration plan would include such restrictions on bidding as above and make departures from them subject to arbitration as well as any claims that there had been discrimination in awarding pictures under competitive bidding and charges that any exhibitor had over-bid or over-paid to deprive a competitor of pictures in bidding. Under such circumstances, the disputed bids would have to be disclosed to the disputants.

Previously agreed upon also were arbitration of complaints of forcing or conditioning, clearance, runs or violations of contracts. The right to award damages in arbitration proceedings is recognized. Conciliation, to be employed prior to arbitration, is approved and the use of lawyers in arbitration proceedings is regulated.

The drafting committee is expected to begin its work in about a week and a general conference meeting will be set thereafter to consider and approve the proposals.

Tax Reduction for Minneapolis House

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 6.—The Edina Theatre, Minneapolis suburban house operated by Ben Friedman, was granted a 20 per cent reduction in assessed valuation by the Edina board of review after hearing testimony that the theatre was having rough going due to the large number of television sets owned by Edina residents.

Stanley D. Kane, attorney for Friedman at the hearing, explained the many difficulties that are confronting theatre owners throughout the United States.

New Pact Staves Off Mexican Strike

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—The strike threatened against the Churubusco-Azteca, San Angel Inn and Tepeyac studios here for tomorrow by the technical and manual workers' sections of the Picture Production Union to enforce demands for a 75 per cent wage increase and some other economic concessions, was averted by the signing of a pact to run until July 31, 1953.

The union accepted a five per cent pay hike but won such concessions as more paid holidays—each worker to have time off on his or her birthday, workers of more than 15 years' service, 25 days vacation yearly, and Good Friday to be a day off for all.

At the Capitol last summer, "A Place In The Sun" began its climb to the top of 1951's grossers. Today in all her dates, "Carrie" is being compared favorably with that great money-hit by both the press and the public.

Warn Against Over-optimism On Arbitration

Plenty Hurdles Ahead; Start Drafting Aug. 19

Principals in the industry arbitration conference cautioned yesterday against over-optimism concerning final adoption by all parties of the tentative proposals on the basis of the agreements in principle reached by the continuations committee of 10 this week.

It was pointed out that the concord of this week still remains to be put into formal phraseology by the drafting committee of four, which will begin its work here on Aug. 19. Past experience in reducing agreements in principle to writing indicate that the new drafting committee will have a real task cut out for it.

Assuming the drafting committee

First Company Statements Score U. S. 16mm. Suit

FIRST public reaction of producers-distributors to the government suit to force the sale of 16mm. films to television and other non-theatrical users are contained in letters, some of which are reproduced herewith, inspired by editorials by Martin Quigley on the government action which appeared in MOTION PICTURE DAILY and Motion Picture Herald last week.

SPYROS SKOURAS, president of 20th Century-Fox, one of the defendant companies, wrote Quigley:

"This (editorial) is the type we need to bring home to us all the necessity of decisive, concerted action against this suit which, if successful, would prove disastrous to our entire industry.

"Naturally, we intend to fight it with all our might and it is heartening to know that we have the active support of every branch of the industry in this fight. Exhibitors and exhibitor organizations everywhere have protested vigorously against this suit and have pledged their support in helping us to fight it. Indeed, we must fight it because the very existence of all of us is threatened."

MILTON R. RACKMIL, president of Universal Pictures, also a defendant, wrote: "I sincerely hope that all elements in our industry show the

PAPER CUTS RATES, THEN RUNS FREE AD PLUGGING THEATRES

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Benefits to Northern California theatremen are still being felt as a result of Hal D. Neides' (Blumenfeld Theatres) successful campaign for lower newspaper advertising rates in San Mateo.

Neides presented as evidence of this a quarter page ad which ran in the San Mateo Times as a salute to the motion picture industry from its publisher. The ad was completely unsolicited and was done at no cost whatsoever to showmen. "Any Night Is Movie Night for the Whole Family," it said, and followed up with the advice to check the Times nightly for all Peninsula theatre listings. Neides' reaction to this is that the paper has come to the realization of the importance of the part played by theatres in the community where in the past they were taken for granted, and with this realization, the paper sees advantage to itself in promoting its own theatre page.

The whole situation can be pinpointed to the fact that Neides, after achieving his goal in getting lower advertising rates for theatremen, did not take it as a personal victory, but followed through with a letter of appreciation on behalf of his company and then increased Blumenfeld ads 30 per cent for its two Peninsula houses, the Manor at San Mateo, and the Belmont at Belmont. Other showmen followed suit. Westland Theatres, instead of carrying two inches each day for the Laurel at San Carlos, trippled the space. Fox West Coast Theatres increased the space also for the Broadway at Burlingame; the Fox at San Mateo, and the Baywood at Baywood. These theatres were actually down to a directory ad most of the time prior to the rate reduction.

'King Kong' Sparks Business Upswing at Chicago 1st-runs

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—The sensational opening of "King Kong" at the Balaban and Katz United Artists Theatre here yesterday highlighted a resurgence of business at Chicago first-runs that has local theatre executives taking out their books to compare current receipts with those of top-grossing pictures of the past few years.

By the time the United Artists box-office opened yesterday morning at 8:45 over 500 persons were waiting to buy tickets, and later in the morning the hold-out line extended three abreast from the front of the theatre to State Street, a full block away.

Irv Kupcinet, local newspaper columnist, and several local news commentators last night mentioned on their radio programs the excitement created by the opening.

Returns from outlying houses are mixed. David Wallerstern, of B. & K., said today that their neighborhood houses are doing better than they were at this time last year. Other circuits and independents are running a little behind last year, although business is much better than it had been before the recent pick-up, in July. Chances are, however, that most outlying theatres will start racking up bigger grosses as the product now playing the Loop start their subsequent runs.

Chicago Church to Show 'The Miracle'

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Carrying through in its determination to screen "The Miracle," banned from public exhibition here by the Chicago Police Censor board, the American Civil Liberties Union has scheduled two showings at the First Unitarian Church of Hyde Park, next Friday and Monday Aug. 18, Edward H. Meyerding, ACLU executive director for Illinois, announced here today.

Admission will be by invitation only and a representative group of clergymen, physicians, and civic leaders is expected to attend. The two showings have been arranged to replace the screening originally scheduled for the Surf Theatre last Tuesday, but cancelled after the commissioner of police threatened to revoke the theatre's license.

Goldwyn Sails for Europe Tomorrow

Samuel Goldwyn and Mrs. Goldwyn will sail from here tomorrow aboard the S. S. Conte Biancamano for a month's vacation in Europe. They will visit England, France, Germany and Austria, returning here around Sept. 8, and will be in New York briefly before returning to the Coast.

First prints of Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" are scheduled for delivery here early in September. A series of private screenings will be held then prior to screenings for reviewers and the trade.

New 'Hall' Record Set by 'Ivanhoe'

M-G-M's "Ivanhoe" in its first week at Radio City Music Hall, set an all-time non-holiday record for the house by grossing $176,000.

In pre-release engagements in out-of-town situations the picture also is setting house records, it was said.

Only two pictures at the Music Hall have ever topped "Ivanhoe" in grosses. "I'll See You in My Dreams," which played over the New Year's holiday of 1952, did $180,000 in its opening week. The film played five shows a day. "Ivanhoe" is playing four.

During the Easter holiday of this year, "Singin' in the Rain," playing five shows a day, grossed $178,500 in its opening week.

'Dreamboat' Heading for $103,000 in 2nd Week

By 3:00 P.M. yesterday 20th Century-Fox's "Dreamboat" was heading for a second week's gross at the New York Roxy Theatre of $103,000, according to David T. Katz, executive director of the theatre. Earlier in the afternoon the picture was $400 ahead of the previous week's take when the picture reached $102,000 after setting a new non-holiday weekend record for the theatre in over a year. "Dreamboat" is not only being held a third week, but will have its engagement extended through Aug. 19.

'Sudden Fear' Opens Big At Loew's State Here

"Sudden Fear," which opened at Loew's State here yesterday was heading at 5:00 P.M. for a robust opening day's figure of $10,000. Joan Crawford, who stars in the picture, personally greeted the first 3,308 patrons with autographed portraits.

Setting a record at the house, 1,148 persons entered the theatre in the first 40 minutes after the box-office opened, according to RKO Radio.

One Year to Prepare 'Commandments'

Pre-production work on "The Ten Commandments," Cecil B. DeMille's next production, for Paramount release, will require at least a year, he estimates, with actual shooting scheduled to start late in 1953.

It will have color by Technicolor, and, according to a joint statement issued here yesterday, "it will be produced on the same lavish scale as 'The Greatest Show on Earth' and 'Samson and Delilah,' with a cast of outstanding stars, and will be budgeted to possess the quality and spectacular value that have earned for De Mille the title of 'Hollywood's Master Showman.'"

De Mille's silent "Ten Commandments," produced in 1923, was the first feature to be filmed in Technicolor.

Correct View on Ohio Sales Tax

Columbus, O., Aug. 7.—Ohio state sales taxes on concession stand sales must be paid on each transaction over 40 cents unless the concession stand is operated by someone other than the exhibitor, said Robert Wile, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in an ITO bulletin. This is a correction of a statement in a previous bulletin, he said. The rule affects many Ohio drive-ins.

"In other words," continued Wile, "if you run your own concession stand, people are consuming food on your premises. If someone else runs the stand, people buy food on their premises and consume it on yours. In the first case, the sales tax must be collected; in the latter case it does not."

FCC Hearings May Wind Up on Tuesday

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—If by next Tuesday the Federal Communications Commission gives a negative answer to hearing examiner Leo Resnick's query yesterday as to whether anti-trust activity since 1948 and testimony on Scophony Corp. of America can be introduced in the United Paramount Theatres-American Broadcasting Co. hearing, Resnick will probably close up the record after "loose end" exhibits have been introduced, FCC attorneys believe.

If the Commission rules the admissability of SCA and post-1948 anti-trust evidence, the next session of the merger hearing, which is set for Tuesday, will probably swing right into those fields.

Arbitration

can agree to its own satisfaction on language, its work still must be approved by the arbitration conference committee. That is where the last draft effort ran into its greatest difficulties and brought the entire arbitration effort to a temporary stalemate.

However, should the draft clear the arbitration conference hurdle, it was pointed out, it still must have the approval of the individual principals concerned—individual companies as well as distribution, per se; individual exhibitor organizations, through action by their boards of directors or membership, as each may decide.

If it is approved by the principals it will then require the approval of the Department of Justice and the three-judge Federal statutory court here. A veto by any of these could wreck the plan, it was pointed out.

Abram F. Myers, Allied States board chairman and general counsel, who was a participant in the continuations committee's sessions here this week and is a member of the four-man drafting committee which starts its work August 19, said yesterday that, "speaking only for myself, I repudiate the stories that 'agreements' were reached. My personal concern is that I do not want Allied members to think their representatives have committed them to anything without the approving action of the board of directors. There can be no agreements except as the governing bodies of the organizations represented at the conference may approve the final draft of an arbitration plan."

Cautious Viewpoint

Myers disclosed that because of this cautious viewpoint, the continuations committee had instructed that the word "agreement" be stricken from the press release issued last Tuesday. The continuations committee obviously was in accord on what should be incorporated in a draft for consideration by the full committee later but, it was learned, one faction, which included Myers, was opposed to saying that this constituted an "agreement"—even among members of the committee.

Although that view eventually prevailed, it certainly did not leave committee members in disagreement on the subjects which had been discussed.

Myers' insistence upon the technicalities is ascribed in some quarters to the absence from the proposed arbitration plan of provision for submission of complaints concerning film prices and terms to arbitration, a subject that both the Allied national convention and the board of directors are on record as favoring.

It is generally believed, however, that price complaints of some types will be accepted under the conciliation plan to be established as an auxiliary of the arbitration plan.

"Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder"

(Columbia)

A PEEK BEHIND the movie-making scenes in Hollywood plus some rousing vocalizing by such popular song stylists as Frankie Laine and Billy Daniels are offered in "Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder." These are factors which in themselves will exert strong appeal to many filmgoers. Color by Technicolor provides an added attraction.

The story is about the discovery of a young messenger girl in a film studio and her subsequent rise to fame on the screen. Charlotte Austin plays the young lady, who, through mistaken identity, is auditioned for a part in one of Laine's pictures. Arthur Franz, of the music department, falls in love with Miss Austin and thus a romantic element is developed in the screenplay, written by Blake Edwards and Richard Quine.

Difficulties arise when Miss Austin's grandmother, who dislikes the film industry, learns about the budding theatrical career of Miss Austin. She immediately stamps her foot down. Since she is the legal guardian of Miss Austin, she brings her motion picture career to an end by refusing to give her permission to work.

Someone cooks up the idea of proving to grandmother, played by Ida Moore, that show people are really very nice. So a lot of performers rally together and appear at grandmother's favorite charity ball. That, of course, does the trick and there is a very happy ending.

Jonie Taps produced and Quine directed.

Running time, 78 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

"The Kid from Broken Gun"

(Columbia)

CHARLES STARRETT, once again doubling as The Durango Kid, proves himself in the great outdoors as well as in a courtroom interior. "The Kid From Broken Gun" stands up quite satisfactorily in the genre, for its action is ample and the developments reasonably interesting. Also on hand to provide touches of comic relief is Starrett's old film partner, Smiley Burnette.

The thing that gets Starrett going in this one is a murder charge that is pinned on Jack Mahoney. Bound up with the murder is the theft and mysterious disappearance of an iron box of gold coins. As the story proceeds it becomes apparent that Mahoney is innocent, and Starrett goes about proving it. This involves the usual gunplay, fisticuffs and encounters with skullduggery. It develops that Angela Stevens, a woman lawyer defending Mahoney, is actually the murderer and part of the outlaw gang. By the time the film runs its brisk 56 minutes, Starrett brings this fact successfully to the surface. Also in the cast is Helen Mowery, a pretty villainess.

Colbert Clark produced and Fred F. Sears directed, from a screenplay by Barry Shipman and Ed Earl Repp.

Running time, 56 minutes. General audience classification. August release.

Set Photo Equipment Expansion Goal

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. — The Defense Production Authority has set an interim goal of $8,600,000 as the amount of expansion desired in motion and still photographic equipment production by Jan. 1, 1954.

This increase is over Jan. 1, 1951 capacity. DPA officials said they had no estimate of what the capacity was on that date. Establishment of the goal is necessary so that DPA can provide government assistance to firms wanting to expand production. Most of the $8,600,000 expansion in the film equipment field has already been taken up, DPA officials indicated.

To Raze RKO's Lyric

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7.—The eight-story RKO Lyric Theatre, store and office building in the heart of the downtown business sector, will be razed after January 1, and the site used for a parking lot, it was disclosed here by Milton L. Maier, general manager of real estate for RKO Theatres, owners of the property. Built primarily for the Shubert interests approximately 50 years ago to compete with Klaw and Erlanger's Grand Opera House across the street, the house switched from legitimate attractions to pictures shortly after World War I.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—National Screen Service is again handling the New England distribution of the "Jimmy Fund" trailer, which will be shown in theatres in New England to help raise funds for the Children's Cancer Research Foundation, the local industry's charity, Arthur Lockwood, general chairman of the campaign, reports.

The trailer, entitled, "The Wonderful Ones," starring Loretta Young, was produced by Hy Fine at the Republic Coast studio.

Meanwhile, Ben Domingo of the RKO Keith Memorial Theatre; Dan Finn of the B. and Q. Theatres Association, and Edward Cantor of American Theatres Corp., have been appointed theatre chairmen for the Boston campaign.

Dates Sept. 1-14

The official dates of the drive are September 1-14, but many theatre chairmen and salesmen throughout New England have already begun activities.

Although collection in theatres will not begin until the last week in August, Ben Rosenwald, of M-G-M, and Hatton Taylor, of RKO Radio, chairman and co-chairman of the salesmen's drive unit, have thus far secured more than 600 pledges from exhibitors throughout New England to take up audience collections.

"We have, in the past, been almost defenseless in our attitude toward vicious attacks from all quarters, but perhaps this latest outrage will spur our industry to the offensive rather than a passive defensive policy which seemed to have governed us in the past."
